Suspicious death and fire in Colby

A 27-year-old Colby woman was found department sent out a statement, adding that near death in her burning home Saturday morning and her 11-month-old baby was missing.

The baby was found safe near Logan, when authorities arrested a man wanted in the case. Police canceled a pickup order for the man and the child about noon Saturday, saying both had been located in Phillips County.

Teri Chase Morris, an emergency medical technician with the Thomas County ambulance crew and a meat department manager at the Colby Walmart, was found about 7 a.m. The Colby Fire Department had been called to her home, 125 S. Chickamauga St., for a fire.

The Colby Police Department and the Kansas Bureau of Investigation were handling the case. Saturday evening, the police calls this morning.

more information would be released when it becomes available.

Also assisting in the investigation were the Thomas County Sheriff's Office, the state Fire Marshall's Office and the Kansas Highway Patrol.

According to the police statement, after entering the burning house, firemen found the victim near the front of the home. She was not responsive and was taken to Citizens Medical Center, where she later died.

Family members have declined to comment on the woman's death at the request of police. The Colby Police Department referred all questions to Don Brown, communications director for the Kansas Attorney General's Office. Brown did not respond to telephone Review, said the Phillips County Sheriff's Office included an item on the case in its regular report of its activities. Among the service calls on Saturday, an item says the sheriff's office assisted the KBI in locating an individual wanted in Thomas County. The subject was arrested in rural Phillips County.

Billy Shank of Garden City, Morris' exboyfriend, is the alleged suspect. He reportedly was taken to the Phillips County jail, but officials there, reached by telephone this morning, said they'd been told not to comment on the case. Police and jail officials in Colby said the same thing.

Police had cones blocking the street at the corner of Chickamauga and Webster on Saturday. Two fire engines, the fire chief's car, a city car, three police cars, an ambulance Kirby Ross, editor of the Phillips County and a Kansas Highway Patrol car were on the scene.

Fire Chief Bob McLemore said the call came in at 7 a.m. Saturday and the fire was out by 7:15.

"The main part of the fire was in a bedroom at the front of the house," he said that morning, adding that he knew someone was inside, but could not say who.

Lois Struckmeyer, who lives across the street from the house, said sirens woke her up and she saw that the south bedroom of the house was on fire.

Phillip LeDou, who lives next door to the woman's home, said a young woman came out of a white four-door car and rang his doorbell to say there was a fire. LeDou said

Medical service running contests

In an effort to help the community take ownership in the new Sherman County ambulance service, Director Duane Wright is holding a logo and motto competition.

Wright is taking logo submissions until the end of February. They can be left at the Sherman County Courthouse labeled "Attention: Duane." There will be a $25 prize for the winner.

Wright said he has already had some submissions from the graphic design department at Northwest Kansas Technical College.

Wright said he will be taking submissions for a motto for the new service from March 1 to March 31. The county took over the ambulance service from Goodland Regional Medical Center in January, and has been working on the transition for several years.

Dialysis unit begins work

The new dialysis unit at Goodland Regional Medical Center has begun treating its first patient.

The hospital has been working on the unit for several years. Construction was completed last year, but the opening was delayed while the hospital hired a medical director.

Hospital Administrator Jay Jolly, speaking to the Goodland Rotary Club on Friday, said now that the first patient is being treated, the state can inspect the unit. Once it passes that inspection, it can begin treating more patients.

Knitig is a 1991 Goodland High School graduate as well as a graduate of the Northwest Kansas Technical College auto body program. His wife Sherry also works at the college.

Knitig spent the past six years working in the city streets department. He left in August and is now selfemployed doing concrete work, something he says is going very well.

Knitig said he sees a lot of good things happening at the city, singling out Police Chief Cliff Couch as doing a great job. However, he said, the streets department should get back on a good yearly maintenance plan and there are water lines that could have been replaced, but haven't been.

"I would like to see money spent on things more.

