

Need to do some planning on cleaning up

As gardeners, many of us spend quite a bit of time about now thinking about next year. If we don't, we should. Planning for the next growing season is extremely important to your yard and garden as we all search for significant improvement in the things we do.

But please allow me to visit with you about a different kind of project that we must face head-on right now. We should do some serious planning about how to clean up and generally prepare the machinery we have used all summer, for a comfortable winter's nap.

Mowers immediately come to mind. We will continue to use them for awhile longer on our bluegrass lawns, but will soon park them for the winter. So, when you're through with them for the season, you may want to load them (it) in the trailer or pickup and head down to your favorite lawn serviceman or mechanic and have the blades sharpened. As a general rule, mower blades need sharpened after about every 10 hours of use. If you are not equipped to do it, check it in with someone who does that kind of work for a living. He may discover that the blade should be replaced.

While this efficient young fellow has your mower in his shop, ask him kindly to drain the gas tank, drain the oil, replace or clean the oil and air filter, and install a new spark plug.

Also suggest to him that before you pick it up, you would like him to go over it, underneath and on top, with his power washer so as to remove all vestiges of gunk that detract from the general health of this expensive piece of equipment. After it arrives back home, all clean and shiny, store it in a clean, dry, dark place (just like your onions) and allow it to rest comfortably for the winter. When spring arrives, your mower will practically jump out of storage in gratitude to you for providing for it's winter comfort.

After you have given your garden plot a deep plowing with your rototiller, allow that same friendly serviceman to whip it into shape for winter storage, just like he did with your mower(s).

If you feel comfortable doing all this work yourself in an efficient manner out there in your garage, then do it. But always keep in mind that your motorized garden equipment is the most expensive tools in your possession, and should be given top priority when it comes to proper upkeep.

There's more. Sharpen your hoes. Both of 'em. Put a good edge on them, and tighten up the handles if you can. There may be a shovel or two out there that could use the same treatment.

Finally, stretch out your entire footage of garden hose, as well as soaker hose, and turn on the water. Check for leaks and worn out connectors. Repair them now, and put them away for a long nap.

Sounds like a wonderful idea! See you next week.

Smartboards help to make long-range plans

In my office, I put up a year's worth of month white boards, white boards for my goals, and white boards for lists. I got the idea on Pinterest and love it so much that I wanted to share it with you.

While I've used planners for years, having everything on the wall in front of me has been very eye opening. Rather than looking at a day, week or month at a time, I get a big picture view of what I'm doing and plan to do. I see how close Christmas is and how much time I have to prepare for that class. I see clearly where I've been intentional about my time and where I haven't. Maybe it's because I'm getting ready to turn another year older or maybe it's because I'm regularly reminded how short life is, but I've been working on living more intentionally. If you've been feeling the same way, try a wall of white boards. I love it!
