City hears from pit bull owners

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

The Goodland City Commission heard from concerned citizens at its Monday meeting about a proposed ordinance that would prohibit owning pit bulls within the city limits.

Mayor Annette Fairbanks started the discussion by saying there has been a misconception about the commission's objective.

"We by no means want to take good dogs from good people," she said.

City Manager Doug Gerber explained that the ordinance prohibits the purchase or transfer of pit bulls, but would allow people who own pit bulls now to keep them provided they follow several steps such as making sure the dog is securely kept inside or on a leash in a fenced-in yard, getting them microchipped, posting a sign, getting a special collar, getting them spayed or neutered, reporting any new puppies, filing an identification photo with the city and getting a single incident insurance policy for $100,000 or more.

Fairbanks said the reason the city has been considering the ordinance is that there have been some specific incidents recently involving pit bulls. Assistant Police Chief Joni Showalter said there was another incident just last week.

"So far it's just been between dogs," Fairbanks said. "We don't want that to escalate."

Linda Quint spoke first, saying that she ended up owning a pit bull not by her choice, but she has become very attached to it. She said her pit bull is her protection, and that other dogs run free in her neighborhood and often taunt hers in her yard.

"When they're taunted, they react," she said.

Quint expressed her concerns with the proposed ordinance, including the difficulty in identifying mixed breed dogs. She said she would be able to comply with most of the grandfathering regulations, but the cost of the insurance, which could be anywhere from $300 to $1,000 a year, would be prohibitively expensive.

Quint said she could identify many dogs causing problems around town that are not pit bulls, and said that if pit bull owners have to jump through these hoops, so should everyone else.

Ted Brigham you can't hold pit bulls responsible for the actions of their owners.

"Any dog has instinct," he said. "And a vicious one will attack."

Brigham described his pit bulls as lovable

County, city ponder concealed carry law

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

On July 1, people with concealed carry licenses will be able to take their weapons into some government buildings.

A new law passed by the Kansas Legislature requires local governments and state agencies to allow people to carry concealed weapons within their buildings if those buildings do not have adequate security measures. Previously, cities and counties were allowed to regulate themselves.

But even under the new law there are a few exemptions. Local governments can send in a letter to exempt themselves from the law until January. The issue of whether or not to request that exemption came before the Goodland and Sherman County commissions this week.

Both City Attorney Jerry Fairbanks and County Attorney Charles Moser recommended the exemption letter be sent, saying it is best to wait and see what the attorney general's office makes of the law before we have to begin dealing with it.

"It gives us six more months to figure out what the requirements are going to be," Moser said. "The attorney general's office is expected to send out their interpretation hopefully by the end of the month."

One question that will have to be answered, said City Manager Doug Gerber, is whether or not municipal judges will still be allowed to ban guns in the courtroom. The law allows district court judges to ban concealed guns, but does not specifically mention municipal court. Gerber said he expects a lot of cities to request the attorney general's opinion on this issue.

The law does allow governments and state agencies to continue to ban

Bike Safety Roundup to be held Saturday

Several local organizations are sponsoring a Bicycle Safety Roundup for kids ages 6 to 11 from 8 to 10 a.m. Saturday in the Elks Club parking lot.

The event is being put on by the The Goodland Police Department, Sherman County Sheriff's Office, the Goodland Elks Club, Goodland Area Crime Stoppers and the Sunflower Extension Office.

Kids will bring their bikes for city registration, a safety check, games and an obstacle course. There will be prizes and snacks.

Meeting planned on homeschooling

Educator Laurie Klemm will hold an informational meeting for anyone interested in participating in a homeschool group in Goodland and surrounding area at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Casale home – 10th and Clark.

Klemm has 18 years of experience homeschooling her own children as well as four years teaching in a public school classroom setting and four years working for two virtual schools in Kansas. She is currently a kindergarten through sixth grade teacher with Maize Virtual Preparatory School, and supports families across the state who homeschool their children.

Topics of discussion will include the differences between independent homeschooling and virtual education, identifying the needs and goals of the local community to establish a homeschool group, promoting a support group for parents and providing opportunities for students to engage in enrichment activities and field trips.

For more information, call 899-5804 or email laurie@the-homesteadranch.com.

Local 'hams' to broadcast from Colby on Saturday

When trouble is brewing, Amateur Radio's people are often the first to provide rescuers with critical information and communications. On the weekend of June 22 and 23, the public will have a chance to meet and talk with ham radio operators from Goodland and Colby and see for themselves what the Amateur Radio Service is about as hams across the USA will be holding public demonstrations of emergency communications abilities.

Goodland's amateur radio operators will be joining with Colby's this year at Colby airport's Shalz Field from 1 p.m. Saturday to 1 p.m. Sunday, for the annual event, called "Field Day. It is the climax of the week long "Amateur Radio Week" sponsored by the American Radio Relay League. Using only emergency power supplies, ham operators will construct emergency stations in parks, shopping malls, schools and backyards around the country. Their slogan, "When All Else Fails, Ham Radio Works" is more than just words to the hams as they prove they can send messages in many forms without the use of phone systems, internet or any other infrastructure that can be compromised in a crisis.

