

Group makes own effects

If you enjoy male a cappella groups, and you've probably heard several, you will find yourself breathless when you hear Home Free at 6:30 p.m. (Mountain Time) on Friday, Oct. 19 at the Oakley High School Auditorium. Their performance is part of the current 2012-2013 concert season presented by the Western Plains Arts Association.

While Home Free has singers like other a cappella groups, and produces percussive effects with their own voices and microphones, they are carving new ground, expanding their audience's horizons, and introducing their own unique flavor to the musical world. Their genre of music is an expansive mix ranging from pop songs to classical and even techno...all successfully done with only the human voice, microphones and state of the art sound systems. However, their music is put to the explosive beats of one of the most exciting vocal percussionists in the a cappella scene. This specialist's name is Adam Rupp, and in concerts will be featured as a vocal percussionist soloist. Other members of Home Free include Adams' brother Chris Rupp, Chris Foss and Matt Atwood, plus one or two additional backup singers who join in when needed.

Home Free has performed for a diverse clientele, ranging from the Minnesota Vikings to the Mall of America, as well as concerts at universities, schools and of course, concert series on Allied tour in recent seasons. Home Free is doing what they love and are anxious to see a great and exciting audience for their performance in Oakley.

Admission is by season ticket or at the door, adults, $20; students kindergarten through 12, $10.
