City eyes more brick replacement

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

At their regular meeting Monday, the Goodland City Commissioners signaled their willingness to go forward with redoing the brick on Main Street from 11th to Eighth Streets.

The commission approved a resolution that authorizes city staff to apply for a grant help cover the cost of the project. City Manager Doug Gerber said it is a 75/25 grant, meaning the city would be responsible for 25 percent of the costs. There are some parts of the project that the grant wouldn't cover, he said.

The city replaced two blocks of bricks last summer — From 11th to 13th Streets. Gerber said the city always intended to complete the replacement project going north. He gave the commission the option of applying for enough to pave just two blocks or all three.

The three-block project would cost about $1.5 million, with the city's share being about $642,000. The two-block project $1 million, with the city's share being about $444,000. Gerber said the city would continue to move the water lines from under the street to under the sidewalks.

Commissioner Annette Fairbanks asked if the grant would still be available in the future, should the commission decide to only pursue two blocks right now. Gerber said he couldn't be certain, since things are always changing at the state level.

The commissioners agreed to go after the three-block project.

"If you're going to tear it up, you might as well tear up the whole thing," said Mayor John Garcia. "The costs will only go up."

Commissioners Gary Farris, Bill Finley and Jenifer Sanderson agreed. Sanderson said the parking area at Goodland Activity Center, which lies between Eighth and Ninth Streets, is in particular need of repair.

Fairbanks asked if this would be the final part of the project. Gerber said the intent of the commission when it was first being discussed was to do the core of the downtown area, namely the street in between the redone intersections.

The commissioners unanimously approved the resolution, which does not necessarily obligate them to do the project.

Radio call during training causes stir

An errant radio transmission during a law enforcement training exercise in Goodland on Monday caused some inquiries from eastern Kansas. During the Monday morning training, some radio traffic was accidentally sent out on the wrong frequency and may have been mistaken as the real thing by a Wichita news station.

Goodland Police Chief Cliff Couch said the incident happened while officers, Sheriff's deputies and others were engaged in a training exercise run by the Kansas Department of Wildlife, Parks and Tourism. The exercise was in the basement of a building, he said, and didn't involve any training in view of the public.

Sherman County Emergency Management Coordinator Ryan Murray issued a press release after the news station called to inquire, confirming that the transmissions were part of the exercise, and that there had been no real situation.

Museum to show space exhibit

The High Plains Museum is preparing a new traveling exhibit from the Smithsonian Institute and the U.S. Geological Survey: "Earth from Space."

Running from Feb. 13 to July 29, the exhibit features a 20-poster set of detailed satellite images of the planet, from Kansas farmland to the Great Pyramids in Egypt. The museum will have a variety of space themed activities and learning opportunities throughout the run of the exhibit.

The museum has two special events planned for Valentine's Day on Thursday, Feb. 14. The "Valentine's Date Night" with activities for kids ages 6 to 12 will be from 6 to 7:30 p.m. and the "Stroll With the Stars" for adults will be from 8 to 9:30 p.m. Call the museum at 890-4595 to register.

The Earth from Space exhibit was developed by the Center for Earth and Planetary Studies at the National Air and Space Museum, in collaboration with Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service. Andrew Johnston, a geographer at the center and author of "Earth from Space" (Firefly Books, 2004), is the exhibition's curator.

The Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service has been sharing the wealth of Smithsonian collections and research programs with millions of people outside Washington, D.C., for more than 50 years. It connects Americans to their shared cultural heritage through a wide range of exhibitions about art, science and history, which are shown wherever people live, work

The table was filled with cupcakes decorated like snowmen, oreos and snowflakes at the Cupcake War held by the Goodland Arts Council at the Centennial Kick-Off Celebration of the Carnegie Building last Saturday night at the Goodland Elks Lodge.

Sixty adults and 29 kids attended the event, danced to music by Pieces of Eight and got to eat cupcakes.

There were categories in presentation, taste, creativity and peoples choice. The peoples choice was voted on by people putting money in jars for their favorite. The other three categories were chosen by a panel of judges.

The winner in presentation was Cheryl Kuntz with her cherry sweetheart first, Diana Spinney with carrot party cupcakes second and Valerie Schlosser shimmering snowflakes third.

Two youngsters eyed the cupcake spread at the Goodland Arts Council's Centennial Kick-Off Celebration at the Carnegie Arts Center on Saturday.