Cattle candy contains nutrients

A U.S. patent has been granted to a Kansas State University-developed "candy" that stimulates the growth, health and reproductive functions of cattle, bulls and other livestock.

Jim Drouillard, professor of animal sciences and industry, discovered a specific combination of molasses, oilseeds and oilseed extracts that when heated and evaporated, formed a substance that improves absorption of specific omega-3 fatty acids.

"It's a free-choice type of supplement in a block form -- sort of like a big, 250-pound piece of fancy for livestock," Drouillard said. "It's put in the pasture and the animals consume it whenever they want. The product's physical characteristics restrict the animals to consuming less than a pound each day, making it a convenient and cost effective way to deliver essential nutrients."

The substance contains desirable fats that elevate levels of specific omega-3 fatty acids in the bloodstream. The increases in omega-3 fatty acids can stimulate growth, improve immunity and enhance reproduction function and overall fertility in livestock that consume the supplement.

New Generation Feeds, a South Dakota-based company, has retained exclusive rights to the patented technology for use in its SmartLic brand of livestock supplements. The process is used in making the company's HorsLic supplement for equines and FlaxLic supplement for beef and dairy cattle.

The patent, "Product and process for elevating lipid blood levels in livestock," is issued to the Kansas State University Research Foundation, a nonprofit corporation responsible for managing technology transfer activities at the university.

Drouillard is continuing research on the combination by working to improve the fats' resistance to bacteria in the digestive system.

Business does conversions

By Ron Wilson

Randy went on to solve cooling and fuel-related problems at the request of other Great Race teams. Since then, Randy has developed more than 40 specialized products to make all types of antique vehicles more reliable and fun to drive.

Watching the Great Race was a Hollywood movie director. He ended up using Randy's improvements for antique cars in movies such as Devil in a Blue Dress, Lolita, LA Confidential and Indiana Jones.

Another spectator at the Great Race was a representative of the British Crown. Randy got a call from someone identifying himself as the Royal Minister of Transportation, stating that he was requesting Randy's services on behalf of the Queen of England. "Yeah, right," Randy thought. "Which one of my buddies put this guy up to this?"

But the call was for real. As part of the Queen's participation in the 48th anniversary of the Pan American Games opening ceremony, she wanted to ride in the same 1951 Cadillac limousine in which she had ridden with her mother at the very first opening ceremony. Randy helped restore and rebuild this automobile in which the Queen successfully took her ride. He would later receive a note from the Queen on palace stationery, thanking Randy for his services to the Royal Family.

In 2012, the owner of an orange grove in California had a problem with the engines on his wind machines which are used to protect the oranges from winter frost. The repair for those engines was provided by Fifth Avenue Antique Auto Parts.

Now Randy is celebrating 25 years in business. He has customers in all 50 states, every Canadian province and sixteen foreign countries.

That's a remarkable accomplishment for a business in the rural community of Clay Center, population 4,525 people. Now, that's rural.

For more information, go to www.fifthavenueinternetgarage.com.

It's time to leave the Queen of England and the royal car which was restored with help from a business in the middle of Kansas. We commend Randy Rundle of Fifth Avenue Antique Auto Parts for making a difference with his expertise and innovation. For rural Kansas, it's a crowning achievement.

Director
Huck Boyd National Institute for Rural Development at Kansas State University
It's the opening ceremony of the Pan American Games. Down the street comes a special dignitary: the Queen of England in a vintage 1951 Cadillac limousine. When that car was rebuilt, where do you suppose they found the necessary expertise? Would you believe, at a shop in the middle of rural Kansas? Thanks to Michelle Tessaro of KCLY radio for this Kansas Profile story idea.

Randy Rundle is owner of Fifth Avenue Antique Auto Parts in Clay Center. His unique auto shop is helping power antique vehicles that travel coast to coast, and even carry the Queen.

At age twelve, Randy became fascinated with antique Chevy trucks. While in school, he started buying, repairing, and selling these vehicles. These trucks used a six-volt electrical system which would later be replaced by a twelve-volt alternator system in newer models built by the car-makers. Unfortunately those alternators only worked on the twelve-volt system, not the older models.

"I decided all of those six-volt vehicles needed fixing and I was just the guy to do it," Randy said. After lots of research and tinkering in the shop, he devised a reliable six-volt alternator system which could successfully replace the older style system. In 1987, Randy opened Fifth Avenue Antique Auto Parts to market these products in his hometown of Clay Center. His storefront displays an actual front end of a yellow 1949 Chevrolet - with working headlights and auto horn!

