City considers work on wastewater plant

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansanews.com

The Goodland City Commission heard recommendations for upgrades to the city's wastewater treatment plant at their regular meeting June 17.

Gerber said the city has had some trouble meeting some new regulations, and improvements may be needed. He turned the meeting over to Jim Coleman with engineering firm EBH, who said that the city is noncompliant with regulations on biological oxygen demand and total suspended solids—meaning the water coming out of the plant either has not enough oxygen or too many solids.

The city's wastewater plant is governed by the Kansas Department of Health and Environment.

"You have a really unique and very good permit under KDHE," he said.

Coleman said it is important to keep up with maintenance and improvements at the plant.

"Everything out there is 1970s tech," he said.

The last time any upgrades were done was 1984.

Coleman recommended the headworks—where the water first enters the plant—be cleaned up and either modified or moved. He recommended better equipment to separate the grit from the water and wash it. He said this technology must be put inside.

Coleman also recommended modifications to the digester and sludge basin. Currently the plant has a steel tank, which Coleman said is not allowed any more, though the city might be able to keep it if it is maintained properly. The digester is working OK, he said, but the city should consider replacing sludge pumps with

Hospital to tighten smoking regs

Goodland Regional Medical Center will celebrate independence Day without any smoke or lighting up this year. On Thursday, July 4, the hospital will officially become a smoke free and tobacco free campus and is encouraging others to "Go Smoke Free with GRMC!"

The hospital has been a smoke free facility for many years and has complied with recent statewide smoking guidelines that prohibit smoking within 10 feet of any public facility. However, those restrictions will be expanded as of July 4 to include all of the hospital's property.

The hospital Board of Trustees adopted the new policy, which was developed by an employee committee and approved by the hospital's medical staff, after the board made the smoke-free, tobacco-free cam-

Deforestation can affect crops

High crop prices are great for the Kansas economy, but the conversion of trees along streams and rivers into cropland will cost everyone in the long run. Removing riparian forests, forestland adjacent to streams and rivers, negatively affects water quality and quantity.

According to Bruce Yonke, district conservationist with the Natural Resource Conservation Service in Jackson County, "Many trees are being removed without regard to the environmental benefits they provide and before my office can make wetlands determinations."

Riparian forests will have the most influence on water quality where field runoff follows direct, shallow flow paths from the uplands to the streams. Landowners should consider leaving a distance of two times the active channel width in timber on both sides of their streams and rivers.

The Kansas Forest Service's main concern is that these reservoirs are filling up with sediment.

If a landowner would like to plant a riparian forest on their land, the first step is visiting a local United States Department of Agriculture service center. Talk with the local conservationist and contact the Kansas Forest Service. They will visit the site for free to discuss the landowner's options. They can guide the landowner through the process. Foresters can also advise landowners about appropriate widths of riparian forests that should be protected to provide long-term water quality and quantity benefits to the people of Kansas.

For information, go to the Kansas Forest Service website, www.kansasforests.org.

State launches plan to preserve forests

Each time Bob Atchison sees kids playing in a park, a family having a picnic, or an American bald eagle building a nest in a tall Kansas cottonwood, he tends to get more passionate about his job.

As the rural forestry coordinator for the Kansas Forest Service, Atchison has a broad perspective toward the state's 5.2 million acres of forest land.

"Healthy forests, woodlands and windbreaks are as important to our national infrastructure as roads and bridges," Atchison said. "The jobs and products they produce are worth protecting."

In Kansas, 95 percent of forest land is privately owned. It's why Atchison and others connected to the state's forest service spent much of the past three years drafting an action plan to help educate families, and support them in protecting this natural resource.

The Kansas Forest Action Plan is part of an effort headed by the National Association of State Foresters and the U.S. Forest Service to manage and maintain the country's 423 million acres of private forests, and 100 million acres of urban forests.

Atchison said there are three types of forests in Kansas: agroforests that include windbreaks and streamside trees that surround croplands; community or urban forests that line main streets, parks and yards in local communities; and the rural forests and woodlands located primarily in the eastern third of Kansas. These forests are crucial for everyday life, he said, because trees and other woodlands can filter air and water, making them safer for humans. But they also contribute to quality of life because they provide recreational opportunities and even a nice place to relax in the shade.