Knitig said he would like to see the city offer more scholarships for college students. He said he would also like to see the city be more welcoming to businesses, since times are difficult for anyone trying to get started.

with the streets department, and now after retiring, he is running for a seat on that very body. Erickson, a

Goodland native, is a 36-year veteran of the city streets department. He retired in October after serving as division manager. Throughout that time he has seen the city expand and contract, and said it would be nice to see growth again.

Erickson said his career has given him an insight into the workings of the city, and not just in infrastructure.

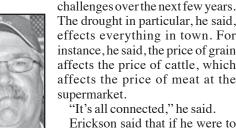

"In the departments, everyone helps everyone," he said.

Erickson said that career is one of the reasons he decided to run for city commission.

"I want to see if I can do some good on the other side," he said.

Erickson said he sees the overall position

Erickson said that if he were to be elected, he would help get more water lines replaced and see more street and curb improvements. He pointed to water lines on Sherman Avenue between 16th and 14th Streets as a particularly bad area. These improvements do cost, he said, in money, time and manpower.

"Money's going to be tight," he said. "You can't do it all at once. You have to hit the worst ones first."

Erickson described himself as a hard worker who will try and help the city make the right decisions.

Oilseed camelina Kick-off shows promise oilseed camelina is showing good potential as an environmentallyfriendly commercial biofuel feedstock, particularly for biodiesel and jet fuel. To that end, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has just awarded $5.08 million to a team of researchers, led by Kansas State Distinguished Professor in Grain Science and Industry, Aiuzhi Susan Sun, to study the crop's potential. Besides Kansas State scientists, the team is also composed of researchers from Montana State University; University of Wyoming; Strath-Kirn, Inc.,; SBT, LLC; Montana Gluten Free, Inc.; and Henkel.

"The overall goal is to make oilseed camelina a cost-effective bio-energy and bio-based product feedstock. This project will generate substantial information that will build a foundation to make nonfood oilseeds a better resource for biofuels, chemical and bio-products, with minimal negative impact on food crop systems or the environment," said Sun, who is co-director of the Center for Biobased Polymers By Design. Her research focuses on how plant- and grain-based materials such as oils, proteins and fibers can be used to create bio-based chemicals and products like resins, adhesives, coatings that are safer, more durable and environmentally friendly than products currently in use.

"USDA's continuing investments in research and development are proving a critical piece of President Obama's strategy to spur innovation of clean bio-energy right here at home and reduce our dependence on foreign oil," said agriculture secretary Tom Vilsack in a Jan. 11 statement announcing several bio-energy awards, including the camelina research. "The advances made through this research will help to boost local economies throughout rural America, creating and sustaining good-paying jobs, while moving our nation toward a clean energy economy."

The camelina project funding is part of a $25 million effort by USDA's National Institute of Food and Agriculture to fund research and

It may not be a household name Navy and Air Force and the results even among farm families, but the have been promising, but Sun said that producing fuels from camelina is currently not economically viable. Obstacles include the fact that camelina product is not sufficiently efficient per unit resource used and camelina oil processing generates about 65 percent solid meal by-product, mainly proteins and carbohydrates that is currently under-utilized. The technology has not been developed to produce highvalue co-products from camelina bio-energy varieties.

With an eye on thos challenges, the researchers Chengci Chen of Montana Stat and Augustine Obour of the University of Wyoming will look for ways to enhance camelina production by optimizing cropping systems within wheat-based crop rotations in Montana and Wyoming, where preliminary work has already been don. Sun said.

Once harvested and processed, Sun will develop new technologies to chemicall convert camelina oil and meal to a variety of adhesives, coatings and composites, thus adding value to the co-product.

She will work with Kansas State's Donghai Wang, professor in Kansas State Department of Biological and Agricultural Engineering, who will conduct fractionation and processing optimization research in collaboration with industries for commercialization potentials.

"Although camelina is currently grown in Montana and Wyoming, it will expand to the Northern Great Plains area, and it's possible that agricultural producers in Kansas might be interested in incorporating the crop into their cropping systems in the future," Sun said.

