ages 10 to 15 to participate in a youth hunt at 8 a.m. Saturday, March 2.

Julie Crow, one of the organizers, said they limit the hunt to 35 youths, so it is a good idea to register early. To register call Melvin Crow at 821-2607 or 899-2778, or call Jason Artzer at 821-2317.

The hunt will take place on land owned by Melba Curry at County Roads 67 and 17.

Excel excellent financial management tool

Microsoft Excel is an excellent financial management tool. Once you learn some of the basic functions and formulas, you can create numerous spread sheets to help manage your business. A loan amortization schedule is simple to create and allows you to instantly see what extra payments can do to your loan. Another helpful spreadsheet you can create is a cash flow statement.

Many business owners learn the hard way that income and cash flow are not the same. A cash flow spreadsheet can help you predict cash shortages and plan accordingly.

Learning how to use tools such as Microsoft Excel takes time, but the benefits far outweigh the costs.

Heating help now available

Applications for the Low Income five $2,926 and $429 for each ad-Energy Assistance Program will be accepted until Friday, March 29, by the Kansas Department for Children and Families.

The program provides an annual benefit to help qualifying households pay winter heating bills. Individuals with disabilities, elderly person and families with children are the primary groups helped. An average of $520.81 was paid to 53,683 households in 2012.

To qualify, applicants must be responsible for direct payment of their heating bills. Income eligibility guidelines are set at 130 percent of the federal poverty level. Persons with incomes within the following guideline may receive benefits. For one person with the monthly income of $1,210, two people $1,639, three $2,068, four $2,497, ditional person.

The level of benefit varies accoring to household income, number of persons living at the address, type of dwelling, type of heating fuel and utility rates. Applicants must demonstrate they have made payments on their heating utility bill two out of the last three months and those payments must be equal to or exceed $80 or the total balance due on their energy bills whichever

Applications for the program have been mailed to households who received energy assistance last year. They are also available at local Kansas Department for Children and Families or can be requested by call (800) 432-0043. Visit www.dcf. ks gov to apply online.

Focus on heart health throughout February

Each year, the month of February is filled with images celebrating Valentine's Day. The heart-focused theme doesn't have to end on the holiday, however. February is designated "American Heart Month" by the American Heart Association and has been for nearly 50 years. "A time to battle cardiovascular disease and educate Americans on what we can do to live heart-healthy lives," heart disease is the leading cause of death in the United States, equal to 2,200 deaths per day. Nicholas "dr. Nick" Yphantides, M.D., M.P.H., Medical Editor for Take Off Pounds Sensibly Club Inc., the nonprofit weight-loss support organization, offers the following recommendations to proactively promote a healthier heart – and ultimately, a better quality of life.

Signs of a Heart Attack

First, know the common signs of a heart attack and what can be done to prevent such medical emergencies. If you think you or someone you know is having a heart attack, call 9-1-1 immediately. A quick response can save your life or someone else's and prevent permanent one hour of when symptoms begin, clotting factors, such as fibrinogen. or as soon as possible.

Common symptoms of a heart attack include:

- Unusually heavy pressure on the chest that lasts more than a few minutes, or goes away and comes
- Sharp upper-body pain in the neck, back and jaw
- Severe shortness of breath Cold sweats
- Unusual or unexplained tired-• Unfamiliar dizziness or light-decisions is especially great.

Elevated cholesterol levels -There are "good" and "bad" forms of cholesterol. The body needs cholesterol, but when there is too much, the excess is deposited in arteries. This can lead to artery narrowing and heart disease. Different tests can determine your risk level and help you manage cholesterol levels.

High blood pressure – A person can have high blood pressure with no symptoms at all. When the pressure of blood in the arteries is too high, it can cause damage and be a major risk factor for heart disease. Lowering blood pressure can dramatically lower the risk of heart now to either direct deposit or the Eating habits – Dietary patterns linked to heart disease and related conditions include diets high in saturated fats and cholesterol (which raise blood cholesterol levels and promote atherosclerosis).

A sedentary life – Physical inactivity is related to the development of heart disease and can impact other risk factors, including obesity, high blood pressure, high triglycerides, a low level of HDL (good) cholesterol, and diabetes. Alcohol use – Heavy drinking leads to higher blood pressure and increases blood levels of triglycerides, which contribute to atherosclerosis.