Lynda Alberico with her chocolate truffle was first in the taste category with Jill Beringer with mad about mint second and Laurie Carmichael with strawberry valentine third.

First in the creativity category was Kelly Livengood with let it snowman, Kelly James with corn on the cob second and Reina Branum with berry ice cream sundae with jello.

Winners in these category won two tickets to the Carnegie Art Center's paintbrush and cocktail painting class.

Others competing were Kim Horinek and Sarah Linton for the Goodland Regional Medical Center with just what the doctor ordered, Amanda Martin with salted caramel with whipped chocolate ganache, Michele and Nicole Berber with Oreos cupcake, BreAnn Duell with red velvet and Janda Linin with butterfly kiss (vanilla).

Mayor sees challenges and positive trends for city

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

Goodland Mayor John Garcia — who is running for re-election — is proud of what the city has accomplished in his 10 years on the city commission, but said there are still challenges ahead.

"We've made tremendous progress in the last 10 years," he said. "$35 million in infrastructure improvements without raising taxes."

The improvements include city streets and water projects, such as the water treatment plant. There has been $5 to $6 million in new buildings, helped along by the economic development incentives approved by the commission in 2010. There have also been joint projects with the state, such as the concrete repairing of K-27 from U.S. 24 to I-70.

Garcia said he was particularly proud of Pioneer Park. It had been apartment buildings, but the city was able to turn it into a park with a walking trail and a drainage system.

"We really hit a home run there," he said.

Garcia said he'd like to see those progressive trends continue and the city is in good financial shape to allow that to happen.

"Our sales tax figures hold their own compared to Colby," he said. "We're still a retail center. We bring in a lot of people from the west."

Budgeting for a city, he said, is not all that different from a household. "You have X number of dollars,

Innovative publisher started local cable network

By Ron Wilson
*Director
Huck Boyd National Institute for Rural Development at Kansas State University*
The newspaper. The television. These are two different and competitive forms of communication in our modern society. Can the two ever get along? Today we'll learn about an innovative newspaper publisher who chose to launch a local cable television system. He got them to work together, and he continues to seek innovative approaches to communicating with the public.
Last week we learned about Dolph Simons Jr., chairman and editor of the World Company which publishes the Lawrence Journal-World and other newspapers. He is a long-time newspaperman, but he has been innovative in other forms of communication as well.

In 1968, Dolph was attending a meeting in New York where he heard people talking about a new phenomenon called cable television. When Dolph came back home, he told his father - who was editor of the paper at the time - that this was something that they should pursue in Lawrence.
"I had a dad who was very supportive," Dolph said. "My father had worked for his father, and he gave me every opportunity." He encouraged Dolph to look into the idea.
Dolph brought in a national cable television expert from Denver in hopes of partnering with him in setting up a cable system in Lawrence, but the cable expert was skeptical about having a successful system so close to Kansas City. "I don't think we can make it go," he said. After he left, Dolph told his father, "I still think we should give it a try."

In 1968, the company applied for a cable television franchise for Lawrence. In December 1970, the new cable system went on the air. "I promised the city we would give Lawrence the best cable system of any city our size," Dolph said.
The cable system went on to grow and succeed, producing numerous award-winning programs through the years. Dolph found a way to make the two forms of media work together, including referring television viewers to the newspaper for more detailed information.
By the 1990s, yet another alternate form of communication was on the scene: The Internet. The Lawrence Journal-World set out to create an online presence on the World Wide Web.

The Lawrence Journal-World has now become one of the most technically advanced newspapers in the nation. In 1995, it became one of the first newspapers in the world to launch a daily updated news site online. In 2003, the Journal-World was the only newspaper in the country to be a national finalist in every category in the Newspaper Association of America's online awards.
"I have two sons in the business and they are very savvy on the new technology," Dolph said. He proudly points out that his two daughters have been in the newspaper and cable business as well.
Interestingly, the Journal-World has invested in the weekly newspapers in neighboring communities around Lawrence in recent years. This includes rural communities such as Baldwin, Tonganoxie and Basehor, population 2,324 people. Now, that's rural.

Is there a place for weekly newspapers in the modern era? "Very definitely," Dolph said. "There's always a place for that good newspaper that cares genuinely about making the community better."
That reflects his philosophy about the Journal-World itself. "My dad said, if you take care of Lawrence, Lawrence will take care of you," Dolph said.
Dolph strives to remain true to the classic values of journalism while exploring new technologies.
"I think Dolph's passion for the communities reached by his newspapers and their online news sites is remarkable," said Gloria Freeland, director of the Huck Boyd National Center for Community Media.

