School levy will drop with budget

By Sam Dieter

Colby Free Press sdieter@nwkansas.com

The Colby School board voted ing year at its monthly meeting Monday night.

The board will have a final hearing on the $13,779,763 budget in August before the final approval. Business Manager Jo DeYoung said the tax levy will go down from about 48 mills to about 47.7 mills this year.

The board also approved the year-end transfers for cash balances for the end of the last year. Similar to what was discussed in June, all the leftover money in the general fund will be transferred, with See "SCHOOL," Page 2 $25,317 going into the vocational education fund and $100,000 into the at-risk fund. From the supplemental general fund, $200,000 will be transferred, half into speto publish its budget for the com- cial education and half into food service. The school district ended the fiscal year with a balance of $2,493,386, $90,859 in encumbrances and $2,402,527 in unencumbered money.

In other business, the board:

• Voted to set up petty cash and activity funds for the school district, and to allow the district to pay some bills before the board approves them.

 Voted to use Farmers and Merchants Bank, Sunflower Bank,

Among the goals set for the strategic plan, the college planned to increase enrollment by two percent over the prior year. For fund raising, the college wanted to raise $300,000 per year for five year. The assessment does not show that any money was raised from 2012 to 2013, but it had raised $1 million by last year. During the 2012-2013 year, the college planned to enroll students in 33,440 credit hours, but only made it to 31,976 credit hours. The college was still short last school year, having enrolled students in 30,485 credit hours, while the target was 32,616.

Spoonfuls can lead to medicine errors

By Lindsey Tanner

AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - The song says a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down, but a study says that kind of imprecise measurement can lead to potentially dangerous dosing mistakes.

The results, published online in Pediatrics, underscore recommendations that droppers and syringes that measure in milliliters be used for liquid medicines – not spoons.

The study involved nearly 300 parents, mostly Hispanics, with children younger than 9 years old. The youngsters were treated for various illnesses at two New York City emergency rooms and sent home with prescriptions for liquid medicines, mostly antibiotics.

Parents were contacted afterward and asked by phone how they had measured the prescribed doses. They also brought their measuring devices to the researchers' offices to demonstrate doses they'd given their kids.

Parents who used spoonfuls "were 50 percent more likely to give their children incorrect doses than those who measured in more precise milliliter units," said Dr. Alan Mendelsohn, a co-author and associate professor at New York University's medical school.

Incorrect doses included giving too much and too little, which can both be dangerous, he said. Underdosing may not adequately treat an illness and can lead to medication-resistant infections, while overdoses may cause illness or side effects that can be lifethreatening. The study doesn't include information on any ill effects from dosing mistakes.

Almost one-third of the parents gave the wrong dose and 1 in 6 used a kitchen spoon rather than a device like an oral syringe or dropper that lists doses in milliliters.

Less than half the prescriptions specified doses in milliliters. But even when they did, the medicine bottle label often listed doses in teaspoons. Parents often assume that means any similar-sized kitchen spoon, the authors said.

"Outreach to pharmacists and other health professionals is needed to promote the consistent use of milliliter units between prescriptions and bottle labels," the authors said.

The Sorghum Checkoff, in collaboration with NuSeed/MMR Genetics and the Agricultural Research Service, recently completed a five-year project to help broaden the pool of available sorghum genetics.

Sorghum Checkoff Crop Improvement Director Justin Weinheimer said the project, "Reinstated Sorghum Conversion Program," was designed to make new sorghum genetic material available to research and breeding programs to enhance diversity.

"Advancements ... such as yield, standability and drought tolerance, remain a top priority of U.S. sorghum farmers," Weinheimer said. "This project provides untapped sorghum genetic resources....

MMR Genetics Investigator Fred Miller said these new opportunities will result in significant and major crop improvements in into established programs. "While traditional methods were used to develop this material," said Bob Klein, Research Service geneticist, "we also used NexGen DNA sequencing technology to shorten the time " Weinheimer said 144 new sources of sorghum genetics were released to breeding programs. Fifteen research programs are incorporating it into their programs. "The results of this project are directly tied to making more productive hybrids, which in turn results in higher profitability for producers," Weinheimer said.

Prairie chicken plan misguided

Gov. Sam Brownback's plan for the state to raise and release lesser prairie chickens didn't help his argument that Kansas should be trusted to protect the threatened species. It's hard to be taken seriously when scientists are laughing.

The plan, which Brownback announced last week, was quickly dismissed and mocked by biologists. And for good reason.

In addition to being costly to raise lesser prairie chickens in captivity, very few of them survive when released into the wild.