Norton woman competing in pageant

Determined to be in the best shape of her life, Mrs. Northwest Kansas, Lori Shields of Norton, spends about an hour every day at the Norton Rec Center running three miles and working out with light weights.

"I have a couple more pounds to lose and I'm on track to be at my target weight by the Mrs. Kansas pageant (March 1-2)," she said.

Shields went on to say that she still has a lot to do before traveling to Branson, Mo., for the combined Kansas and Missouri competition.

"I have pictures to take," she said, "a page in the brochure to lay out, travel arrangements to make and I haven't even selected my gown for the evening competition yet. It's so important to find the perfect gown." The pageant provides swimsuits for each contestant, she said, but they wear their own choice of outfits for the interviews and other events.

A send-off party for all her supporters will be held Saturday, Feb.

Shields said people have been wonderful supporting her efforts. Her platform is to raise awareness of the work done at the Haven in Norton, a nonprofit she runs that provides a place for families to stay while visiting prisoners at the state prison there. She also is a full time teacher aide at Eisenhower Elementary School in Norton. She and her husband, Damien, have two children, Emmary, 2, and Darius, 8. Donations may be sent to her at 813 N. Grant Ave., Norton, Kan. 67654. Anyone who helps support her before Feb. 6 will be recognized in the official pageant brochure, she said.

Bright days ahead for state of Kansas

On Jan. 29, 1861, our state was founded on the ideals of personal freedom and individual liberty. The 152nd anniversary serves as a time to challenge all Kansans to carry on the enduring legacy of our founders.

In Washington, I often tell folks that Kansans live a special way of life. The pioneering spirit of those who settled our state more than 150 years ago and tamed the West lives on in us today. We fully embrace the words of our state's motto: "Ad astra per aspera," ... "To the stars through difficulties."

Growing up in Kansas, we learn that our family's joys are increased and our sorrows diminished when they are shared with neighbors and friends. We teach our children that there is good in every person and that satisfaction in life comes from what you do for others rather than what you do for yourself.

Kansans work hard to make a difference in our communities, state and nation. Throughout the years, Kansas has raised many talented leaders – from Eisenhower to Earhart – who have helped shape our state and nation and overcome challenging obstacles. But the story of Kansas is also one about the farmers, factory workers, teachers, business owners, parents and all the unsung heroes whose hard work has built our state's economy and reputation around the globe. We have much in our history to be proud of, and even more to look forward to.

Today, Kansas continues to set itself apart as an industry leader in many fields, some well-established in our state like aviation, and some burgeoning like research and entrepreneurship.

Aviation contributes more than $7 billion to our state's economy each year, and Kansas' reputation as the national leader in aviation manufacturing and job creation was recently solidified when Airbus Americas announced it will continue its partnership with Kansas and double its investment over the next 10 years.

Kansas has also become a leader in advancing biomedical and bioscience research. In fact, our bioscience industry has grown at a faster rate than the national sector since 2001. This growth opens the doors for new medical and technological advancements. Last summer, the University of Kansas Cancer Center achieved designation as a National Cancer Institute Cancer Center. This exclusive designation will have a lasting impact on our state's economy and a life-changing impact on Kansans for generations to come. And just last month, Kansans received good news from the Department of Homeland Security: the land transfer agreement has been signed, and the National Bio and Agro-Defense Facility (NBAF) in Manhattan is moving forward. This stateof-the-art biosecurity lab will replace our country's antiquated foreign animal research facility at Plum Island, NY, and protect us from foreign animal disease threats.

And at a time when national new business formation is near historic lows, Kansas had a record 15,008 new-business filings in 2012 according to the state's Annual Business Formation Report. This uptick in entrepreneurship bodes well for future job growth in our state. And with Southwest Airlines set to start operating five routes out of Mid-Continent Airport in Wichita starting on June 2, 2013, Kansas entrepreneurs will now have new options to connect them and their businesses to the rest of the country

Our state's leadership in these pioneering industries is forming a legacy of opportunity for the next generation. We want our children and grandchildren to have the chance to return home, put down roots and raise their own families in the communities we love.