"Dolph and his family continue to explore new technologies, but their love for journalism and their communities is unchanging."
Among many other honors, he has been named a juror for the Pulitzer Prize and a Pioneer of the cable television industry.
The newspaper. The television. Can the two get along? Dolph Simons Jr. found a way for the two to work together. We salute the Simons family and all those involved with the World Company for making a difference with their innovation in journalism - both in print and on-screen.

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY!

Give more power to Kansas voters

The people of Kansas might just get a chance to vote on a change in the way we select judges for our higher courts in the next year or two. And it's about time.

The system we have now is about as undemocratic as you could get. The state went from electing judges to the Kansas Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals to having them appointed by the governor from a short list submitted by a "nominating commission."

The commission is made up of four members appointed by the governor and five elected by the state's lawyers. The system was made part of the Kansas Constitution after the infamous "Triple Play" of 1957, when Chief Justice Bill Smith resigned early so the incoming governor, Democrat George Docking, would not get to appoint his replacement.

Justice Smith was said to be a strong supporter of Gov. Fred Hall, who then resigned his position. The lieutenant governor, John McCuish, then became governor and appointed Hall to fill the vacancy for chief justice. He served only two years, however, resigning to run again for governor. (He'd lost the 1957 Republican primary as an incumbent.)

Hall lost and left for California, but his legacy was "reform" of the judicial nominating process. A governor no longer can appoint his friends, because he has no input on the list. Control of the nominations vests mostly in the lawyers, a small group who are expected to rise above politics to select the very best minds for our courts.

But, as a group, who's more political than lawyers?

The system mostly has served to perpetuate control of the courts by members of the Topeka establishment, center-left thinkers who in recent years have pushed the state away from the conservative principles held by a majority of voters.

It's not that the system took politics out of the process, it seems, but that it eliminated any say the voters or the governor have in the process. If the testimony of two conservative members shows anything, it's that the process is show skewed that some commission members deride any nominee seen as a conservative.

Of course, judges have to stand for a yes-or-no "retention" vote every six years, so voters do have some control, but not one has been ousted so far.

Compare that the the fairly dignified elections we see for district judge positions in rural areas, and it's hard to see any advantage to the process. When a judge isn't seen as performing, voters can and do make a change.

However, these campaigns seldom revolve around liberal-or-conservative positions.

While it's not fashionable to say it, we believe the voters make pretty good decisions. The could handle selecting our judges. However, it might be more difficult for us to know candidates in a statewide race.

How to change the system? One plan is to give the governor back at least part of his power to make selections. Another is to keep the nominating commission, but make the appointments subject to confirmation by the state Senate, as in the federal model.

Of course, we could just let the voters decide.

None of those ideas would guarantee a conservative court, or a liberal court, for that matter. Appointing judges to what amounts to a lifetime job can be a dicy proposition, as any number of presidents have learned. They can be mighty independent when the feel like it.

But giving both the governor and the people more say, and the state's lawyers a little less, makes sense to us. — Steve Haynes

Notes from the statehous

The "Weekly Five Hard Facts"

- With the current judicial selection process, a small minority of 10,000 Kansans, lawyers who are members of the Kansas Bar Association, have a say in who is nominated to the Kansas Supreme Court or the Kansas Court of Appeals.

- Kansas is the only state that gives the bar majority control in selecting its Supreme Court nominating commission.

- Seventy-three percent of Kansans with income of $100,000 or more use the mortgage income deduction, while only 17 percent of those whose income is less than $100,000 use the deduction.

- Big tax credits, such as the real estate tax deduction, encourage home buyers to take out bigger mortgages.

- Data shows states with zero personal income tax significantly outperform states with the highest personal income tax rates.

The pace has increased in this third week of the Legislative session due to the Senate casting its first votes, committees continuing to work on a number of bills and a steady influx of bills making it to the floor for debate.

Major Issues This Week

- Judicial Selection SCR 1601 – proposes to amend the Kansas Constitution to allow for the gubernatorial appointment and Senate confirmation of judges.

- SB 8 is a companion bill which establishes an independent review to help the Senate evaluate judicial nominees.

- SCR 1601 passed by a vote of 28 to 12. SB 8 passed 28 to 11.

