Commission, sheriff meet on budget

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

The Sherman County Commissioners met with Sheriff Burton Pionalto and Undersheriff Jason Showalter to try and work out their differences on the 2014 budget.

The sticking point has been the Sheriff's request for additional money in salaries, both to give raises and hire two positions: a process server and a jailer.

Commissioner Larry Enfield said there was some confusion from the public. He had spoken to citizens who were under the impression that the commissioners had requested the increase when it is the Sheriff's Department that submitted the budget proposal.

Enfield said there will soon be a large tax increase from the school bond, and the commissioners are trying to budget wisely to avoid any more tax increases.

All three commissioners commended Pionalto for his work within this year's budget. The sheriff's office is projected to come in under budget.

"You've been doing a great job scheduling," Enfield said. "You do need the capital expenses in this budget. I do not feel the salary increase is needed at this time."

Commissioner Ken Klemm said the department was getting caught up on vacations and appeared to have enough staff to cover its duties.

"We haven't been getting any complaints that you're not doing your jobs," he said.

Pionalto said the department has been able to do its jobs, but at a cost. He said the department is at minimal staff and has been for some time, even under previous sheriffs.

City audit comes back with good news

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

The 2012 city of Goodland audit report from Agler and Gaedert has come back with no deficiencies.

The city commission had a presentation from the public accountant firm at their meeting Monday. The city's unencumbered cash amount has decreased, but much of that was transfers to pay for water improvement projects. The city has enough money in reserve to operate for three months or more in an emergency.

Most funds are under budget, but utility expenses have increased because of the hot, dry summer. The audit found no material weaknesses or significant deficiencies.

In other business, the commission:

• Heard from Lincoln Wilson and Brent Wood from the Fall Flatlander Festival. Wilson read a letter to the commission, requesting the city contribute $1,000 to $2,500. Wilson said the city already contributes to the festival in manpower, services and equipment; however, costs continue to rise.

Wilson was asked if the committee had approached civic organizations such as the Lions or Rotary Clubs. He said the trouble with that is most of the time those organizations give already to something involved in

College student's app now available

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

One of the first apps to come out of Northwest Kansas Technical College's app development program is now available for download.

Randy Osban, with help from his wife Reaghan, developed an app called "The Best Bible Trivia," which is up for sale now for $1.99 on the iTunes app store for Apple devices.

The app currently has 240 multiple-choice questions on various Biblical subjects. The questions vary in difficulty. Osban said he is working on updating the app with optional question packages that will be available for 99 cents.

Osban said the first step in creating an app is to come up with a concept.

"Me and Reaghan study the Bible quite a bit," he said. "We thought, why don't we take our knowledge and put it to use?"

Coming up with the questions was the most time-consuming part, he said. He and Reaghan had to make sure each question was unique and make sure they had the correct answer. Osban said he started the project on April 13 and had it ready by the end of July.

The most difficult part, however, was getting approval from Apple. Once the app is built and tested, Osban said, it has to be archived and submitted with the right number and size of preview pictures and an icon. Osban receives 70 percent of the money from each app purchase. He can track sales and trends, and said he has noticed four downloads from Australia and one from Wyoming, in addition to several in Kansas.

Osban said he has always been interested in coding and was already a graduate of the communications technology program when the app development program opened up. He said the instructors at the college are very knowledgeable. He said he still has one year left in the program.

Osban said in addition to expanding this app, he's got ideas for several more, including one geared toward kids.

Students can win money for school from vets

High school students can start on the path to win a trip to Washington, D.C., and a $30,000 scholarship by writing and recording a three-to-five minute essay.

The speech on this year's theme is "Why I'm Optimistic About our Nation's Future" needs to be recorded on an audio cassette tape or an audio CD. Then it should be submitted with a typed essay and entry form by Nov. 1 to the Voice of Democracy Chairman at Veterans of Foreign War Post 1133 by mailing it to Box 477, Goodland, Kan. 67735.