After 152 years, Kansas has much to celebrate – from our rich heritage to our diverse industries. – Senator Jerry Moran

How animals affect travel

I really didn't think much of it when the cat took up residence on my suitcase the night before I was planning to leave for a Mexican

I brought the partially filled case downstairs on Tuesday night so that I wouldn't forget to pack my laptop computer in it the next morning. One more thing done before we had to leave at noon, I figured.

I'd have been better off if I had thought to close the suitcase, but that might not have made any difference if the cat had decided to sleep on top of the case instead of on all my neatly folded clothes.

I'm pretty sure she knew we were leaving, and that meant that she would have to go to the vet for the next week or so, and she was taking one last chance to get close to me. Or maybe she really knew that she could cause trouble by just hanging around and getting her fur and scent all over everything. Poor humans, they have such bad noses. They just never notice anything.

Whichever it was, she spent Tuesday night putting her stamp on my suitcase and I spent Thursday afternoon getting a good sniffing from a drug dog.

Wednesday, we drove to Denver. Thursday morning, we flew into San Jose del Cabo, on the tip of the Baja, with our carryons, a big suitcase and a cooler. We've been taking a cooler on our annual Mexican vacation for years in case we decide to go fishing. We weren't planning to go fishing, but you never know, and the hard-sided cooler is great for hauling coffee and spices I want to use but can't find in Mexico. I always make sure everything is sealed and that there is no fresh meat, milk, fruits or vegetables to run me afoul of the inspectors

At the Cabo airport the drug dog came by. He was a cute little thing about the size of a small beagle but the color of a dachshund. He and his handler just sort of walked along among the luggage and all the people getting their checked items off the baggage conveyor.

He made one pass through and was on his second round when he became very interested in my cooler, which was duct tapped nine ways to Sunday. The dog didn't bark or get real excited. He just sniffed and sniffed and sniffed at the cooler and the red carry-on suitcase next to it.

The handler asked me nicely if she could look in the cooler.

Like I'm going to say "no." I untaped it and she checked the coffee, spices and assorted clean underwear used to keep stuff in place. She was satisfied, but the dog just kept checking both the cooler and suitcase. Something there smelled very interesting.

"Do you have pets?" the handler finally

"Oh yes, cats and a dog."

Come to think of it, that was the suitcase that Molly spent the night in, and the cooler was She waived us on, but I had to have the cooler checked again; an agricultural inspector looking for oranges before we escaped the airport. Coolers are just generally suspicious, I guess.

Oh well, I'm hoping the cat smell will wear off before we have to run the same gauntlet back in the U.S. But I'll probably be asked what's in the cooler.

It's OK. Whatever is in there will be legal and a fun reminder of a week in the sun. Maybe some rum, but no Cuban cigars.

The strange experience of Biker Mass

We were walking to church Saturday evening when the noise began to build behind us.

The caravan arrived, led by a single police motorcycle with flashing red and blue lights.

Behind the wheel man, as the cops would call him, came the first few bikes, three and four abreast. Then more and more and more, bikes clogging the narrow street, taking up all the lanes, revving their engines and sounding their horns, their sirens, their pipes.

Not a muffler among 'em, at least by the

And on they came. Bikes with lone riders, bikes with couples, bikes with dads and kids.

I was pretty sure it wasn't Hell's Angels or one of the other notorious motorcycle clubs from American California. Not even Mexican bikers from some border town like Nogales or Tijuana, though their gear was typical: leather vests, blue jeans, studded belts and bracelets, Nazi-style helmets.

For one thing, the bikes were too nice. They had saddle bags, wide seats, trim and decoration, not the "choppers" favored by Hell's Angles. All kinds of bikes, all sorts of colors.

Where were they going in the heart of Cabo

"Probably to church," someone wisecracked.

Ah, but when we finally made our way through the stalled procession and across the town square to church, that was where they were going. Saturday Mass.

They parked the bikes in ranks and rows, 123 of them, one biker said. And filed into the little church, taking up two of three wings of the cross-shaped building. Bikers read the lessons and the psalm. Bikers took up the collection. It was a biker Mass.

It turned out to be an annual ride down the Baja. There were members from the local club, the Baja Bikers, two chapters, and several from the capital city, La Paz, up north. American bikers from the Harley Owners Group. Hangers on and riders of all descriptions, almost all wearing club "colors."

They filled up the wings of the church, the spaces between the locals and the tourists. every bench and doorway and space. Someone said there were 254 of them, men, women and children. After Father said the Mass, everyone shook hands and exchanged the peace. Pleasantries were exchanged. We went off to dinner. Where were the bikers going?