Plus, it is estimated that forestry-related businesses contribute $1.3 billion to the state's economy, and support more than 6,700 jobs.

The Kansas Forest Action Plan was finalized in 2013 and is now being implemented. It identifies threats to Kansas forests and will help state officials target resources efficiently, "especially in these tough economic times," Atchison said.

Those threats include pests such as emerald ash borer; thousand cankers disease of black walnut; pine wilt; and exotic invasive plants like tamarisk, Russian olive and Amur honeysuckle that threaten the health of woodlands and wildlife.

The plan can be accessed online at www.kansasforests.org/about/about.shtml. More information also is available by contacting the Kansas Forest Service at (785) 532-3300.

American Kennel Club offers tips for dog safety

Hot weather can make us all uncomfortable, and it poses special risks for your dog. Keep the following safety concerns in mind as the temperature rises, and follow these tips from the American Kennel Club to keep your dog cool.

Heat Hazards

If your dog is outside on a hot day, make sure he has a shady spot to rest in. Doghouses are not good shelter during the summer as they can trap heat. You may want to fill a child's wading pool with fresh water for your dog to cool off in.

Never leave your dog in a closed vehicle on a hot day. The temperature inside a car can rise to over 100 degrees in a matter of minutes.

Always provide plenty of cool, fresh water.

Avoid strenuous exercise on extremely hot days. Take walks in the early mornings or evenings, when the sun's heat is less intense.

Try to avoid prolonged exposure to hot asphalt or sand, which can burn your dog's paws.

Dogs that are brachycephalic (short-faced), such as Bulldogs, Boxers, Japanese Chins, and Pekingese, have an especially hard time in the heat because they do not pant as efficiently as longer-faced dogs. Keep your brachycephalic dog inside with air-conditioning.

Travel

By Air - Many airlines will not ship animals during summer months due to dangers caused by hot weather. Some will only allow dogs to fly in the early morning or in the evening. Check with your airlines for specific rules.

If you do ship a dog, put icepacks or an ice blanket in the dog's crate. (Two-liter soft drink bottles filled with water and frozen work well.) Provide a container of fresh water, as well as a container of frozen water that will thaw over the course of the trip.

By Car - Keep your dog cool in the car by putting icepacks in his crate. Make sure the crate is well ventilated. Bring along fresh water and a bowl, and a tarp or tent so you can set up a shady spot when you stop. Keep a spray bottle filled with water to spritz on your dog.

By RV - A dog's safety should not depend on the air conditioning and generator systems in an RV or motor home. These devices can malfunction, with tragic results.

If you leave your dog in an RV with the generator running, check it often or have a neighbor monitor it. Some manufacturers have devices that will notify you if the generator should malfunction.

Never leave an RV or motor home completely shut up, even if the generator and AC are running. Crack a window or door or run the exhaust fan.

Never, ever leave a dog unattended in a vehicle in the summer months. Heatstroke and death can occur within minutes in warm temperatures.

Windbreaks have been added but are a lower priority. Most practices in the State Cost Share program are cost shared at 70% of average cost. The landowner limit is $6,000. The Non-Point source funds can be used for FAILING on site waste water systems and plugging abandoned wells. LEPA will have to evaluate and rank the applications and there will be a $300 fee up front for these services. The cost share rates are limited to 50% not exceed $2,500 on septic systems and 50% not to exceed $500 on abandoned wells.

Judges should be free to judge justly

Kansas, like many states, and the federal government, has tied judges' hands over the last couple of decades, setting up elaborate rules for determining who goes to jail and for how long – but leaving out the elements of judgement and common sense.

Judges used to have a lot of control over the kind of sentence criminals got in their courts. States moved from fixed sentences for each crime to variable, or indeterminate, sentences.

The penalty for a given crime would be a range of years, from six months to a year for a misdemeanor, to say two to five years for a minor felony and 10 to 15 for more serious crimes.