Bipartisan efforts are a new beginning

It's hard to believe, but a bipartisan group in Congress is making another push to "reform" the long-broken federal immigration system.

"About time," you might say, and you'd be right.

We will two, when we see a bill that looks like it might actually work.

Our immigration laws have been somewhere between ineffectual and totally worthless for the last 20 years or so, ever since Congress decided to make it next to impossible for many people to come here to work.

Unfortunately for all concerned, the lure of jobs and a better life proved much stronger than the law. It always does. Any attempt to keep something out of a country that people want and need, whether it's beer, cigarettes or workers, is doomed to failure.

In the case of our immigration policy, the longer Congress failed to do something, the worse the situation got. That's how we got to have an estimated 11 million illegal aliens of this side of the Rio Grande, most of them latinos, but including people from all over the world who entered the U.S. illegally or simply overstayed their visas.

It's been five years since the last attempt to change things failed, but maybe it'll be different this time. We hope so.

One thing that is different is that business and labor have been meeting, trying to come to an agreement on the bill. They're represented by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which knows that businesses depend on foreign workers, and the AFL-CIO, which knows that also, and which smells the sweet smell of growth if newly legal workers can join its member unions.

That is one thing the bill must address: What to do with those 11 million illegals in the country today, most of them gainfully employed. It's not a huge group, only a little more than 3 percent of our population, but it's still a lot of illegal aliens to deal with. And the chances we can just send them all home are nil.

Any"amnesty" proposal will be unpopular in some quarters, but just try to figure out what else will work. Meantime, the administration has stepped up programs to deport illegals who commit crimes or cause other problems. And yes, the administration is working with Congress, the unions and management to put this bill together.

Other things a bill must deal with is a total ban on paying welfare or free medical care for immigrants and their children. If people come here and can't find work, we should instead help them find a way back home.

And the bill will need to provide a simple and easy way for guest workers to come fill jobs that go begging, either in the fields or in high-tech offices. Today, doctors and engineers can come to work, though there are many roadblocks. For farm hands and road workers, however, it's next to impossible to come here legally.

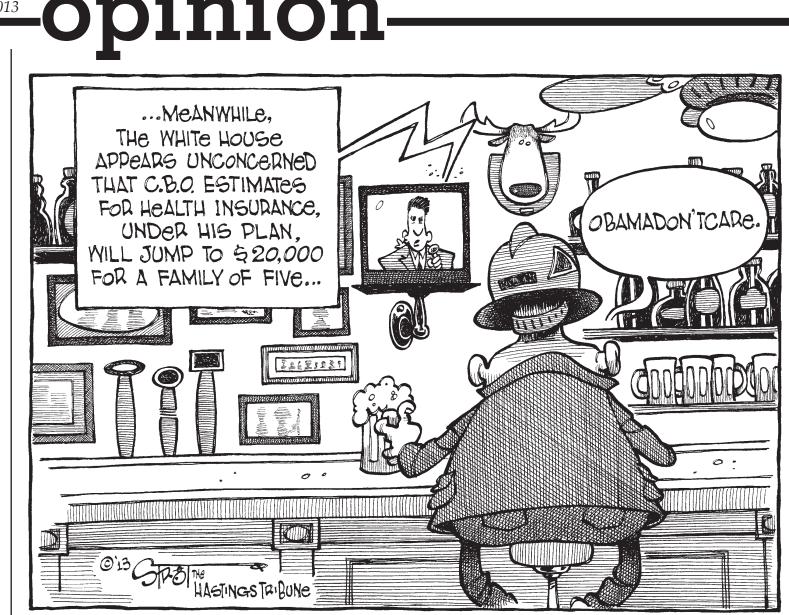

Our current policy is not working. It has brought us nothing but grief.

More border guards, a higher fence and tough enforcement have not worked. Our policy has failed, and it's time to try something else. If we make it easy for guest workers to come for a set time, people won't have to risk their lives in the desert.

And as a nation of immigrants, we should welcome newcomers who come legally and have work to do here.

We should not pay welfare or provide a good life for anyone who comes and does not have work. There's no point in that, but then, it's hard so say how much of a problem there has been, either.