The post winners advance to district and then the first place district winner advances to the state competition. All state winners receive a four day trip to Washington, D.C., A total of $152,000 is awarded to national finalists. First place wins a $30,000 college scholarship. Each year, around 40,000 students from our viewpoint...

Helmet cams, Egypt and Kennedy files

Having been terribly embarrassed by video of a crash victim being run over by a fire rig, San Francisco officials have done the logical thing: banned firemen from carrying cameras so it can't happen again.

The embarrassment, we mean, not the unfortunate accident. Seems the offending video was taken by a "helmet cam" worn by Battalion Chief Mark Johnson. It showed a 16-year-old Chinese student who was on the pavement, covered with fire-retardant foam and not moving, being run over by a crash rig. She was one of three fatalities in the July 6 crash of an Asiana Airlines Boeing 777.

Fire Chief Joanne Hayes-White issued the ban, saying she was concerned for the privacy of victims and fire fighters.

What a crock. The incident was unfortunate, because fire fighters played a big role in keeping the fatality count so low in the spectacular crash. The secondary accident took some of the luster off that accomplishment. But the real damage was done to the department's image. And like the good bureaucrat she apparently is, the chief took action to be sure that never happens again.

You'd think she'd be more concerned with why a fire truck was running over victims.

As violence continues in Egypt, many in Congress are demanding the administration do something. A popular demand is to cut off aid to the current government, installed after a military coup ousted the elected president, Mohammed Morsi.

It's true that Morsi had been elected after the "Arab Spring" uprisings that toppled governments in Egypt and Tunisia, but the situation is much more complicated. Even if you discount charges that his Muslim Brotherhood rigged the election, there's the fact that the Brotherhood was driving Egypt toward a theocracy where millions of moderate Muslims and Christians would have had no voice.

Brotherhood demonstrators have trashed Christian neighborhoods in their rampages, and they continue to battle police and troops in Cairo. Their vision of "democracy" is not one most Americans would support.

But then, we don't think much of the continued bloodshed in the streets, which undoubtedly works in favor of al Qaida and other extremist groups.

What to do? The best suggestion we've seen came from Minnesota Democrat Keith Ellison, the first Muslim elected to Congress: cut off aid, but push for talks, saying, "Stop the bloodshed and get back on the track to democracy."

We can't run other countries, but we don't have to finance civil fighting, either.

And finally, wire reports show the government still has thousands of pages from the Kennedy assassination files under lock and key some 50 years after the fact, classified until at least 2017 and maybe longer.

After all this time, you have to ask: What the heck are they hiding, especially the CIA?

Free the Kennedy files! — Steve Haynes

Is there anything that isn't on YouTube?

For the past four weeks, the Formula One circus has been on its summer break. With no new races to focus on, I've been digging into the history of the sport. Since this type of racing has been going on since the 1930s, it appeals to my love of history.

I read a book called "Life at the Limit: Triumph and Tragedy in Formula One" by Sid Watkins, who had been the top doctor in Formula One in the 70s, 80s and 90s. Watkins begins with an emotional account of Ayrton Senna's death in a 1994 race and proceeds to talk about the challenges in making the sport safer. The book was a fascinating look at the sport through the eyes of someone who personally knew every driver and often advised them to stay off the track.

At that 1994 race another driver was killed during qualifying and in practice the day before, Senna's teammate Rubens Barrichello was injured in another accident. Watkins, who formed a lot of close friendships with the drivers, told Senna he should quit and the two should go fishing. Race car drivers of any stripe however are not quitters, and unfortunately for Senna, his Williams car went off on lap seven and he was killed.

Watkins was able to do a lot of good, however. Under his guidance, safety improved dramatically at Formula One tracks worldwide. Despite plenty of accidents, there hasn't been a death since Senna.

