

2012 Flatlander Festival draws crowds

The many activities at the Flatlander Festival proved a big draw again this year. Vendor booths included several from Northwest Kansas Technical College, such as the Cosmetology Department's booth (above), which included face painting. The scruffy dog contest (right) draws a lot of spectators as well as contestants. The Motorcycle Skills Demonstration (bottom right) wowed spectators with precision driving. The Brick Top Cruisers Car Show (bottom left) at the south end of Main Street is one of the main attractions. Something new this year was the burnout pit (below) in the parking lot of The Basement on 17th Street. People were allowed to bring in their cars and try to make as much smoke as they could with their tires. Several owners, who had spares on hand, blew out their tires. The ending event on Sunday was the Picnic in the Park (left) at Chambers Park.

Photos by Kevin Bottrell, Pat Schiefen and Sheila Smith
The Goodland Star-News