Then, judges had the authority to decide whether sentences for multiple crimes would run consecutively or concurrently. That it, a convict would begin serving, say, three concurrent sentences all at the same time, effectively meaning he (or she) would have to serve at least the "short end" of the longest term. If sentences were two to five years, eight to 10 and one to two, then the prisoner had to serve at least eight years before parole was possible. The shorter terms essentially didn't count.

If sentences were given to be served consecutively, however, it was a different matter. The order in which they were pronounced meant everything, because the convict had to serve the "long end" of the first one and the "short end" of the second.

A sentence of eight to 11 years, followed by a consecutive term of one to three, meant 12 years hard time, while the reverse meant 11. A judge who wanted to come down on someone could get pretty creative.

Judges also had wide latitude to grant probation for first-time offenders and others who seemed like good risks. Today, however, all that has been taken out of their hands.

Legislators upset by wide variation in sentencing, and wanting to crack down on drugs, started the ratchet up the rules. Eventually, states, Kansas included, produced sentencing "grids" factoring in criminal records, severity of crime, personal injury and other facts. Judges apply the facts of a given case to the grid and it produces as sentence. There's little "judgement" involved.

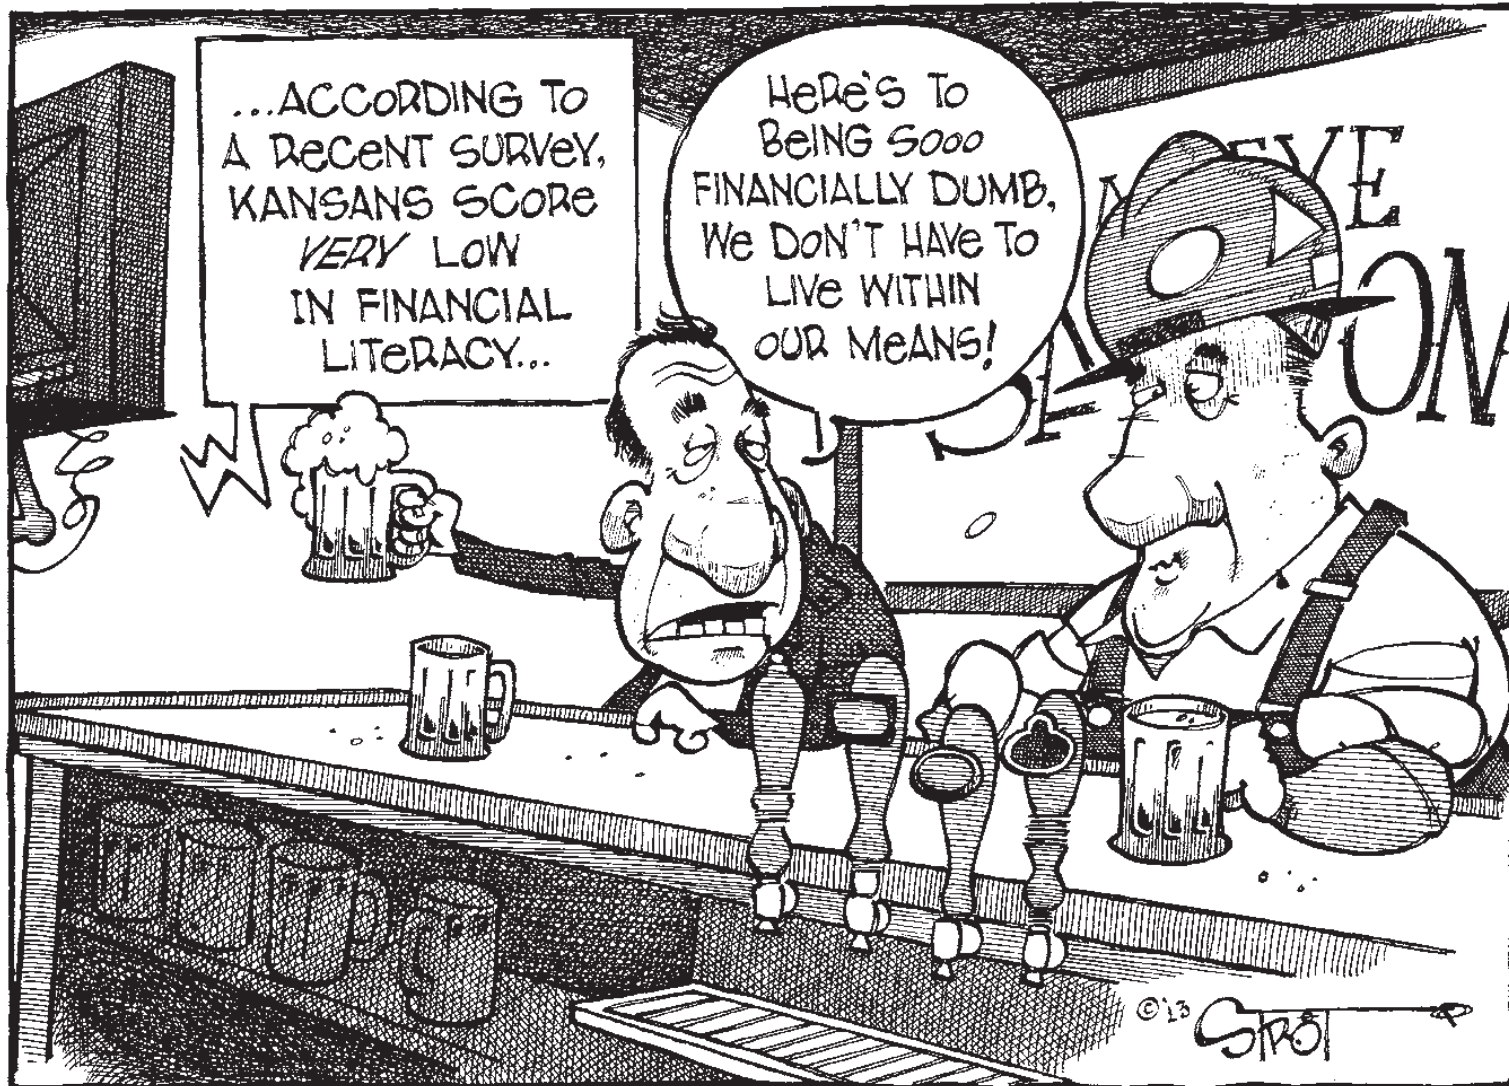

A recent burglary case in Saline County illustrates one problem with this. Two men apparently had set themselves up as professional burglars. There were on a roll, hitting business after business, sometimes several a night, until they finally were caught.