Watkins recalled a lot of races with incredible clarity, and last weekend I decided to see if there was any way I could watch some of these old races. After a bit of searching I found there are a lot of recordings of old sports broadcasts on YouTube. Formula One being an international sport, a lot of these are in foreign languages. For example, I clicked on a video of the 1984 South African Grand Prix only to find it to be a recording from German television. Perhaps I should have kept up with my foreign language studies.

I was able to locate recordings in English, however, and so far I have watched three excellent historical races.

The first one I found was the 1990 American Grand Prix held in downtown Phoenix. Racing these kinds of cars on roads not built for it is interesting. Formula One cars are light, extremely powerful and very low to the ground. I've driven in downtown Phoenix and in a road car the streets are very nice, but in a Formula One car going in excess of 175 mph, they are a lot bumpier. The cars were constantly scraping the ground and throwing off sparks.

It was a fun race to watch because Jean Alesi, who was almost a rookie and was racing for one of the smaller teams, got off to a great start and climbed from fourth on the grid to lead the race for 25 laps. He was eventually passed by Senna and ended up in second place.

kevin bottrell

• simple tricks and nonsense

Next I watched the 1984 Monaco Grand Prix. This was an interesting race in many ways, in part because of how horribly rainy it was. It was absolutely pouring, which makes any road hazardously slippery.

It has also been hailed as the beginning of Senna's rise to the forefront of Formula One drivers. He was very skilled at driving his Toleman car in the wet weather and amazingly climbed from 13th in qualifying to second during the race.

The rain was so bad that the race was called on the 32nd lap and as race leader Alain Prost slowed down, Senna passed him. Senna thought he had won but the rules said that everyone kept the place they had on the last completed lap.

Senna and Prost — both multi-year world champions — went on to have an epic and often rather nasty rivalry all through the 80s and into the 90s, though they seemed to have patched things up somewhat before Senna's death in 1994.

The third race I watched was the 1986 British Grand Prix. This was a particularly long race as it had to restart. On the first corner there was a massive accident in which driver Jacques Laffite broke both his legs. The race was stopped while everything was cleared up and restarted about an hour later. Laffite did recover, but it was the end of his Formula One career.

The crash turned out to be a lucky break for eventual winner Nigel Mansell. Just before the crash, his Williams car suffered a catastrophic breakdown which could have put him out of the race, but the break before the restart allowed the team to ready the spare car. When the race restarted, Mansell drove an incredible race, inching up on race leader Nelson Piquet by fractions of a second per lap. Here's where the strategy comes into play in Formula One: when to push the car to the limit, when to save wear on the tires, when to go into the pits, etc. As I have been learning, overtaking another car requires a lot of preparation, especially when the race lead is in question. You can't do it just any time; your's and your opponent's speed and race line have to be just right or either it won't work or you'll collide.

Mansell was able to overtake Piquet, who seemed to be content to sit in second place. It was a big win for the home crowd because they hadn't had a British driver to get excited about since the 1970s, and really any time a driver wins his home grand prix it's a big deal.

It was also a big deal because it marked the return of Williams team owner Frank Williams, who had been in a car accident a few months before that had paralyzed him. Sadly Williams is no longer the dominant force it was during seasons in the 1980s and 1990s. So far this year neither Pastor Maldonado nor Valtteri Bottas have finished in the points. Last year's car was able to win a grand prix, but this year's FW35 model has significant problems and just isn't able to keep up.

This year has seen dominance by Red Bull's Sebastian Vettel, who is looking for his fourth straight world championship title, and wins by several other teams such as Lotus, Ferrari and Mercedes.

I'm not much of a sports commentator, but I do like to make predictions and because I only have half a season as a Formula One fan under my belt, half the fun is finding out how wrong my predictions turn out to be.

This weekend the races resume with the Belgian Grand Prix on Sunday. My prediction is another win for Vettel and Red Bull. I expect one of my new favorite drivers, Romain Grosjean, to put in a good drive for Lotus since he won a non-Formula One race championship here several years ago and he's been doing very well this year — when he can stay away from the walls. I also expect good finishes for Lotus' Kimi Raikkonen and Mercedes' Lewis Hamilton. The wild card will be Ferrari. They've been all over the map this year.