To promote his new six-volt alternator, Randy got involved with the Great Race, an annual vintage car rally in which pre-1940 cars are driven 4,500 miles across the United States in just two weeks time. Of course, those cars used the old six-volt system.

Randy got a driver to try his new alternator and the, um, race was on. In 1991, Fifth Avenue Antique Auto Parts provided a New York driver and his 1929 Dodge Sport Roadster with Randy's alternator. That car won the Great Race in 1993. Having proven his six-volt alternator, acreage reports for all spring- and summer-planted crops are due by Monday, July 15. This includes any planted acreage of corn, milo, dry beans, soybeans, sorghum forage, or sunflowers.

The Sherman County Farm Service Agency office is reminding farmers that deadlines are approaching for two programs.

Farmers will also want to ensure any alfalfa, Conservation Reserve Program grass, and native grass interests are reported as well. The county office can be reached at 899-3070.

The final day to enroll in the 2013 Direct and Counter-Cyclical Program is Friday, Aug. 2. The 2013 program is unchanged from 2012.

Producers should contact the Farm Service Agency County Office to schedule an appointment. Only about one third of all Sherman County farmers have enrolled in the program so far. The county typically has 98 percent participation or better.

Visitors stop at Van Gogh

Tuesday a bus load of people from Schulenburg, Texas, stopped after lunch to see the Van Gogh painting. The group of 36 had been to Mt. Rushmore, Yellowstone and Crazy Horse. Schulenburg is a town of 3,300 people between Houston and San Antonio.

They had stopped for lunch before heading south to Dodge City and home. When asked how they liked the painting they said "Awesome."

Nomination period starts soon

The nomination period for Farm Service Agency county committees is now open.

"I encourage all eligible farmers and ranchers to participate in this year's county committee elections by nominating candidates by the August 1 deadline," said State Executive Director Adrian J. Polansky. "County committees are a vital link between the farm community and the U.S. Department of Agriculture and provide an opportunity to farmers and ranchers for their opinions and ideas to be heard. We have been seeing an increase in the number of nominations of women and minority candidates and I hope that trend continues."

To be eligible to serve on a county committee, a person must participate or cooperate in a program administered by the Farm Service Agency, be eligible to vote in a county committee election and reside in the local administrative area in which the person is a candidate.

Farmers and ranchers may nominate themselves or others, and organizations representing minorities and women also may nominate candidates. To become a candidate, an eligible individual must sign the nomination form, FSA-669A. The form and other information about FSA county committee elections are available online at www.fsa.usda.gov/elections.

Nomination forms for the 2013 election must be postmarked or received in the local U.S. Department of Agriculture Service Center—210 W. 10th in Goodland - by close of business on Thursday, Aug. 1. Elections will take place this fall.

While county committees do not approve or deny farm ownership or operating loans, they make decisions on disaster and conservation programs, emergency programs, commodity price support loan programs and other agricultural issues. Members serve three-year terms. Nationwide, there are about 7,800 farmers and ranchers serving on county committees. Committees consist of three to 11 members that are elected by eligible producers.

The Farm Service Agency will mail ballots to eligible voters beginning Nov. 4. The voted ballots are due back to the local county office either via mail or in person by Dec. 2. Newly elected committee members and alternates take office on Jan. 1, 2014.

Farm safety easy to overlook when busy

While it costs money to sit idle on the farm, lose precious daylight waiting for assistance or take a break from the tractor cab, there is nothing more costly than a life lost to a mistake regarding farm safety.

Most farmers know the rules of turning off engines while checking machine parts or being sure to use a seat belt and keep kids out of grain cart piles. Basic safety rings in every farmer's head while driving the field rows but it's easy to ignore rules and take a short cut in an attempt to complete a task quickly.

The Kansas Corn Commission applauds the diligent work of farmers and also offers these tips to keep farmers and their family's safe during the busiest and most stressful season of the year.

With school out for the summer and kids at home, it's a good idea to give them a refresher course. Don't let them play on or around grain.

Always have a helper nearby when entering grain bins, breeding pens or other high-risk areas.

Practice grain bin safety. The Kansas Corn Commission offers a grain bin safety video free to upon request. Due to an increase in U.S. fatalities and injuries associated with entry into grain bins, the National Corn Growers Association and the National Grain and Feed Foundation also produced a video promoting awareness about grain bin safety on the farm. The video, shot on location in several states, provides a wide range of information from prevention tips and background data on grain bin accidents.

The project also includes interviews with professionals in the fields of grain bin safety research and rescue to provide as much information to viewers as possible.

No seat, no rider. Don't ask to ride and don't encourage others to ride in a cab without the proper seat and a seat belt. Prohibit riders on tractor fenders, hitches, attachments or implements.

Be sure to wear sunscreen and hats. Skin cancer lurks for most farmers who work in direct sun. Wear dust masks when around dust. Don't wear loose clothing around equipment or work areas.