Let's hope this effort succeeds. It might be the beginning of bipartisan solutions to a lot of our country's problems.

little fish

A man of wisdom knows that standing tall will not add inches to your physical stature. He knows that it means we should be courageous in decision, not compromising in principles, not violating spiritual values, and not shrinking from responsibility. A person who stands tall is one who personifies integrity, strength, and courage.

stor-news

If we sit on the fence of life's pathways, we must eventually come down on one side or the other. Now is the time to muster the courage to stand tall. Just because I can do something, doesn't necessarily mean that I should do it.

In a generation of "get mine first", I was blessed to be raised in a home of honor and integrity. My parents stood on everything they believed. One of the best nuggets my father imparted on me was that a person of honor stood behind the things they knew to be true, and if they did not know what was true, they made the effort to find out what was. In a world where nothing is certain, the one thing that is truly ours and can not be taken from us is our honor and integrity, our freedom of agency. If we lose our agency, it is only because we gave it away. It's been said "Your actions speak so loudly, I cannot hear your words." Our actions indeed speak volumes about us.

The story goes, a man and his wife enjoyed hiking together in the mountains. One fall afternoon, they hiked several miles up a steep mountainside to a beautiful waterfall. While descending the trail, several hikers making the climb upward asked the question, "Is it worth it?" The couple's reply was always in the affirmative. Later, they observed that the effort was worth it only if you enjoyed the fresh air, alpine beauty, exercise, and loving companionship.

some may ask the question, "Is it worth the effort to stand tall? ' To that question I would respond, "If you want to experience real joy in this life, then standing tall is worth the determination and tireless daily effort it requires." Doing the right thing, just because it is the right thing, is not a popular attitude in this day. But in the years since my parents have passed away I have come to realize that standing tall had added many inches to their stature in the way their peers and neighbors saw them. Most of the people that speak to me about Mom and Dad tell me stories of their honor and fairness. I am proud to be their child. As always your views and opinions are welcome. To contact me directly, e-mail me at littlefish_67@ymail.com.

Un hombre de sabiduría sabe que parándose no agregará pulgadas a su estatura física. Él sabe que esto significa que debemos ser valientes en la decisión, sin comprometer en principios, no violar los valores espirituales y no encojan de responsabilidad. Una persona que se yergue es quien personifica la integri-dad, fuerza y coraje.

Si nos sentamos en la cerca de los caminos de la vida, finalmente debemos venir en un lado o el otro. Ahora es el momento para reunir el valor suficiente a erguirse. PUEDO hacer algo, no necesariamente significa que debo hacerlo.

En una generación de "obtener mi primer", me fui bendecido para ser criado en un hogar de honor e integridad. Mis padres estaban parados en todo lo que ellos creían. Uno de los mejores nuggets mi padre impartido en mí fue que una persona de honor estaba parado detrás de las cosas que sabían que era cierto, y si no sabían lo que era verdad, hicieron el esfuerzo para saber qué era. En un mundo donde nada es seguro, único lo que realmente es nuestro y no puede ser tomado de nosotros es nuestro honor, integridad y nuestra libertad de agencia. Si perdemos nuestra agencia, es sólo porque nos lo regaló. Se ha dicho 'tus acciones hablan tan fuerte, que no puedo oír sus palabras". De hecho, nuestras acciones dicen mucho sobre nosotros.

Cuenta la historia, "un hombre y su esposa disfrutaron juntos senderismo en las montañas. Una caída por la tarde, subió varios kilómetros por una empinada ladera a una hermosa cascada. Mientras que desciende el camino, varios excursionistas haciendo la subida hacia arriba la pregunta, "vale la pena?" Respuesta de la pareja fue siempre en la afirmativa. Más tarde, observaron que el esfuerzo valió la pena Feeling the intense pressure from peers and the need to be accepted, sólo si te ha gustado el aire fresco, belleza alpino, ejercicio y compañía amorosa

Sintiendo la presión intensa de sus compañeros y la necesidad de ser aceptado, algunos pueden pedir la pregunta, "vale la pena el esfuerzo a erguirse?" A esa pregunta respondería, "Si usted quiere experimentar el verdadero placer en esta vida, entonces parándose vale la determinación y el incansable esfuerzo diario requiere."

