

Cub Scouts salute flag

Cub Scouts from Pack 142 presented the American Flag and led Wheat Ridge Acres Retirement Center residents in the Pledge of Allegiance on Flag Day, June 14. Scouts Jacob Stasser (back to camera) and Alec Gonzales (next to flag), both 9, saluted as they repeated the pledge. Other Cubs who helped were Brock Butts, 9, and Jonathan Stevens, 11. Cubmaster Cindy Butts introduced the boys, noting that she is the den mother for the Bear Scouts. After the pledge, the four Scouts presented a few skits to entertain the residents.

GRANTS, from Page 1

She said the business grants go to the Goodland Grind and Gallery at 1530 Main to help put in a courtyard-style patio on the north side of the coffeehouse, and for awnings in front of Pioneer Health at 910 Main. The businesses will be matching the $1,500 economic development grants with a total of $5,500.

McMinn said when the projects are completed and documented, the project grants will be paid out.

"I think with the high volume of applicants we look at doing another round of grants later this year," she added.

Two other projects have been in the development stages, McMinn said, and both are ready to move onto the next level.

A "We Have Jobs" center in the development office is ready to run, she said. Computers are linked to other job sites so people can search for jobs both here and outside the area.

She said the Workforce Center had a $3,000 budget, but so far about $300 has been spent. She said the computers were donated and S&T Communications helped get them installed and setup.

Council member Nancy Cole of Klip 'n Kurl asked if the job listings are on the council's web site.

McMinn said the listing is available at www.gogoodlands.com. By clicking on "jobs," people see the jobs listed and businesses can add and delete listings online. She said the next step is to advertise to let business people and those looking for jobs know the service is available.

She said besides looking for jobs, people can use the center to do some research about employment and develop a resume.

McMinn said the other project she would like to see move forward is to set up meetings with the home-based businesses and then continue on to Main Street, Business U.S. 24 and K-27.

Council Chairman Don Newell said he thought it was a great idea to get home-based businesses involved, and they could encourage people who have home-based businesses to expand and possibly open Main Street locations.

"We want these people to know what economic development can provide," McMinn said. "This can be a joint effort with the Chamber to get these people involved."

"We want to get the state people involved in the meetings to give them a chance to explain what services might be available to help grow these important businesses in our community."

Council member Harlan House, area farmer and cattleman, said he was not sure about spending $4,000 for the meetings. Cole asked why not try one big meeting with all the businesses?

"I think you need to start with separate meetings," McMinn said, "partly to gain the confidence of these people and to let them look at the similar problems they may have. Maybe later you can pull them all together, but there are more than 100 home-based businesses. I don't think you would get the participation if they were all at the same meeting."

House said he felt $1,000 was enough to start the meetings. Slough seconded the motion and it passed.

Barrel hangar lease OK'd

Hevner, managed the airport from 1946 to 1966.

Hill had Neufeld inspect the hangar and provide a list of things that would have to be repaired to make the building usable, and that information was given to Topliff a few months ago.

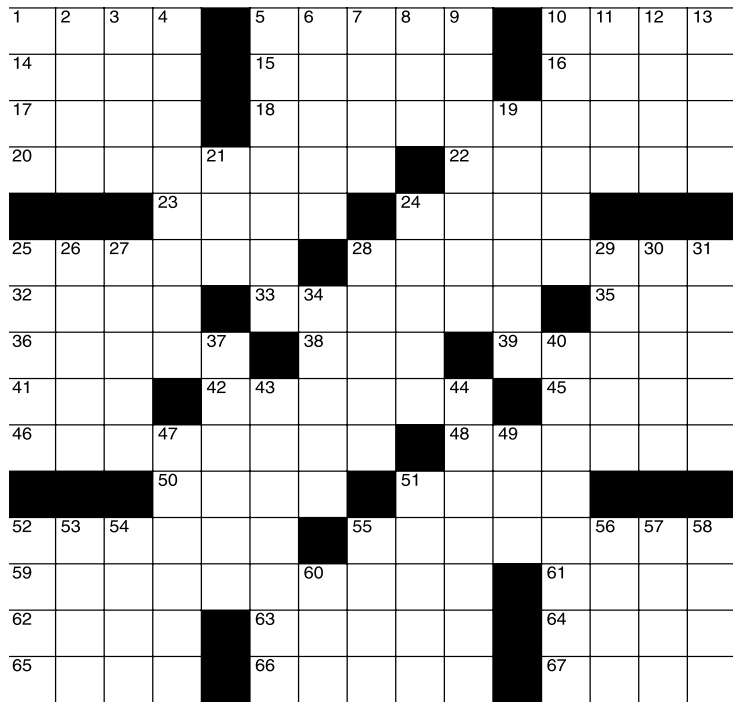

Topliff said the first thing he would do is tear off the roof and fix the purlins, a horizontal board spanning beams to support the roof deck. He did not know if the new roof would be rubber or metal.

He said he wants to fix up the building enough to avoid condemnation, and then the wiring will have to be redone so power can be restored.

He said he hopes to repaint the building to what it looked like after World War II.

Commissioner Dave Daniels moved to have Hill get with City Attorney Jeff Mason and set up a lease agreement.