"Probably to our place," someone wise-

And that was not far from wrong. When we got back, a loud, loud rock band was playing in the arroyo off the beach. All those bikers were out there dancing. The old folks were complaining it was past their bedtime. Heck, some of the youngsters were complaining. The fishermen get up at 5.

Wasn't much could be done about it. The guitar player wasn't bad, the singer was, well, he was there, and all the intros were in Spanish. Apparently, the band had promised to stop playing at midnight. And they did, but then some guy got the mic and yelled at the crowd for half an hour. They played recorded music until 2. And I got to admit, I just went to sleep. It was a more interesting day at church than most.

'News is my first love," Dolph said. "I like to write." He oversees the staff and still writes a weekly editorial.

In 1979, Dolph talked to Allen community and has received many which was developing the idea of a nationally distributed newspaper: USA Today.

"I told him, if you want to have a print site in the middle of the U.S., I'd love to have a shot at it," Simons said. "I promised to have the best print site of any non-Gannett print site in the country." Today Gannett has 32 print sites around the nation. Dolph has been true to his word.

Page design is done in a newsroom in northern Virginia and transmitted by satellite to Lawrence and other print sites around the nation. Press time begins at 10:30 p.m. Then the new edition of the papers is distributed regionally, from Des Moines down to Oklahoma.

Dolph is very involved in his Association, he was the fourth KPA president who was son of a former

"Extra! Extra! Read all about it!" That was the cry of the newsboys of yesteryear, and that was how Dolph Simons Jr. got his start. We commend Dolph Simons Jr. and all those involved with the World Company for making a difference with their long-term commitment to the newspaper industry. Success has come through "extra" effort.

And there's more. Can a newspaper co-exist with a cable television company? We'll explore that next week.

Plans announced for poet laureate has announced plans for the Poet Laureate of Kansas. Anew program for council, the position of Poet Laureate will help promote the humanities as a public resource for all Kansans. More information is available at www.kansashuman-

"The Poet Laureate of Kansas program is a strong addition to the humanities programming supported by the Kansas Humanities Council," said Gene Merry, chair of the council board of directors. "Through public events and outreach, the Poet Laureate of Kansas brings Kansans together to share insights and engage in meaningful conversations through poetry.'

The council invites Kansas poets with a strong interest in public engagement to apply to serve as the 2013-2015 Poet Laureate of Kansas. Applications are due by 4 p.m. (Mountain Time) on Friday, Feb. 22. Complete eligibil- at (785) 357-0359.

public notice

The Kansas Humanities Council ity requirements and application instructions are available at www. kansashumanities.org or call (785) 357-0359. The announcement of the new Poet Laureate of Kansas is planned for April to coincide with National Poetry Month.

The Poet Laureate of Kansas program is made possible with a gift from Lon Frahm, Colby. A current member of board of directors, Frahm is a lifelong supporter of the humanities and arts in Kansas.

"Admittedly, I am not a student of poetry," shared Frahm." However, I very much support our state having a poet laureate. The concept really appeals to me. Certainly, it will benefit the entire cultural life of Kansas. And, as a sixth generation Kansan, I think that's important."

Lady Mavericks lose to Eastern Wyoming

The Northwest Kansas Technical College women's basketball team led the Lady Lancers of Eastern Wyoming College through part of the first half but were unable to maintain the momentum to win the home game on Saturday. The Lady Mavericks lost to the Torrington, Wyo., team 73-54.

Their next game is 5:30 p.m. Saturday against North Eastern Community College at Sterling, Colo.

Shaletha Mayberry made the first bucket of the game for Northwest Tech. The Lady Lancers answered with their own bucket to tie the score. Hannah Wedding scored two more buckets. The score was Northwest Tech, 6-2. The Lancers then made a bucket and a free throw to make the score, 6-5. Mayberry added another bucket and Leticia Rodriguez added two free throws. to make is 10-5 with 14:10 left in the half.

Eastern Wyoming then scored five points to tie the game. The Lady Mavericks' shots just wouldn't go in. Anya Boyd was able to get a three-point shot and Mayberry stole the ball and made a bucket. The Lady Lancers scored six more to take the lead, 16-15.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mindbending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