The men were charged with 13 counts of burglary, but because they had few prior arrests and a low "criminal history" score, the sentencing grid qualified them – for no prison time at all. They were ordered to serve 60 days in jail and put on probation by an obviously peeved judge. The judge told them men if she'd had her way, they would have been headed for the slammer. Because of the state's sentencing law, however, she couldn't. She did pronounce the men's sentences consecutively, but because of the rules on probation, it meant little.

Another problem with the sentencing grid is it allows heavier sentences for drug crimes than for many "property" crimes. Thus, we are filling up our jails with people convicted of relatively minor drug offenses while people like these burglars, who created a lot of grief, get off easy.

Today, there's hardly any free space in Kansas prisons, but we keep sending drug offenders to jail and let others, who may have done society more harm, off free, or at least easy. It makes no sense. The only solution we see is to go back to the days when judges were allowed to judge people and use some common sense in sentencing those who were convicted in their courts. It's not about treating every criminal the same, but about treating them all – and society – fairly and justly.

A grid just can't do that. – Steve Haynes

Keep false pride in check

I've been kinda blocked, so to say. Oh, I have plenty of ideas running through my head about topics I want to write about. And there is lots of stuff I want to say on those topics. But I've tried to keep this column pretty non-denominational and not preachy. But the fact is, I am a Christian woman. As a Christian woman, Christ affects every part of my life. Therefore my views and opinions are the views and opinions of a Christian woman. So I've had a tough time writing a column that hopefully doesn't offend anyone. In doing, I wonder if I've offended Christ.

I've been thinking a lot lately about pride. Not the good kind of humble pride that allows me to feel good about myself and gives me a desire to continue doing well. No, the "Pride goeth before destruction" kind of false pride that comes right before I am placed squarely back at the starting line.