- Paycheck Protection for Public Sector Employees (HB 2023), Paycheck Protection Act—to ban state or other units of government from making payroll deductions for members of labor unions for the purpose of contributing to the union's political action committee. Members can still make a contribution by writing a check or setting up an electronic transfer. The House passed HB 2023 68 to 56. The bill is now headed to the Senate for further consideration.

ACTION FROM MY OFFICE

I have had many contacts regarding SB-21. The issues were concerning: reciprocal license standards that match those or are greater than those in Kansas. The second issue was adding to the definition of a firearm so as to include antique firearms.

During committee debate, we split the two subjects of concern: SB 21 addresses the issue of reciprocal license standards. A new bill for the definition of firearms will be sent to the Judiciary Committee.

The Senate and House Education committees have been meeting jointly to get a better understanding of the budget formula and law governing education funding. Public education funding in Kansas is $5,771 million a year and just over half that goes to the classroom.

I will keep you informed of the issues that come before my committee, Federal and State Affairs.

The teacher union bogeyman

Using teachers as the latest scapegoat in school reform and state financing, legislators in many states, including Kansas, are moving in various ways to cut the last vestiges of teachers' bargaining power.

Some folks hold an image of teachers as ready to strike, and teacher unions as protectors of incompetent teachers. They fear Kansas might face a Chicago-like strike. Or that incompetent but tenured teachers are allowed to lounge in "rubber rooms" as in New York City.

But Kansas is not Chicago and our teachers, similar to firemen and police, are vital services and cannot strike. And Kansas is not New York; we have no tenured teachers passing time doing nothing.

Another straw man argument contends that it needs to be easier for school administrators to fire incompetent teachers. But it takes a competent administrator to dismiss an incompetent teacher. If there are incompetent teachers in the classroom, then either the administrators are incompetent, or there is no surplus of good teachers to replace them and administrators have no option.

So just where does Kansas rank in the level of teacher union power? The Nov. 7, 2012, Education Week published a summary of the findings of a study by the Thomas Fordham Foundation and the Education Reform Now advocacy groups on "How Strong Are U.S. Teacher Unions? A State-by-State Comparison."

education frontlines

• John Schrock

Ranking of teacher union power was based on five factors: 1) number of members and financial resources, 2) involvement in politics including contributions to candidates and parties, 3) scope of collecting bargaining and right to strike, 4) alignment of union positions on workplace rules to state policies, and 5) perceived influence based on key stakeholders.

Adding up scores, the states were grouped in five categories: Strongest-Strong-Average-Weak-Weakest. Kansas was in the next-to-bottom set of "weak" teacher union states. But with no right to strike, and with most Kansas schools being small and closer to extended families than business operations, this ranking is not unexpected.

Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker notoriously shut down statewide collective bargaining for public employees. But just as Kansas is not Chicago or New York, it is not Wisconsin.

Kansas teachers negotiate locally with their individual district. This takes into account that a lower rural teaching salary may be offset by lower costs of living, etc.

When I talk with my high school-biology-teaching colleagues who are involved in their local negotiations, it is apparent that when it comes down to the wire, the only leverage they have is public opinion. When teacher pay or benefits are so low as to be pitiful, only public shame can leverage change.

In Kansas, if a dispute over salary cannot be settled, it is the school that automatically wins. The old contracts continue into the next year and it is the burden of non-returning teacher to submit a resignation or swallow the loss from higher costs of living. Kansas teachers are among the most vulnerable in the nation.

If there is no genuine problem with tenured incompetence or negotiation or political activity, then why the mean-spirited legislation?

Following the Wisconsin governor, legislators nationwide are on a school privatization bandwagon. Advocating vouchers and shifting funding to charter schools, there is a herd of folks who think that private competition will somehow improve education. Therefore suppressing public schools and professional teachers helps move that direction.

In business, there is a saying: "You are not paid what you deserve. You are paid what you negotiate." Take away any ability to negotiate and teachers are left in "wage slavery," an older term for lowering salaries and benefits and telling teachers: "Take it or leave."

Legislators who support such "Grapes of Wrath" legislation lack respect for the teaching profession. It should not be surprising in respect for these legislators also continues to drop further, assuming that it can.

Mayor sees challenges ahead

you set a budget, then you have to live within those means," he said.

Garcia said a commissioner should be balanced between representing the city's interests and those of the taxpayers.

"I ran to represent the taxpayers and the business community," he said. "They drive the economic climate."

They should also be prudent and frugal in management style, he said, especially because changes at the state level may make it more difficult for the city.