Walk around moving machine parts and don't remove shields. Wear protective equipment when on recreational vehicles and most importantly, drive them sensibly. Shield all PTO-powered equipment drive shafts and keep kids at a distance from them.

Never exit a tractor or truck without placing it in park or engaging the emergency brakes and don't leave running power equipment unattended. A good rainy day or morning activity is to check and maintain equipment, especially hydraulic hoses and electrical cables showing cracks or other signs of wear.

Outfit tractors and farm trucks with fire extinguishers and first aid kits.

Deadlines approach for two programs

The Sherman County Farm Service Agency office is reminding farmers that deadlines are approaching for two programs.

acreage reports for all spring- and summer-planted crops are due by Monday, July 15. This includes any planted acreage of corn, milo, dry beans, soybeans, sorghum forage, or sunflowers.

Farmers will also want to ensure any alfalfa, Conservation Reserve Program grass, and native grass interests are reported as well. The county office can be reached at 899-3070.

The final day to enroll in the 2013 Direct and Counter-Cyclical Program is Friday, Aug. 2. The 2013 program is unchanged from 2012.

Producers should contact the Farm Service Agency County Office to schedule an appointment.

Only about one third of all Sherman County farmers have enrolled in the program so far. The county typically has 98 percent participation or better.

from our viewpoint...

Enough openness to know when we're victimized

When the president admits the government operates a massive electronic spying network which scoops up data on our phone calls, our e-mails, our Internet traffic and who knows what all else, but promises this power will be used only against our enemies, do we believe him?

We're sure he means it.

He's not too happy that the secret is out, but many assumed this was going on all along. If it's possible, then you have to figure, some government agency will be doing it. When they say they are not listening to us, just collecting data, we have to believe them, right?

And when the president says safeguards built into the system ensure that it can never be used to spy on Americans, should we trust him?

No. And here's why.

We've already seen that the power of government can and will be used against domestic foes by an administration, Democrat or Republican. We need look no farther than the Internal Revenue Service, where senior managers apparently saw nothing wrong with targeting "Tea Party"-aligned nonprofit groups that opposed the administration while green-lighting similar, but liberal-minded, agencies.

But remember Richard Nixon and his pre-Watergate enemies list? He proposed siccing the IRS on his detractors.

One of the dangers of big government is that it concentrates so much power in the hands of a relative few, while the bureaucracy makes it difficult to hold anyone accountable for abuse. The National Security Agency which runs the computer snooping programs is so secretive that Washington wags used to say the initials NSA stood for "No Such Agency."

In the coming era, what's to keep the system from turning on the citizens who paid to create it? Nothing but the integrity of those who run it, and we've already seen what that amounts to.

Lord Acton, the British historian, said, "Power corrupts, and absolute power tends to corrupt absolutely."

He also said, "And remember, where you have a concentration of power in a few hands, all too frequently, men with the mentality of gangsters get control. History has proven that."

