Tomato hornworms make appearance

By Kay Melia

vkmelia@yahoo.com Let's see now.....so far this gardening year, I've had visits of excessive heat, strong winds, light hail, three cloudbursts, heavy frost, grasshoppers, amaranth-type pig weeds, puncture vines, hen-bit, zucchini, leafy spurge, deer and aphids. And now comes those delightful little dudes known as tomato hornworms.

Sounds like a pretty normal summer, doesn't it? I would bet that every gardener reading this, and some who aren't, have experienced many of the same calamities. That's just the way it is when you choose to commune with nature by dropping only then does our heart beat with joy and our taste buds go nuts! Just getting to that point makes it all worthwhile.

But tomato hornworms!! Is there anything in the garden as ugly? Squash bugs, perhaps. But hornworms will desecrate a tomato vine quicker than you can say New York Yankees. And many times they can be difficult to locate because they eat, which happens to be just about every leaf on the vine. When you see a tomato plant branch that has had it's leaves eaten off, just follow the trail. You'll always find that big fat sucker. I dispose of them by carefully plucking them from the vine. (Very carefully or you'll squish yourself with a bit of green slime, which actually won't hurt you). I then dig a small hole in the ground, deposit that bad boy, and cover with several inches of your best garden soil. I then proceed to tromp on the soil a few times. Then, go out again tomorrow, and the next day and everyday until the first frost to see if there are others hanging around. If you find others, consider wearing gloves and a long sleeve shirt when you pluck them from the vine!

Bermuda grass can be controlled

Bermuda grass is an invasive, warmseason grass. Warmseason grasses like the common bermuda grass we see around here green up later than cool-season grasses such as tall fescue and Kentucky bluegrass. They also go dormant earlier in the fall, which when mixed into a cool season lawn can make the lawn unattractive. Bermuda that invades a cool-season lawn will be brown during much of the spring and fall while the rest of the lawn is green. It is much more drought and heat resistant than coolseason grasses. So, it will take over a cool-season lawn during the summer months if it is in full sun.

How do you control bermuda grass that has invaded a cool-season lawn? Research conducted in 1996 showed that glyphosate (Round-up, Kleen-up, Killzall, Kleeraway) is the best herbicide for the job. Glyphosate is a nonselective herbicide and will kill everything, including tall fescue or Kentucky bluegrass. You will need to reseed treated areas. In the K-State study, they applied a 2% solution of glyphosate on July 15 and again on August 15 on a bermuda grass plot that was more than 15 years old. Over one year later, they saw no regrowth.

Glyphosate works best if bermuda is growing well. The better the bermuda grass is growing, the more chemical is taken up and pushed into the roots. Water and fertilize if needed to get it going.

Spray about the middle of this month (or when the bermuda is growing well) and again about a month later if there is any green left in the bermuda grass. Use glyphosate (2% solution). Wait two more weeks and reseed. It may also be helpful to scalp (mow as low as possible and remove clippings) the lawn two weeks after the first application so that dead grass does not prevent the glyphosate from reaching the recovering bermuda.