"There are numerous studies all over the country, with different research techniques, that all come to that same conclusion: It just doesn't work," said Randy Rodgers, a retired biologist with the Kansas Department of Wildlife, Parks and Tourism.

Brownback is correct to be concerned about the the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's decision earlier this year to list the lesser prairie chicken as a threatened species. Though the agency invoked a special exception in the Endangered Species Act to allow Kansas to proceed with an already planned fivestate conservation plan, many agriculture and energy experts still worry that the listing could bring costly restrictions on land use that could harm the Kansas economy.

That worry is understandable, given the regulatory uncertainty. However, mitigators who help landowners and oil companies work around the regulations also may be exaggerating some of the concern to generate business. Conservationists contend that there are so many exemptions that the threatenedspecies listing is mostly meaningless.

"It's almost impossible to conceive how someone could violate the rule other than by deliberately going out and shooting a chicken," said Jason Rylander, a staff attorney for Defenders of Wildlife, one of three environmental groups that are suing for more aggressive protections of the birds.

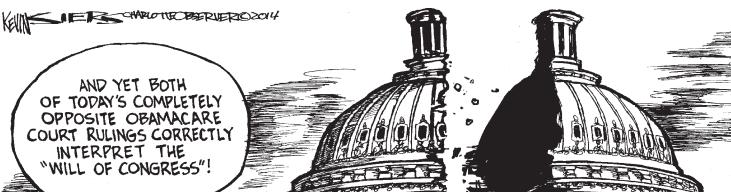

Brownback is also correct that federal agencies are working against one another. One reason for the drop in lesser prairie chickens is a loss of habitat. And one reason for that is reductions in the federal Conservation Reserve Program, which pays landowners to place environmentally sensitive acreage out of production. A better approach to protecting threatened species is through programs such as CRP, Brownback has argued, not more regulations.

Brownback also correctly notes that the other big reason for the population decline is the drought – which is beyond anyone's control. "When the drought ends, the population will rebound," he said.

In fact, estimates of the bird's population increased 20 percent this year, thanks to increased rain that improved habitat.

Brownback is on target with many of his comments and concerns about the threatened-species listing and potential federal intervention. But his plan to raise and release prairie chickens is for the birds.

Big data the next big deal in farming

Some believe "big data" may be the next renaissance in agriculture. Others call it the greatest advance in agriculture since the Green Revolution during the 1940s, '50s and '60s when one of the biggest waves of research and technology spurred the growth of agricultural production around the world. Some compare big data with the biotech revolution.

High praise, but still so many questions remain about big data. Pressing questions facing farmers now are who owns this big data?

Who controls it and how will it be used?

And if you don't know what big data is join the crowd, there are countless people who don't know or have multiple and diverse answers.

Not to alarm anyone, but less than a year ago, few people had heard this buzz word that means gathering and analyzing the vast amount of digital information produced by farmers.

Drones flying above farm land recording high resolution images, and field sensors providing immediate information concerning crop conditions including moisture, nutrients, pests, etc., may become commonplace during the big ag-data era.

No matter what beatitudes are bestowed on big data, most believe and hope it will improve farmers' yields and productivity. Some say it will help feed the growing population expected to hit 9 billion in 2050. Agri-business tial phase of using these new data collecting companies are banking on its future.

beneficial to profitable agriculture.

About the mid-1990s, gathering data rocketed forward as computer technology fueled the concept of precision agriculture. This only intensified with the application and interest driven by the ever-growing data infrastructure. Greater affordability of this technology coupled with more computer processing power has also fanned the usage flames.

Prescriptive planting or relating soil, climate and seed data with a farmer's productions records seems to be some of the potential of big data in agriculture. The potential for an increase in grain yields is another potential.

During the last couple years the Guettermans in Johnson County and Miami counties have used big data equipment provided by John Deere on their family farm. Nick Guetterman believes the more information he has at his disposal, the more likely he is to figure a better way to do things.

What he's most interested in during this initools is to become even more efficient, farm Successful farmers and ranchers have al- as productively as possible and increase the in real time - right now to make decisions that potentially make us better, more profitable farmers. Before we always looked at this data and analyzed it after the fact."

Opinion

But who gets that information - the farmer or the provider? Will they be prescribing what best suits their interests or those of the farmer?

Guetterman believes because he's paid for the equipment, the data should belong to him and not be shared with anyone without his knowledge and permission. He'd also like to know where and what companies collecting big ag data are doing with this information.

The Johnson/Miami County farmer says he's been told the data is not being used individually but in an aggregate format. Guetterman also believes companies selling ag- data services acknowledge farmers' concerns in their policy and marketing statements, but their contracts don't make that explicit,

"A farmer makes decisions based on his own experience and expertise, supplemented with his own data," Guetterman says "That's how I produce value as a manager."