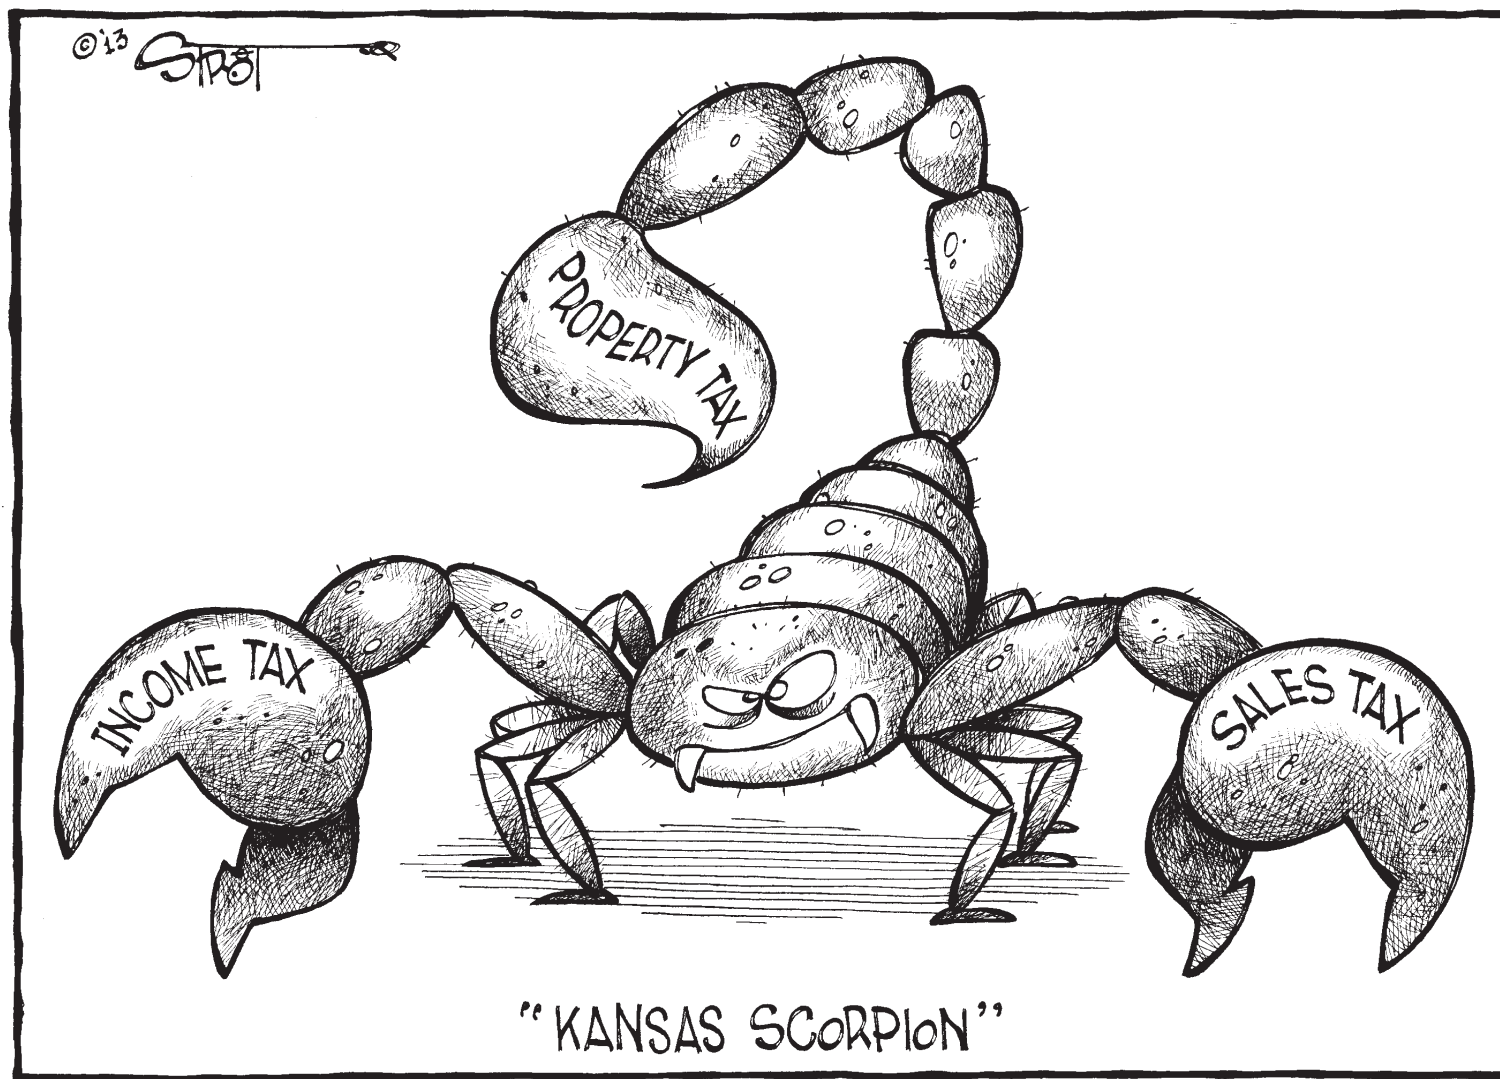

It's not that the government has designed a system to spy on those who might threaten it. It's that the system exists, and it could, almost certainly will, be turned against the people.

The same techniques built to track terrorists can and will be applied to law enforcement. Eventually, they'll be available to rogue elements, and some, like the rotten-apple IRS executives persecuting the tea partiers, or the Watergate gang, will use them.

As serious scientists gather to discuss the potential of transferring human intelligence to computer systems, it's time to realize that the electronic behemoth itself is a threat to our liberty.

Yes, we should be worried. If "they" are not listening to us today, they could be tomorrow. Such power is easy to abuse.

It's difficult to stop or even slow the advance of technology, but somewhere, somehow, we need to learn to control it and reign in its potential for abuse, to create enough transparency to allow us to know when we are the victims, before even that becomes something to be tracked. — Steve Haynes

Make it a safe harvest

Long hours, a flurry of activity, less-than-ideal weather and work involving large machinery combine to make wheat harvest a potentially dangerous period.

To say farmers are busy during this time would be an understatement. Try to call one after 7 a.m. or before 10 p.m. and you'll be wasting your time. They're not home; they're in the field or shop preparing for harvest.

Wheat harvest marks the pinnacle of nearly a year's effort to produce this crop. Farmers and custom cutters work long, hard hours. Fifteen-minute meal breaks are about the only real time off in days that often stretch 14 hours or more. If the weather cooperates, cutting usually begins about 9 a.m. and continues until midnight, or when the grain becomes too moist or too tough to cut. People and machines are pushed to their limits.