I also hope to see the Sahara Force India drivers, Paul di Resta and Adrian Sutil, do well. They're a plucky team that is fun to watch. Sutil had an absolutely epic spin during one of the races I was watching earlier this summer. I always like to see them succeed, even if they don't win any races.

There's eight more races this year, including the United States Grand Prix in Austin, Texas, in November. Probably not this year, but it would be a lot of fun to attend one of these, and Austin is within reasonable driving distance. Maybe next year. For now though there's plenty of Formula One left to watch in 2013, and if I get bored again between races, there's plenty of historical races on YouTube, although I might have to brush up on my German.

Work toward energy independence

Coal and oil are dirty. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure that out. Handle oil or coal and you will have to take a shower. We have burned millions of barrels of oil and millions of tons of coal. It is a no-brainer that for many years we have been dirtying up the planet. Are we melting the Arctic? Are we altering weather patterns that are causing horrific storms that pound the United States and the rest of the world?

Carbon dioxide emissions are being pumped into the atmosphere as a result of three main culprits. These three main culprits are the generation of electricity, transportation and industry. I do not know of anyone who wants to give up any of the three. Since we enjoy what each one of them gives to us then we must work to make them better and cleaner.

We must become energy independent but we have work to do. Independence is not solely someone else's job. Most Americans are tired of being dependent on other parts of the world for our energy. We need to get out of the Middle East. Utilizing our own energy is the path to

from other pens

• glenn mollette

independence. Becoming energy independent means using oil, coal, natural gas, wind and solar energy. We cannot become energy independent today by cutting coal out of the mix. However, more power plants are switching to natural gas. Mines are closing throughout the coal mining regions of our country because natural gas is cheaper and plentiful. Power plants are using more and more natural gas, creating a diminishing demand for coal.

Mountaintop removal for coal mining is not popular. Blasting away the Appalachian Mountains fills up valleys with coal sludge. This sludge seeps into water supplies, killing fish and wildlife and poisoning the water supply. In 2000, Martin county Kentucky experienced a coal sludge break created by Massey

Coal reeking disaster for Eastern Kentucky. The coal slurry spill disaster created an environmental sludge that filled two tributaries and eventually poured into the Tug and Ohio rivers. The sludge was 30 times environmentally worse than the Exxon Valdez oil spill. It is considered one of the worst environmental disasters ever in the southeastern part of the United States.

I have always been a fan of coal, because coal mining fed our family. If coal usage further declines, the economy in West Virginia and East Kentucky will continue to be devastated. However, crying economy and jobs will not solve this problem. The way to turn the coal industry around is to find solutions to cleaner mining and cleaner power plants.

The demand for cleaner energy is here to stay. People are not going to talk less about clean energy. The EPA and environmental groups across the country are here to stay. Governmental leaders are listening to these groups and not just the owners of fossil fuel companies.

"When someone goes on vacation I have to pull people off other areas to cover," he said. "I want to ensure that the job isn't creating more stress since its a high stress job anyway."

Pianalto said the the two positions would bring the department up to full staff. Serving court documents in particular takes a lot of time his deputies need to be spending elsewhere. Showalter said the department has been lucky to have someone in the past in that position, which frees up the deputies. The department also just lost an employee.

Klemm asked what the department would do if it does not get this increase. Pianalto said it would survive the same as it has been, but re-iterated his point that running at minimum staff has taken its toll.

Klemm suggested the answer might lie in the division of labor; that the department might make more use of part-time employees rather than full time.