Garcia said he expects less money to be coming in from the state, so the city will have to be disciplined while still meeting the needs of the community.

"As we go into the future, bear in mind we'll have some strong challenges," he said. "We'll need vision to see through the rough spots."

Another challenge Garcia sees is lack of housing.

"We're seeing an influx of young people," he said. "There's a housing need."

Garcia said he would like to get contractors and the state involved in finding a solution.

Garcia has lived and worked in Goodland since 1977. His parents migrated here from a small town south of Amarillo in the 60s. His father owned a small trucking company and came here when the sugar beet industry was thriving.

In 1977, Garcia moved to Goodland, and the following year began working for Caldwell Inc. In 1981, he became the company's credit manager, responsible for things like accounts receivable.

In 1994 he opened his own business, Garcia's Home Furnishings, on Main Street, a business that won a state award for Minority Owned Business of the Year in 1998. He has served as chairman and president at the Goodland Activity Center, Goodland Rotary Club President, and is treasurer and worship leader at the Church of the Nazarine.

Garcia and his wife, Nora, have two girls, both of whom live in Kansas City, and several grandchildren.

by Larry Keirns on behalf of the Goodland Economic Development Corporation. The corporation was formed in the late 1970s, he said, but since the city and county now have an Economic Development director, the corporation, of which there are only a few remaining members, decided to give the balance of its money - donated by individuals, banks, business and government entities - to the city. Kierns said it seemed appropriate that the money be used for its intended purpose, to help secure new industries and businesses.

Approved a refinancing of bonds issued in 2007 and a 1988 Kansas Department of Health and the Environment loan to a lower interest rate. The city's current interest rate is 3.93 percent, and with the refinancing, that rate could get down to 1.44 percent, and it would not extend that debt any further.

and play. Exhibition descriptions and tour schedules are available at www.sites.si.edu.

"The Smithsonian is proud to be able to share illuminating scholarship from the National Air and Space Museum in a format that allows for extraordinarily widespread distribution," said Anna Cohn, SITES director. "Earth from Space inspires dreams and discovery, and while the photographs were taken from far away, they can launch learning opportunities about our lives here on earth."

The poster exhibition was born of the popular and award-winning exhibition of the same title that premiered November 2006 at the National Air and Space Museum.

Approved Economic Development incentives for the 17th Street Diner. The commission approved what Director Michael Solomon calls the "12 gets you six" incentive. If a new business remains open for 12 months, they get a six-month rebate in utilities.

Heard from Charlie Krull with Blue Cross Blue Shield about the city's employee health insurance renewal. Krull said the city will only see a 3 percent increase, where most plans are seeing about 7 percent.

"It takes a good effort by employees to bring that down," he said.

Because the insurance plan is changing very little this year, Krull said, it will be grandfathered, thereby avoiding many of the changes mandated by the Affordable Care Act.

Awarded a contract for maintenance at the cemetery to Brett and Jill Beringer for $218,000 over five years. Gerber said the cemetery board and city staff recommended the Beringers, who were the low bid out of three. He said he would come back at the next meeting with a contract for the commission to approve.

Approved going out for bids on demolition of two properties, 520 W. 16th Street and 504 E. Seventh Street. Gerber said in both cases, the city had been dealing with the properties for years with not much done.

Discussed renewing the fire management agreement. The agreement, between the city and Rural Fire District, allows for the sharing of the fire chief between the two entities. Gerber said the staff recommends the agreement be renewed since it seems to be working. Kevin Zimmerman, who sits on the Fire District board, said he didn't know of anyone who had any objections. He said he would check with the board and report back at the next meeting.

Discussed changing the number of candidates required to have a primary to three times the number of open seats. Gerber said that when the state switched to that requirement, the city commission at the time opted to remain with the current standard, more than two times the number of open seats.

"It's a lot of work to eliminate just one candidate," Finley said.

If the commission decided to make a change, it would not affect the primary this year. It would take a charter ordinance to change the standard, and charter ordinances have to be posted for public comment period, and there is not enough time to do so before this year's election. Gerber said they could revisit it in the future.

Catalogs signal the start of garden season

By Kay Melia
*Master Gardener
 vkmelia@yahoo.com*
 I knew a new garden season wasn't far away when the first seed catalog arrived in my mailbox a few days after last Thanksgiving. It was from Pinetree Garden Seeds located in New Gloucester, Maine, which is about as far from my garden as you can get and still be in the United States of America. But it was one of the most unique seed catalogs I had ever seen, because the listing of every seed packet tells you how many seeds are in each packet, and prices are lower than most other kay melia

 • the gardener

companies I know of. For example, a packet of 200 Jade bush bean seeds costs just $1.75, and a packet of Crosby Egyptian beet seeds goes for just $1.50.