I've known for a very long time that I get the best results from my effort when I also have Christ's efforts in my behalf. But when I get to thinking that I'm pretty terrific all by myself I usually screw the bolt in sideways.

I've always been the kind of person who hits the ground running and then engages mind. So when I'm given new opportunities I charge ahead full throttle, with only regard for getting things done. But I'm also OCD, so it needs to be done well also.

The truest example of insanity is doing the same thing over and over and expecting different results. From the experience of my past I know that "nothing changes until something changes" meaning that as humans we do the same thing over and over until we get sick of getting the same results. But if we want different results we must do at least one thing different.

So then there comes the need for change....

But the best reason for me to keep my false pride in check is that when someone is all puffed up in importance they are less likely to desire knowledge. They believe they already possess knowledge. But when a person is humble they realize that there is always an abundance of new knowledge and are at their most teachable state, learning ability is at its optimum.

As always, your views and opinions are welcome. To contact me directly, email me at littlefish_67@yahoo.com.

Yo he sido un poco bloqueada, por así decirlo. Oh, tengo muchas ideas por mi cabeza sobre temas que quiero escribir sobre. Y hay muchas cosas que quiero decir sobre esos temas. Pero he intentado mantener esta columna bastante laica y no sermones. Pero el hecho es que yo soy una mujer cristiana. Como una mujer cristiana, Christ afecta cada parte de mi vida. Por lo tanto mis opiniones y comentarios son las visiones y opiniones de una mujer cristiana. Así que he tenido un momento difícil escribir una columna que espero no ofende a nadie. Al hacerlo, me pregunto si he ofendido a Christ.

He estado pensando mucho últimamente sobre el orgullo. No es la buena clase de orgullo humilde que me siento bien permite y me da ganas de seguir haciendo bien. No, el tipo "Orgullo va antes de la destrucción" de falso orgullo que viene justo antes de que yo estoy en posición directamente en la línea de salida.

He conocido durante mucho tiempo que tengo obtener los mejores resultados de mi esfuerzo cuando tengo también esfuerzos de Cristo en mi nombre. Pero cuando llego a pensar que soy bastante terrible que todo por mí mismo generalmente atornillar el tornillo del lado.

Siempre he sido el tipo de persona que caiga al suelo corriendo y luego se activa la mente. Así que cuando me den nuevas oportunidades cobrar acelerador a continuación, sólo tener en cuenta para hacer las cosas. Pero también soy toc, por lo que debe hacerse bien también.

El verdadero ejemplo de locura es hacer lo mismo una y otra vez y esperando resultados diferentes. La experiencia de mi pasado sé lo que "nada cambia hasta que algo cambie" significa que como seres humanos que hacemos lo mismo una y otra hasta que llegamos enfermo de conseguir los mismos resultados. Pero si queremos resultados diferentes, debemos hacer al menos una cosa diferente.

Entonces hay la necesidad de cambio...

Pero la mejor razón para mí mantener mi falso orgullo en jaque es que cuando alguien es inflado en importancia son menos propensos a deseo de conocimiento. Ellos creen ellos ya conocimiento posee. Pero cuando una persona es humilde se dan cuenta de que siempre hay una abundancia de nuevos conocimientos y en su estado más enseñable, capacidad de aprendizaje está en su grado óptimo.

Como siempre sus opiniones y comentarios son bienvenidos. Para contactar conmigo directamente, enviarme por correo electrónico a littlefish_67@yahoo.com.

Asking questions about higher education

Year after year, despite unchanged or increased state funding, the six state-funded Kansas colleges increased tuition far above inflation with little scrutiny. Undergraduate tuition and fees at the six universities increased 146 percent between 2002 and 2013; inflation during that time was 30 percent. From 2002 to 2013, KU raised fees and tuition by 208 percent; KSU, 184 percent; WSU, 124 percent; Emporia State, 131 percent; Pittsburg State, 135 percent; Fort Hays State, 91 percent.

Universities' All Funds spending was $1.814 billion in 2005; $2.186 billion in 2008; and $2.421 billion in 2012 – a 33-percent increase in spending even with a recession.