Some producers also worry the proliferation of ag data will erode the advantages producers have developed throughout several generations. Farmers like Guetterman also harbor real concerns about data privacy. That's the world today's farmers live in. Stay tuned.

Forgiveness carries forward

Isaac's little 4-year-old granddaughter came Other running to him, filthy from toe to brow. He pulled her onto his lap and wiped some mud from her face. Her beautiful blond hair was so full of dirt that it looked almost brown.

'Grandpa, me make mud pies," she said.

In an instant, he felt tears coming to his eyes. His little granddaughter's voice, her filthy appearance and the mention of mud pies, all combined to bring back a memory with such force that he wasn't prepared for it.

He had lived in a small town in France at the time of Hitler's army's invasion. The men of the whole region quickly formed an underground resistance to the German army. They did whatever they could to thwart the Germans' efforts. During one of their missions to destroy some of the enemies supplies, some German soldiers had been killed.

The German commanding officer decided to take revenge, and chose Isaac's hometown to pay the price. While Isaac and other men were away helping with the resistance, they got the word. He and the other men of his town rushed home. They learned from the few survivors that the women and children had gathered in the church where they thought they would be safe. The men and boys who were still left in the town were rounded up by the Germans and gunned down in the town square. Then the Germans blocked the doors of the church and burned it to the ground with the women and children inside.

Isaac found out that his wife and his children

Opinions

Daris Howard Life's Outtakes

had all been killed. He had felt a hatred build in him that ate at his whole being. He felt a desire for revenge to kill every German he could find. He and the men that had lost their families joined the Allied army that landed at Normandy, and they fought to push the Germans out of France, and then continued fighting on across Europe.

The men who had lost their families were ferocious fighters. Since they had no one to return home to, they fearlessly risked their lives at every turn. As the war wound down and they marched into Berlin, Isaac wondered what he would do with his life when the war was over, because all he lived for was for vengeance on his enemies.

Then, one day, he saw a little 4-year-old German girl. She was thin, filthy and looked to be making mud pies. But after she finished making them, she started to eat them, and he realized how hungry she was.

That night, as he was eating his small rations, he set them down for just a moment, and someone grabbed them. With lightning reflexes, Isaac grabbed the person's wrist and turned to look at the would-be thief. In the dimming light, he saw the blond hair of a German, and that was all he needed. He pulled out his revolver. But as he raised it, the fearful cry of a child caused him to look deeper, and he realized it was the same girl he had seen earlier.

As he gazed into her frightened eyes, he thought of his own little daughter. At the time his daughter had been killed, she had been about the age of this little girl. The anger and hatred raged in him and fought against feelings of tenderness for this child. But finally, the slightest bit of compassion emerged in his heart. As he continued to hold her wrist to keep her from fleeing, he put his gun away, and reached for the food she had dropped. He picked it up and held it out to her. She carefully took it, and when he let go of her, she darted away, taking the food with her.

For the first time, he thought about he was doing, and felt the unmistakable understanding that two wrongs do not make a right. Destroying others for having had his own family killed would not bring them back.

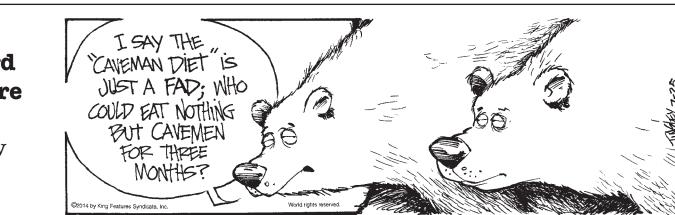

He realized that if he was ever to find any peace in his life, he was going to have to learn to forgive.

Dear Heloise: I am going to have a baby, and I keep hearing about Latch and car seats. I am a little confused. Can you explain it? - Erica in Texas

"LATCH" stands for "Lower Anchors and Tethers for Children." It is required for most cars manufactured after 2002. In cars with the Latch system, there are lower anchors in the back-seat cushions. (They are small metal bars that you should be able to feel when you stick your fingers between the seats.) There also are top anchors behind the back seat or on the back dash. These anchors can be used when installing a car seat instead of seat belts.

New car seats come equipped with straps to attach to the Latch system. If you use the Latch system when installing a child car seat, be sure to read the instruction manual and your car's owners manual.

If you are unsure about the installation of your car seat, have it inspected. You can go to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's website, www.NHTSA.gov, to locate an inspection site near you. - Heloise

Editor's note: The Thomas County Sheriff's Office can also help you install car seats. Call 460-4570 or stop in the Law Enforcement Center to make an appointment.