Haciendo lo correcto, porque es lo correcto, no es una actitud popular en este día. Pero en los años ya que mis padres han fallecido me he dado cuenta que parándose había agregado muchos centímetros a su estatura en el camino de que sus compañeros y vecinos vieron. La mayoría de las personas que hablan a mi mamá y mi papá me cuentan historias de su honor y justicia. Me siento orgulloso de ser su hijo.

Kansas is still a working person's state

A visit to the Statehouse in Topeka brought home the fact that this is still a working person's state.

While the state has spent millions of dollars repairing, painting, polishings and updating the 150-year old building, and she looks great, what I noticed is the guard at the door.

Like most statehouses and quite a few courthouses, you have to empty your pockets and walk through a metal detector. A guard checks you though and you are on your way to see your senator or representative, attend a hearing or just wander around and look at the frescos, polished pillars and gleaming floors.

Your representative will still have a tiny office in a row with other representatives and your senator perhaps a little bigger space, but both will say that its a big upgrade from what they used to have.

But, back to the entry.

I slid through the checkpoint like melted butter. I've done this a hundred times in buildings and airports. Steve, however, was carrying his Leatherman Tool - a sort of updated Swiss Army knife.

The guard offered to hold it for him, putting his name on a sticky note and laying the tool carefully on top of the X-ray machine from which my purse was just emerging. While, I'm short and had a bad angle, it looked to me like it was the fourth or fifth item to be placed up there.

On our way out, Steve asked for his Leatherman Tool and the guard asked him his name noting that he had two of them up on the makeshift counter.

Since it was a slow time of the day and there was no one behind us, I asked the guard how many "knives" he usually had.

He grinned and said up to a dozen from time to time, but the record, he said, was day the Pepsi truck drivers visited the capitol. By the time they were done going through the machine, there were 53 box cutters sitting on top, he said.

Last year, after all the legislators had gone home and there were few visitors to the capitol, they had 13 unclaimed sharp things no one had remembered to pick up. These were placed in an evidence locker, he said.

It just shows that no matter how fancy some of the suits going through those doors are, there are still a heck of a lot of working people with pocket knives, box cutters and other sharp things visiting the statehouse. And that's a good thing.

The Goodland Rotary Club met for their regular weekly meeting at noon on Friday Feb. 1, in the meeting room at Northwest Kansas Technical College. A big crowd filled the meeting room again as President Jenifer Sanderson presided.

After the blessing and the Pledge of Allegiance, Linda Koons led the group in a rousing round of singing. President Sanderson then introduced the January Rotary Honor students from Goodland high School, Cortney Cowan and Cy Paxton. Sanderson then introduced the Rotarian of the Day Doug Gerber. Gerber gave a presentation on his two year participation in the KARL program, or Kansas Agriculture and Rural Leadership. KARL is a nonprofit educational organization dedicated to developing leaders in agriculture, business and rural communities. Gerber said the program selects 30 applicants to participate in a two year program that includes trips to locations in Kansas, Washington D.C. and an international trip. Gerber said his class took their international trip to Ghana in Western Africa. The program costs for a two year class with 30 members runs about a half million dollars. Most of the funding for the program comes from businesses and private donors. Several Sherman County residents have participated in the KARL program, including Rotarian Fred Hall who was part of the first KARL class in 1991. Gerber said his participation the KARL program was an experience of a lifetime. Those interested in participating in the next next two year KARL class have until April 15 to register. Information about the KARL program is available at www. karlprogram.com. After the drawing, the weekly meeting of the Goodland Rotary Club adjourned. The next meeting will be Friday Feb. 8, with the Rotarian of the Day to be Jay Jolly. Visitors, and those interested in joining Rotary are always welcome to attend.