While every machine — combine, truck, grain cart, tractor or auger — provides its own unique hazards, operator stress or error account for the majority of harvest accidents. Years of safety features built into these machines are useless without operator safety. Exceed human limitations, and accidents are bound to follow. Operator knowledge and attitude remain the key to a smooth, well-oiled wheat harvest. A safe operator knows his skills, limitations and condition, both physical and emotional.

Insight this week

• john schlageck

The safety-conscious operator knows his equipment, its condition, capacities, limitations, hazards and safety features. Such an operator is constantly monitoring field and weather conditions.

In Kansas, thousands of acres of wheat need to be cut. Add to the pressure the need to slice through those acres before hail or windstorm destroys the bountiful crop. With this added pressure comes the desire to take chances, short cuts and extend working hours. Such behavior only adds to fatigue and high levels of stress and tension.

Remember, harvest will take its toll if you don't take breaks. Eating balanced meals, even if you only take 15 minutes, is important. Stop the machine. Crawl off and relax a few minutes while you're eating.

Drink plenty of water, tea or other cold liquids during the hot, dry days of wheat harvest. Jump out of your machine for these breaks at least every hour.

Walk around the machine to limber up. This will also allow you to check for possible trouble spots on your combine.

Before harvest begins, check your equipment and perform the proper maintenance. Consult your operator's manual or dealer if you have any questions. Well-maintained machinery reduces the chance for breakdowns and related aggravation in the wheat field.

Delays due to breakdown only force harvest crews to work longer and harder to catch up. Such delays also increase the chance of accidents during this catch-up period.

Some farmers, they may have kept some combines longer than they should have. Treat these "old-timers" with care. They'll need additional preventative and routine maintenance.

Pulling preharvest maintenance is easier and less frustrating than fixing problems in the heat, dirt and sweat of the harvest field. Reduce your chances of aggravation now. It'll be worth it.

Spy news is old news

Why is the establishment press just now acknowledging the idea that our own government has been spying on us when credible witnesses and whistleblowers have offered documentation on this for years? Everyone is now talking about the huge secret spy NSA facility in Bluffdale, Utah the size of five capital buildings scheduled for completion this September, as though this is something new. I had myself photographed in front of the site last September (see at LibertyUnderFire.org). The networks and Congress seemed shocked at the revelation but Congress had to authorize the $2 billion facility expenditure for Bluffdale and a similar amount for a sister NSA facility in Oak Ridge, Tennessee. All of this is simply old news.

What follows is what we knew more than a year ago. Wired magazine front-paged this story a year ago last April when it wrote: "Deep in the Utah desert, the National Security Agency is building the country's biggest spy center. It's the final piece of a secret surveillance network that will intercept and store your phone calls, emails, Google searches... (Watch what you say)."

Noted author James Banford, one of America's leading authorities on the National Security Agency, then wrote, "Under construction by contractors with top-secret clearances, the blandly named Utah Data Center is being built for the National Security Agency. A project of immense secrecy, it is the final piece in a complex puzzle assembled over the past decade. Its purpose: to intercept, decipher, analyze, and store vast swaths of the world's communications as they zap down from satellites and zip through the underground and undersea cables of international, foreign, and domestic networks... Flowing through its servers and routers and stored in near-bottomless databases will be all forms of communication, including the complete contents of private emails, cell phone calls, and Google searches, as well as all sorts of personal data trails — parking receipts, travel itineraries, bookstore purchases, and other digital "pocket litter" ("The NSA Is Building the Country's Biggest Spy Center. Watch What You Say.") The project is code named "Stellar Wind."

In the scheme of things, launched in 2004 under the George W. Bush Administration, but vastly expanded under Barack Obama, the NSA Bluffdale facility will house all electronic information in the world. That is why it is being from other pens

• dr. harold pease

equipped to hold a Yottabyte of information. A Yottabyte is 1,000 Zettabytes (the number 1 followed by 24 zeros — 1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000). So Bluffdale is primarily a storage facility. The philosophy is that the "more data, the more telephone calls, the more email, the more encrypted data that you have — the more patterns that you're likely to discover."

The NSA Oak Ridge facility houses the super computer, installed in 2006, capable of finding patterns and printing them out in milliseconds in a process code named "brute force." The "goal was to advance computer speed a thousand fold, creating a machine that could execute a quadrillion (10¹⁵) operations a second, known as a petaflop — the computer equivalent of breaking the land speed record." With upgrades the computer, called "jaguar for its speed, it clocked in at 1.75 petaflops, officially becoming the world's fastest computer in 2009," is housed in Building 5300. There "318 scientists, computer engineers, and other staff work in secret on the cryptanalytic applications of high-speed computing and other classified projects" (Cryptome, March 16, 2012, "NSA Decryption Multipurpose Research Facility").