I knew a new garden season wasn't far away when I received my seed catalogue from Dixondale Farms, the onion people from Carrizo Springs, Texas. Dixondale offers free shipping to your front door, and you can buy 30 bunches of beautiful fresh onion plants for $77. They'll arrive on the date you specify. But look! This is their Centennial year, and they are offering the newly developed Texas Legend onion that contains more healthful benefits than any other onion on the planet, and yet is sweeter than the famed Texas Supersweet!

I knew a new garden season wasn't far away when I received my new Burpee catalog and right there on the cover, in plain sight, was this picture of a giant tomato! It has been given the name of Super Sauce, the world's largest sauce tomato. Right next to the picture, in bold letters, was the caption "Shown Actual Size." Can this be true? The picture showed the tomato to be 5 1/2 inches tall and 5 inches wide! And I can receive a packet of 25 seeds for only $6.50, plus postage and handling. Of course I've ordered a packet! What red-blooded American gardener wouldn't fall for something like that when the only thing that remotely tastes like a tomato here in the dead of winter comes from one of the jars of tomatoes you canned last summer! Hey, I may order two packets! Maybe not.

I knew a new garden season wasn't far away when my new Jung Seeds and Plants catalog arrived. The Jung catalog is my favorite because it is so well organized and I have no problem locating the stuff I'm looking for. Prices always seem to be close to reasonable compared to the others. This year, it even offers the new Francis Meiland Hybrid Tea rose, the only AARS winning rose of the year. No other catalogue seems to have it.

I knew a new garden season wasn't far away when I glanced at the calendar and discovered that it was February already. How could that be when just a month or two ago we were storing onions and enjoying the final cantaloupe and making salsa? Time passes quickly!

I'm glad to be with you again as we prepare for the 2013 garden season. I promise to do my best to plant new ideas in your mind as we go merrily, merrily down the garden path, searching for ways to improve our gardening acumen.

By Pat Schiefen

The Goodland Cowgirls played the Scott City Lady Beavers on Tuesday night at Scott City. The two teams went in pretty evenly matched as Goodland had a record of 3-12 and Scott City 2-12. The Cowgirls were unable to minimize their turn overs and neutralize Scott City senior Janessa Lowenthal. They lost 53-44 after leading at the end of the first half.

Their next game is the Red Out for heart disease at 5:30 p.m. today against Ulysses at Max Jones Fieldhouse.

In the first two minutes of the first quarter neither team were able to score with both teams stealing the ball and turning over the ball. Paige Phillips made the first bucket of the game. When Megan Siruta had her first foul Scott City's Bailey Nickel hit one of two free throws. The score was Goodland, 2-1. Lowenthal then fouled and Kate-Lynn King hit one of her two free throws to make the score Goodland, 3-1. Scott City rebounded the missed free throw and Kelly Wycoff made a bucket to tie the score, 3-3. Nickel hit both of her free throws when Hope Cochran fouled. Then Nickel stole the ball from the Cowgirls and Shanaya Hoeme make a bucket giving Scott City the lead, 7-3. The Cowgirls took a time out. At this point both teams had 13 turn overs a piece. Lowenthal hit another bucket for an eight point run for Scott City. With 2:40 left in the game Faith Biermann hit her first bucket of the game. Lowenthal made another bucket follow by one by King. Hope Cochran stole the ball from Scott City and took it in for a bucket. The score was Scott City, 11-9. The Goodland High School varsity boys basketball team was unable to de-throne the 14-1 Scott City Beavers in their away game on Tuesday.

Scott City put 12 points on the board right away in the first quarter while holding the Cowboys scoreless. The Beavers put together another run, this time 18 points, in the first half. By the end of the first half, Goodland was behind 49-14.

The Cowboys were able to add 16 points in the second half, not enough to overcome the Beavers' lead. They went on to lose 76-30.

Junior Taylen Smith ranks third in the league in blocks, third in rebounds and fifth in free throw percentage, having knocked down 64 percent of his shots from the charity stripe. Junior Gannon Ihrig ranks fifth in assists with two per game.

FUN BY THE NUMBERS

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