KIDDIE POOL

Dear Heloise: I bought a plastic kiddie pool for my kids to use this summer. When it is full of water, it is really heavy to turn over to empty. My father-in-law had a brilliant idea. He drilled a hole in it and got a rubber stopper to fit. When the kids are done playing, all I do is remove the stopper, and the pool drains without having to kill my back to turn it over. - C.S. in Texas

MANUAL MAGIC

Dear Heloise: I would like to share my solution to misplacing owners manuals. I purchased a three-ring binder and clear plastic reusable sheets. I place the manuals in plastic sleeves in the binder. Now if I ever need to look at the manual for a particular item, they all are in one binder. - Donna G., West Memphis, Ark.

Test Your Plav

1. Win the club with the ace, ruff a club, lead a heart to the king and ruff another club. Now play a heart to the ace and ruff the nine of clubs. By this time, if everything has gone smoothly, you will have six tricks in the bank as well as the K-Q of trumps facing the A-J-10. You then lead your last heart toward dummy's 10-6.

Regardless of which opponent wins the trick or what he returns, you can't be stopped from over-22 taking the spade queen with the ace and ruffing 24 H dummy's last heart with the king to bring you to 10 tricks. Your tricks consist of the A-K of hearts 25 and a heart ruff, the ace of clubs and three club 29 ruffs, plus dummy's A-J-10 of trumps.

2. To give yourself the best chance for the contract, say a silent prayer and then bravely go up with dummy's king of hearts!

Playing the king instead of the five from this combination is certainly unusual. If your sole 32 F purpose was to ensure a heart trick, you could easily accomplish it by playing low from dummy. Sooner or later you'd score a heart trick regard-34 L less of where the ace or queen was located.

But here the problem is to make three notrump, and assuring a heart trick is not the primary consideration. And to make three notrump, you need to get to dummy to take a club finesse.

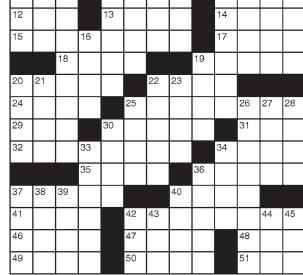

It's true that if the king loses to the ace, you'll be in terrible trouble, but even so, the fact remains that playing the five is a give-up play. South would presumably produce a medium-sized heart or the queen, and with no entry to dummy for the club finesse, you'd be virtually conceding defeat.

If the king holds, though, your chances of getting home safely rise considerably. All you have to do now is to finesse the nine of clubs successfully. If it wins, you then lead the jack and repeat the finesse. This sequence of plays in the club suit will enable you to score four club tricks even if South has the K-x-x-(x) of clubs, while leading the jack first will yield only three tricks against the same holding.

Crazy 10-run Colby rally dusts out Norton

By R.B. Headley

Colby Free Press rbheadley@nwkansas.com

Umpires dodged post-game questions a lot easier than Norton could avoid the Colby Sluggers' 10-run rally and 13-12 playoff victory Thursday afternoon.

"I don't have time. I have another game to work," one ump explained about the decision to reverse a Norton "trick" pickoff play during this Zone 7 elimination game at Colby. "Go up to the crow's nest (scorers box) and ask them."

There were no answers hatching in the crow's nest, despite a determined egg hunt through one nearby Legion baseball rulebook.

"Show me the ball" rule should be added for unfairly deceiving a runner. At least that was the best explanation uttered many times on Thursday.

Basically, Norton's first baseman was a bad boy for leaping and acting like the pickoff throw sailed over his head — then tagging out Colby's Austin Boehme inches from first base.

Boehme was originally sent back to the dugout, but ensuing coach's questions and umpire discussions decided the Slugger could return.

Not only did Boehme promptly take second base on a wild pitch, Norton's pitcher balked him over to third.

Casey Quagliano followed with a sharp two-out single, Boehme motored home and Colby's fantastic comeback was underway.

Yet it took far more than one disputed play to plate those next seven Slugger season-saving runs. First, pitcher Quagliano had to throw four scoreless innings after a disastrous eight-run Norton third.

Every wind-blown pop fly and looping liner eluded Colby fielders as Norton started a seemingly endless parade around the bases. The trouble didn't end until Josh Matchell made a running, sliding catch in shallow center field.

"Yeah, the wind was pretty tough, but we've played in wind like that before," Sluggers coach Brian Quagliano said. "Those first three innings, we just weren't ready to play. Then Casey started to overthrow and couldn't command things. The tires were coming off the wagon."

"But we didn't panic. We just his throw turned into an out-ofhad to take it one hit at a time," control parachutist sailing far becoach added with an old cliche yond any intended target. that wasn't just hot air. "We told throw his game, and he did."