NSA Whistleblower William Binney said, "Domestically, they're pulling together all the data about virtually every U.S. citizen in the country and assembling that information, building communities that you have relationships with, and knowledge about you; what your activities are; what you're doing. So the government is accumulating that kind of information about every individual person and it's a very dangerous process." He estimated that one telecom alone was sending the government an "average of 320 million logs every day since 2001."

So, when the Los Angeles Times reported on June 6, 2013 that "Government is tracking all U.S. phone calls," that "The National Security Agency has stored data on calls to and from nearly every American for 7 years in search of patterns suggesting terrorist activity," and that officials still say that they are not eavesdropping, it is still a lie, a matter of public record, and thus old news. It is great to see the establishment press catch up. Now who authorized these millions of unconstitutional warrantless wire tapes on you and your friends and who signed off on funding the billions of dollars for these facilities? Will the Congress catch-up too, investigating what should have been looked into years ago? Not unless you push them.

and good with kids. Sandy Rodgers said the city can regulate pit bulls and other vicious dogs without the stigma of a ban. She suggested that some of the language could be added to the city's vicious dog ordinance. "I believe this is a people problem," she said. "You have to decide this in a case by case basis and it looks more fair if all dogs are treated equally." Rodgers said problem owners are not going to straighten up just because of this ordinance. Tanya Ramirez said pit bulls have a bad enough rap without a ban inspiring more fear and spreading discrimination. She suggested holding seminars about ways to reduce dog bites or attacks. She agreed with Quint that most owners could comply with all the regulations except insurance. Thomas Lamb said according to his research, most bans have been failures, leading to a rise in the illegal breeds. Osawatomie and Garden City are in the process of repealing their pit bull bans, he said. Lamb said he had spoken to several lawyers about the proposed ordinance, and said the mandatory spaying and neutering as well as the microchip requirement violates the Fourth Amendment, in that private information could be relayed to agencies that have no business having it. He said the grandfathering clause should mean that current owners would be exempt from the any new conditions imposed. "There has been a lot of court testimony that it is human action or inaction that causes these dogs to be vicious," he said. "Any dog can be taught anything." City Attorney Jerry Fairbanks said this ordinance has come before Kansas Supreme Court and been upheld. The court ruled it a valid exercise of city powers, he said. Lamb told the commission that there is a business owner in town who brings his pit bull to work, and it shows no aggression around people. His own two pit bulls have also never harmed anyone, he said. "I understand where these provisions are coming from," he said,

"but it feels like we're being punished for something we have not done yet." Veterinary Assistant Kylee Martin said she used to think pit bulls would bite anyone, but her experience has taught her otherwise. Martin questioned part of the ordinance about requiring pit bulls to be on a leash even while in a fenced-in yard, saying that the dog could hurt itself if left alone like that. She also agreed with Ramirez that more education might be needed because many kids do not know how to act around dogs. Veterinarian Mariah Berry said she does not believe in banning any breed. She said the city has had an incident where a child had been flown to Denver because of a bad bite from a husky. Berry and Rodgers also said the city needs to enforce the vicious dog ordinance it already has. Jerry Fairbanks said the city does its best, and that the municipal court is often filled with dog complaints, but it is a difficult law to enforce. "We hear: 'we're good people, it's a good dog,'" he said. "Often people are reluctant to testify against their neighbor in a vicious dog incident for fear of reprisal. We can't do anything until someone is willing to testify." Fairbanks also said there many people who can't pay the fines. Commissioner Brian Linin said he appreciated the comments and that he is hearing that people are consistently against the ban, especially on the insurance issue. He said he feels like the city is limited because of the vicious dog ordinance because in many cases there is not much it can do. He said the city may want to look at whether similar ordinances in other communities have worked, and perhaps instead of a ban, they could look at heightened requirements for owners. Commissioner Gary Farris said the law shouldn't be breed-specific. "If you got a vicious dog owner, throw him in jail and fine the heck out of him," he said. Annette Fairbanks directed Gerber to look at ways of making the ordinance softer without compromising its objective, and bring it back to a future meeting.

City and county ponder new concealed carry law

concealed guns in their buildings through 2017 as long as there is adequate security at those buildings or if they plan to install that security. Moser said this mostly means metal detectors at public entrances. "The large majority of counties won't have that," he said. If the county wanted to put in those security measures, he said, it would have to be either a walk-through metal detector or an officer with a wand stationed at each entrance. Either option would be expensive. The city commission voted to send the letter, which has to be done before the law takes effect. "Let's send it so we got six months for everyone to work stuff out," said Commissioner Gary Farris. The county commission did not vote on the issue at their Tuesday meeting. Commissioner Ken Klamm said he was in favor of the law and did not see a need to wait to implement it. The law excludes school districts and allows universities, community colleges and technical colleges to get a waiver to continue banning concealed guns until 2017. Northwest Kansas Technical College President Dr. Ed Mills said the Kansas Regents are going with this waiver, which means concealed weapons will continue to be banned on campus. Mills said the problem for universities and colleges and is that the sole provider of liabilities insurance for these institutions in Kansas has sent letters out to each college president saying their policy will be dropped if they allow concealed carry on campus. "Colleges just can't operate without insurance," he said.

