PUBLIC NOTICE

*Without public notices in

Public notice is your right to know about the issues that directly affect your life. And, you can easily find public notices in your local newspaper. Without public notices in the newspaper, you're left to guess about what the government is doing in your community and how elected officials are spending your tax dollars.

Your local newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. After all, it shouldn't be your responsibility to know how to look ... where to look ... when to look ... and even what to look for in order to be informed about public information. It is the government's responsibility to notify you of public information, and your local newspaper is the most accessible place to find it.

HEALTHY

Work is a huge part of who we are. It forms part of our identity, it keeps us busy and it provides for our families. In preparation for the upcoming Smithsonian exhibit "The Way We Worked" at the High Plains Museum, we would like to share a series of local work stories.

Over the 125 years of work developing Goodland, there have been many types of jobs that have helped make Goodland a community of choice. The work of Sarah Linton, the registered dietician at the Goodland Regional Medical Center, is a fine example of that work tradition.

Linton's first job was in Colorado, but she and her family were traveling back to Goodland so much that she and her husband starting looking in Goodland for jobs. An opportunity arose for her at the hospital and another for her husband at the First National Bank. They had wanted to return to Goodland to raise their family and these positions made that possible.

Linton works every Tuesday and as needed for consultations and special meetings. The services she offers are diabetes education - which includes teaching how to take an insulin shot and testing blood sugar - general weight loss advice and counseling. She also assists the hospital kitchen manager in overseeing the kitchen.

As a dietician, Linton loves working in the medical field without the trauma aspect of medical work. She loves the flexibility and scheduling of her work, which allows her to do the two things she loves: working part time as a dietician and raising her family. Her favorite part of her work is the one on one contact with the patients, and a particularly rewarding aspect of her job is working with diabetes patients.

Sarah Linton is an individual who is not only making Goodland a community of choice but came to her community out of a family choice. Among all the wonderful things Goodland has, it also has the Goodland Regional Medical Center which as Linton said, "has a lot of caring people working at the hospital and has a great variety of services to offer our community." Some services she says are offered but the community does not know they exist until they use it. To find out more about these services or to schedule an appointment call the Goodland Regional Medical Center at 890-3625.

Look for more articles in their series about the way Goodland folks work. Tell us your own work story and mark Saturday, Dec. 15, on your calendar to see how Americans have worked over the decades at "The Way We Worked" Smithsonian exhibit. "The Way We Worked" Kansas tour is sponsored by the Kansas Humanities Council in partnership with the Smithsonian Institution's Museum on Main Street program. Support for "The Way We Worked" Kansas tour has been provided by the Ross and Marianna Beach Foundation, the Western Kansas Community Foundation, and Jostens. Support for Museum on Main Street has been provided by the United States Congress.