The commissioners also discussed the pay raises. Pianalto said the money for raises was to bring the department in line with surrounding counties. Commissioner Steve Evert said the commission has been trying hold the line at 3 percent raises. Pianalto said he is one of the lowest paid sheriffs in Kansas, but also said his raise could be cut if the commissioners felt it needed to be. Klemm said that should be reviewed, since the commissioners would like to ensure that everyone is paid fairly.

The commission did not make a decision at the meeting, wanting to first get more information on sheriff's department budgets from surrounding counties.

In other business, the commission:

- Worked on the emergency medical services budget. The commissioners added more money for tires and fuel, anticipating higher expenses in those two areas. They also added money to obtain a license to operate in Colorado, since the department has been hoping to do transfers for Burlington.

- Approved purchase of a mower and trailer for the landfill from Cochran Farm Supply.

The commissioners also approved a surveillance system for the landfill through Nextech. Mark Felzien said people sometimes bring in items hidden among tree branches, which then have to be sorted out by landfill staff. With cameras at the burn pit, he said, the staff can catch people dumping these items. The system will also be used to catch people who slip through the fence to scrounge, he said.

- Met with Felzien and Rich Simon from the city on the Citywide Cleanup Week. Simon said the Cleanup Week will be from Sept. 30 to Oct. 4. He said everything worked out OK last year except for tires.

The commissioners suggested setting a limit on the number of tires the landfill will accept and a limit of four per household. Felzien said the landfill can only have 500 tires at any given time.

The commissioners also suggested setting up a trailer at the landfill during Cleanup Week where people could put household hazardous waste. Once the trailer is filled up it can be hauled off and emptied.

- Read a letter suggesting the county get local contractors to do weed spraying at intersections. The commissioners said they would have to talk to their weed department about licensing.

City audit report comes back with good news

the festival like the car club.

The commission did not make a decision at the meeting. Commissioner John Garcia said that in March the commission had come to a consensus to donate $1,000 in addition to its in-kind donation, which can be the equivalent of $1,000 to $1,500.

City Manager Doug Gerber said the city has actually over-allocated the money it set aside for donations.

"If you tell us to look for it, we'll find it somewhere but something else will suffer," he said.

- Approved two ordinances. Municipal Court Judge Leanne Taylor said these were housekeeping changes to the Standard Traffic Ordinance and the Uniform Public Offense Code.

The Standard Traffic Ordinance is the law under which the Police Department regulates traffic within the city limits. The only new change is to allow drivers to present proof of insurance electronically using a phone or other device.

The Uniform Public Offense Code is similar, regulating public offenses within the city limits. Taylor said the only change is a wording change on prostitution charges.

- Toured the wastewater plant in preparation for discussing improvement projects at a future meeting.

Ashley Hecker and Brandon Hatfield

Couple plans August wedding in Hays

Ashley Lynn Hecker of Hays and Brandon Hatfield of Goodland plan to marry on Saturday, Aug. 31, 2013, at the Unrein Building in Hays. Pastor Isaac Hecker will marry the couple in a double ring ceremony. They are planning a wedding trip to Las Vegas, Nev. The bride to be's parents are Daniel Hecker and Christle Brungardt of Hays. The future groom's parents are Arthur and Rebecca Hatfield of Goodland.

The bride to be has a Bachelor of Science in education from Fort Hays State University in Hays.

The future groom is a 2006 graduate of Goodland High School and will be graduating in the Fall of 2013 with a Bachelor of Science in psychology.

The couple plan to live in Hays.

Have you checked germination?

Did you save some wheat for seed? Have you checked the germination on it to make sure it will be quality seed wheat for this fall? There are two main options for germination testing – an at-home test or testing by a laboratory.

If you do a home germination test too soon after harvest, you will be shocked at the low germination percent. That's because wheat has a post-harvest dormancy requirement (some varieties more so than others). Even high quality seed will not germinate right after harvest in most cases.

It's important to make sure the wheat is pre-chilled before taking a germination test. Any reputable seed lab will do that on a routine basis. Producers testing their seed at home should also pre-chill the wheat by putting it in the refrigerator at about 40 degrees for five days and then moved to room temperature for an additional five to seven days. If the seed is not pre-chilled, producers should wait a month and a half after harvest before testing for germination.