Gardening is family tradition

By Kay Melia

The Gardener

the gardener

When I was a kid, my Grandma Skeen grew a five and a half pound beet in her garden, and before she and her kids ate it, she took it down to the local newspaper office and asked if they would like to take a picture of it. They did. Grandma Skeen was very careful not to get in the picture.

That event would have occurred in 1939 when I was nine years old. I had never before seen such a large beet, but Grandma Skeen allowed as to how it had been a common occurrence in her garden over the years, and "you should see my watermelons!"

Grandma Skeen was Indiana born in 1869. She migrated to the Nebraska panhandle where she married Grandpa Skeen. To this union was born nine kids, the first four of which died in infancy. My mother was number eight on the list. The family moved to Southwest Kansas where Grandpa bought a nice farm, but promptly lost it after a few years of hard times. You see, Grandpa Skeen was a noted horse trader, trained mules and traveled all over the midwest doing his thing. He didn't seem to cotton too much to the family life, so Grandma Skeen divorced him and proceeded to raise those five kids on her own.

Grandma Skeen was a gardener! Man, was a she ever a gardener! With five kids and income only from a little nursing (she was not a nurse) and a little midwifing, she was able to make ends meet. But her income from gardening was far greater than anything she was able to make from some of those extra curricular activities. Her garden was huge! Two or three of the kids were still at home to help with the heavy lifting. Grandma Skeen had a half acre of potatoes every year, a very large patch of watermelon and cantaloupe, dozens of tomato vines and lots of cabbage and green beans.

Most of Grandma Skeen's produce was sold right there near the garden where she set up a roadside stand just off Highway 54. In addition to the sales, she canned and stored lots of stuff for family use in the winter.

In my mind, I can still see Grandma Skeen in her garden in the later years where she tended a small plot in town. She always wore a long dress, with a long apron down to her knees. And always, always Grandma Skeen wore a big sun bonnet. The front part was heavily starched and protruded far out from her face to protect her from the sun.

I knew Grandma Skeen for only a little over 20 years, but when I was old enough to notice, I never have seen anyone since who raised more vegetables and flowers. She passed away in 1956 and gardened right up to the time she died.

I credit Grandma Skeen with passing down her gardening prowess to me, through my mother, who was also a special gardener. Of course, you don't see many backyard gardeners anymore who actually make a living from what they grow. Roadside garden stands just don't seem to exist anymore. But then, neither do horse traders!

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Rookie League in full swing

The Goodland Activity Center's Rookie league—for ages 6 to 8—is in full swing at the ballfields. There are five boys teams and three girls teams this year including Goodland Glass (left), Vignery and Mason and Cure and Bain (above) and the Sherman County Sheriff's Department (right). The Rookie teams play Tuesdays at 5:45 and 7 p.m. The season will run through July 16, when there will be a single-elimination tournament.

Goodland Swim Team gets third victory in season-long win streak

The Goodland Swim Team competed in its third meet of the year and continued its winning streak. They swam at Oakley on Saturday and scored 307 points. Colby placed second with 228 points. Swimmers set six records, won 19 individual gold medals and 11 relay teams were winners.

The team will complete in Colby on Saturday.

Brennan Overton (13-14 boys) set two pool records in the 50-yard freestyle (25.28) and 100-yard backstroke (1:07.09). He also won the 100-yard breaststroke (1:19.33).

Dusty Johnson (13-14 boys) won all three of his races; 100-yard freestyle (1:03.18), 100-yard butterfly (1:15.82) and 200-yard individual medley (2:45.86).

Leyton Cure (9-10 boys) beat the record in the 25-yard freestyle (14.29).

Devontay Hardy (8 and under boys) won all three of his races; 50-yard freestyle (40.80), 25-yard freestyle (18.37) and 25-yard butterfly (25.80).

Winning two races each were Lindsey Cure (8 and under girls) 50-yard freestyle (39.4) and 25-yard freestyle (17.05) and Ian Bonsall (15-18 boys) 100-yard freestyle (53.91) and 50-yard freestyle (25.04).

We hope you have a safe, fun-filled summer!

We hope you liked our Summer Youth Sports Section. This is the first time we have tried this section, and between trying to find the teams and coaches and dealing with weather delays, it has been a challenge. We know we weren't able to get everyone in. Many of the traveling baseball and softball teams were finished by the time we scheduled this section, and because of trouble with the weather we were unable to get a picture of the First National Bank Bambino league baseball team or the Gambino's Pizza T-Ball team. Rest assured we will be getting pictures of them and including them in a future edition of the Goodland Star News. If your summer sports team was missed, please let us know by stopping by the office or calling 890-2338 so we can make sure you get in the paper, and especially in next year's Summer Youth Sports Section.