Since 2003, unencumbered carryover cash balances in two student fee accounts increased by $248 million. In other words, they collected almost a quarter-billion dollars more in fees than they spent on whatever the fees were earmarked to do. General Fees plus interest earned on those accounts can be used for other purposes – say, for example, holding down tuition increases. Instead, students paid more in fees and more in tuition and the fee accounts kept accumulating.

This year the legislature examined the numbers and asked questions with a desire to initiate an open conversation about higher education spending, tuition and student outcomes.

The end result: a 1.5-percent reduction to Regents which hardly qualifies as a slash, but that's the narrative being used; and since State Aid represents less than half of their General Use Expenditures, a 1.5-percent reduction in State Aid amounts to a 0.7-percent reduction to that account.

Compare a 1.5-percent State Aid reduction with recent requests from Kansas colleges for increases in tuition up to 8 percent next year, even with inflation below 2 percent.

from other pens

But the template never changes: Demands for more spending are always "modest and necessary;" reduced spending is always "drastic and draconian" – regardless of the amounts or how the money is used.

The legislature did not set out to reduce funding. We simply had questions.

Why so many unfilled FTE positions perpetually placed on the books with money systematically diverted for other uses?

Even factoring for inflation, why has tuition gone up so much without a correlation to past increases in state funding?

When defaulted on, students' government-backed loans are paid for, ultimately, by taxpayers, so shouldn't improved graduation and employment rates be prioritized over even higher salaries to the already-highly-paid?

By the way, the salary cap we requested was not a cut. You will hear it referred to as a cut, even though we requested salaries be held level, not reduced.

I serve as a commissioner with the Midwest Higher Education Compact – a 12-state network of universities. Recently, I attended a commissioner's meeting in Indiana where we heard from current and former chancellors about the future of higher education. Similar to other sectors – healthcare, for example – there are two very different driving forces promoting two very different paths: collective institution-oriented versus individual outcomes-oriented.

College students, many unemployed and underemployed, are buried in debt while universities appear more focused on impressing their peers and expanding their infrastructure.

Indiana colleges, among others around the country, are addressing this disconnect. Indiana University-East, just one example, increased its student numbers and graduation rates while decreasing cost-per-student over 20 percent.

Kansas state-funded colleges have been raising tuition at astronomical rates, but under the radar. The only difference this year is they are vocal about increasing tuition using the legislature's 1.5-percent budget reduction as a scapegoat.

Early in the session, following a discussion about spending and outcomes, KU's response was to threaten closure of some of Kansas' most viable institutions: KU's medical campuses in Wichita and Salina. It was a classic bully move. Rather than address legitimate financial questions, they made threats to cut something highly valued by all. Think White House tour closures.

In response, the House and Senate conference committees added a proviso to the budget to prevent those closures from happening, even though insiders understood KU's intention was to stir up angst among constituents in order to intimidate legislators so they would stop asking questions and hand over the money. Think shakedown.

When the endgame shifts to quantifiable student outcomes – retention and graduation rates, realistic employment tracks, greater efficiencies, reduced costs, lower tuition – collaborative conversations can take place and real-world results can be achieved in Kansas. I remain hopeful and open to such a dialogue.

15-year sentence given for Oberlin murder

By Ramell Taylor

rtaylor@nwkansas.com

Dylan Coryell, found guilty of second-degree, nonpremeditated murder and aggravated battery on March 27, was sentenced Monday morning to a minimum of 15 years in prison during a hearing in Decatur County District Court.

Coryell was convicted of murder for shooting Airman Cory Cook, 22, of Oberlin, in the head with a .410 shotgun and of aggravated assault on injuring Sarah Campbell the morning of Oct. 16, 2011.

Testimony at the trial showed that both men had relationships with Campbell, Cook before and after his Air Force training, and Mr. Coryell while the airman was gone.

The court room Monday was packed with family and friends. Judge Preston Pratt thanked the family and lawyers for both sides of Coryell for showing restraint during the trial and the sentencing.

In imposing sentence, Judge Pratt said he could not approve the request of the prosecution for Coryell to serve 20 years in prison.

