$288,000 for the ewaste program. She said each of the seven counties is different on their programs, but all funnel their collections to the recycling center in Colby. She said the organization has a truck and trailer to go to the county centers and pickup recyclables and haul to Colby. St. Francis has a building to collect recyclables while Thomas County has bins set up in Colby and two mobile trailers in Rexford and Brewster. Commissioner Chuck Thomas, who lives near Edson said he uses the one in Brewster since it is close. Commissioner Mitch Tiede said he wondered if people got things in the right bins. Thomas said he finds the plastic somewhat confusing a times trying to find the little number on the bottom of each container to determine if it is a 1 or 2.

"You have to look on the bottom and sometimes it is hard to find," Koon said. She said the organization takes the full bins off the trailers and replaces them with empty ones and hauls the full ones to Colby where they have a baler. Thomas asked if one collection point would be enough for a city the size of Goodland. Koon said that would be up to the city and county to determine. Jensen said each county is asked to pay $1 per county resident based on the 2000 census to be a member of the regional recycling group. He said the organization is considering asking each county to consider an additional $1 to balance the budget this year. "We are not sure we will have to do this, but we are slower at getting the money in and the material delivered this year," Jensen said. "You are getting $1 but are looking at increasing to $2," Tiede said.

"We are a bit nervous about balancing our budget," Jensen said. "We would like to know what the future holds on recyclables." "Would we be responsible for getting it to Colby," Tiede asked. "We would pick up what you have," Jensen said, "but you would have to do some up front costs for the Gaylord boxes to collect the materials in." "We do not tell you how to run your program," Koon said, "but how to sort what we get." Jensen said the organization had people from Sherman County ask about bringing recyclables over to Thomas County and that is part of why they had come to talk to the commissioners. Thomas said the county would look the program over, and consider the program. Tiede said he agreed it was worth looking at and thanked Koon, Jensen and Nemecheck for making the presentation.