Still trailing 12-5, Casey calmly worked a three up-three down Norton fourth featuring two strikeouts.

Meanwhile, Slugger batters made another simple-yet-super adjustment - forget about the wind and just start hitting line drives.

Ben Matchell sizzled a sharp grounder at Norton's shortstop, and the ball went right through while big brother Josh Matchell dashed home to make it 12-6.

Austin Hart's RBI-sacrifice fly soon scored Ben because nothing less than the swiftest throw had a chance against this Colby Eagle football game-breaker (kick returns will soon be here again).

However, the Sluggers hadn't faced their last staggering setback. Casey crushed another shot into center just as teammate Hart broke from second base.

The wind held up this drive long enough for Norton's center fielder to catch, and then make a quick throw that beat Hart back into second for an inning-ending double play.

Ouch. With a five-run lead and only six outs remaining, Norton still seemed destined to survive into Thursday's second elimination game.

Or not.

"We'd seen this Norton pitcher many times and rocked him pretty good before," coach Quagliano said. "We knew we could still do it, if we took the right approach."

Plus all the pressure was now shifting to Norton's gloves, who appeared ready for a rest on this wonderful 100-degree windy day.

Matt Barnum and Brady Holzmeister both reached safely to start Colby's sixth - although Norton's shorstop had a force play at second until he left the base and decided tagging Barnum was his better option.

No outs is never a good defensive option.

Norton's easy victory. Yet after discussions with coaches from both teams (below right), the umpires ruled Norton had illegally deceived Boehme and allowed him to resume his position at first base. Boehme later scored on a two-out hit.

Sluggers clobber Oakley in late elimination game

By R.B. Headley

Colby Free Press rbheadley@nwkansas.com

While Colby's top pitcher was getting his wisdom teeth pulled, another Slugger hurler clearly seemed ready to bite into the next survivor's test awaiting him.

"I'm going to go home and getting something to eat," Austin Boehme happily announced just hours before his first Zone 7 playoff start on the pitcher's mound.

Boehme was clearly pleased this was a between-games meal rather than the season's last supper. He'd just rumbled home with the winning run of a 13-12 comeback win over Norton Thursday afternoon.

Both Boehme and the Sluggers clearly had enough fuel to avoid any similiar drama late Thursday evening. He pitched four strong innings while an 11-run opening frame secured Colby's 16-5 elimination of Oakley.

The Sluggers took another step to next week's state tournament, where leading triples hitter and most experience pitcher Luke Cox will likely rejoin them.

Cox was reportedly getting his wisdom teeth pulled on Thursday and won't be playing anymore in the Zone tourney at Colby.

"We're missing Luke for sure, but we will get him back for state," coach Brian Quagliano confirmed. "Our goal was to get to tomorrow (Friday) and eventually get there."

Boehme's fastball was getting to catcher Austin Hart's glove faster than most Oakley batters R.B. HEADLEY/Colby Free Press

The Zone 7 Legion baseball tournament field was cut in half on Thursday at Colby.

Only three contenders remain after these three contests:

Colby 13, Norton 12. Norton eliminated. Oakley 13, Plainville 8 Plainville eliminated. Colby 16, Oakley 5 Oakley eliminated.

Now the Colby Sluggers (13-13 record overall) and Goodland Sluggers collide to decide who will challenge Ellis for this automatic state tournament berth.

Ellis remained unbeaten after two impressive Wednesday night victories: 13-0 over Plainville and 15-7 against Goodland.

Plainville had surprised Colby, 11-10, just one night earlier but lost its next two contests.

Ellis must lose twice to not claim the Zone 7 championship.

After tonight's 6 p.m. Colby-Goodland contest, the winner will play Ellis with first pitch tentatively set for 8 p.m.

If Ellis would lose, a second tournament title game would take place at 10 a.m. on Saturday.

Trojan men's hoops set golf tourney date

Coach Rusty Grafel announced scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. the annual Colby Community College Men's Basketball Golf Tournament will be played on Friday, Aug. 22.

Registration for the four-person scramble fundraiser is 9 a.m. with a 10 a.m. shotgun start.

Entry fee per team is $280 which includes supper.

The meal alone is $25. Please call Grafel at (785) 475-8360 to make arrangements.

Both the meal and auction are rusty.grafel@colbycc.edu.

Limited golf carts will also be available. Golfers should also arrange those in advance.

To reserve your spot, please send check and registration form to Rusy Grafel at 1225 South Range Ave., Colby, Kan., 67701.

All checks should be made to Colby Community College men's basketball.