He said that the sentence time for felony murder is a minimum of 20 years, but the jury had found Coryell guilty of a lesser crime, second-degree, nonpremeditated murder.

Judge Pratt sentenced him to 15 years for the second-degree murder and 13 months for aggravated assault, to be served concurrently, or at the same time.

Coryell was ordered to pay $836 dollars in court fees and fines. No fines or costs were assessed for aggravated battery.

“I’ve known of Bella’s Market for quite a while. It is unfortunate that they have had the challenges they have, however, I’m sure they will work through it and get back to operating their other stores very well.”

The name of the store will be changed back to Ideal Supermarket.

The sale could be completed within 30 days, however, both the timing and the authorization is up to the court’s discretion. All parties expect the sale to proceed with few obstacles.

pus a goal in its recent strategic plan. The policy states that use of any tobacco products is prohibited in all buildings, and on all hospital grounds as well as in employee vehicles parked on hospital property. Littering of tobacco related or any other products is also prohibited on the grounds. While the policy does not require hospital employees to quit tobacco use, the hospital will support and encourage all efforts by employees to quit.

The hospital’s board said they wanted to go even further and help others in the community that may be interested in implementing smoke-free, tobacco-free policies at businesses or help individuals in the community interested in quitting. The hospital has information on several resources and is developing a smoking cessation program that will begin each year in August.

Goodland reaches semifinals at Levi Hayden tournament

By Kevin Bottrell
kbottrell@nwkansas.com

After beating up on Leoti and Ulysses at the Levi Hayden Memorial Tournament on Friday, the Goodland Outlaws American Legion baseball team ran into trouble against a tough Colby team, losing 10-2 during Saturday's single-elimination play.

On Friday, Goodland got things started with a 15-0 shutout of Leoti. The Outlaws put five runs on the board in the first inning, eight in the second and two in the third, ending the game with the 15-run lead after three innings rule. Kyler Amthor picked up the win, throwing six strikeouts and allowing just one hit.

The Outlaws faced Ulysses next, going six innings before winning 6-3. Gunner Helton got the win, throwing eight strikeouts and allowing six hits. The wins put Goodland into the semifinals against Colby on Saturday.

Amthor again started on the mound for the Outlaws, who got on the board first. With bases loaded and no outs in the bottom of the first, Taylen Smith got a base hit to left field, scoring one. After Ryan Hillmer was thrown out at home and Luke Avila struck out, Amthor came home on a wild pitch to make it 2-0. Spencer Smith struck out to end the inning.

Colby tied things up in the top of the second. After a walk and an error put two runners on, a missed fly ball turned into a double, allowing two runs to score.

Mikail Freeman got a lead-off base hit in the bottom of the second. Brandon Verlindon attempted a bunt and was thrown out at first, allowing Freeman to advance. T.R. Jones walked. John Hendrich flew out, then Freeman attempted to get to third on a wild pitch and was thrown out for out three.

Hillmer came in to pitch in the top of the third, but was unable to stop Colby pulling ahead. An error and a base hit put two runners on. Two runners came home on errors to make it 4-2. Another scored on a fielder's choice. The Outlaws went down in order in the bottom half of the inning.

Colby extended their lead to 8-2 on a base hit and two errors in the top of the fourth, with Smith replacing Hillmer on the mound. Avila got a base hit and stole second in the bottom of the fourth. Smith walked and was thrown out at second when Freeman hit into a fielder's choice. Verlindon struck out, then Jones walked to load the bases for Hendrich, who flew out to end the inning.

Colby put another pair of runs on the board in the top of the fifth. A base hit scored a runner from second. Another scored on an error. In the bottom half of the inning Hillmer got a base hit, but later on a hit by Amthor, he was thrown at second and slid into the Colby second baseman. The umpires called interference, resulting in Amthor being called out at first. Smith was tagged out to end the ballgame due to the eight-run lead after five innings rule. Colby went on to win the tournament, beating Ellis 9-6. Burlington's Brant Rhodes was named Most Inspirational Player, chosen by the coaches, umpires and announcers.

Ryan Hillmer went back for a fly ball during the Goodland Outlaws' game against Colby on Saturday at the Levi Hayden Memorial Tournament.