There is some difference among varieties regarding how long their summer dormancy requirement is and even that can vary from year to year. Hard white wheats with poor sprouting tolerance, for example, have almost no summer dormancy requirement. They will germinate almost as soon as the seed is harvested. Other varieties have a relatively long summer dormancy requirement, and may not germinate well for five or six weeks after harvest unless the seed is pre-chilled. Unfortunately, there is no routine testing of varieties for their summer dormancy requirement, so we have no way of knowing which varieties will germinate shortly after harvest and which will take a longer period of rest.

By Labor Day, all varieties will have lost their summer dormancy and should germinate unless the seed is defective in some way. In addition, if seed is tested soon after harvest, it would still be a good idea to test again prior to harvest to be sure the germination has not been compromised due to heating or insect damage.

If there is any question about the viability of the seed, it is well worth the $15 it costs to have the seed tested for germination by a professional seed laboratory. This is especially true in areas where there was freeze damage, severe drought, a rain delay at harvest or scab. To the untrained eye, seeing some amount of shoot and root development would seem to be sufficient proof that the seed is in good condition. But that alone does not always mean you have a seedling that will develop into a healthy plant. A trained laboratory analyst evaluates each seedling to be sure that all essential parts exist and have sufficient development at the end of the test to, in fact, establish a normal, healthy plant.

The lab that Kansas State sends tests to is Kansas Crop Improvement Association in Manhattan. Samples can be dropped off at the Extension Office or at the Kansas State Experiment Station in Colby for shipping. The Extension Offices will have the form to fill out to send it in or it is available on the Kansas State Sunflower District Agronomy webpage at www.sunflower.ksu.edu and on the Agronomy tab.

Grandkid loves blueberries, good choice

By Kay Melia

The Gardener

• the gardener

I have a great grandson who is just nuts about blueberries! Yeah, blueberries! While it might be a bit more understandable if a little kid wanted a banana, or a couple of strawberries, or even an orange, this boy seems to prefer the fruit that very few of us know anything about.

When I was his age, I knew my way around a handful of sandhill plums that grew wild out in the pasture. Jelly beans were my true favorite, especially the black ones, and I had probably never laid eyes on a blueberry.

It's not like the kid tries to grab a box of blueberries off the top shelf of the produce counter when he's wheeled by in the shopping cart. He's only two years old and couldn't reach them if he tried. But at home, every time he walks by the fridge he's got his hand out.

You must understand here that Aiden comes by his food preferences naturally. His mom is a Registered Dietician and understands what kids should be eating. Jelly beans? The kid has probably never seen one. Blueberries? Absolutely, and mom plucks a box of these delicious berries off the shelf and then quickly hides them under the other groceries so that Aiden can't eat them all before the shopping cart arrives at the check-out counter.

Lets face it...blueberries are probably a major mystery to most of us. Experienced gardeners may plant a few bushes and then wait five or six years for them to produce fruit. But generally if we crave berries, we'll plant, raspberries or blackberries, and certainly strawberries. But the beautiful blueberry bush is absent in most High Plains back yards.

But you know? There's a good reason for its absence. Gardeners around here probably shouldn't even think about planting them because our soils just aren't right for blueberries. High Plains soils are mostly alkaline soils, as opposed to acidic soils. Blueberries thrive only in acidic soil which have PH values of 4 to 5 on the sometimes complicated PH scale, while High Plains alkaline soils sometimes reach 7.5 or even 8 on the scale that considers 7 as neutral. To lower the PH, you must add sulphur to the soil. To raise acidic soils PH, you would add lime. It's all a little difficult to understand, but the bottom line is that blueberries are not easy to grow in these parts.

And so, those of us who relish blueberries must pay about $3 for a pint of the vitamin packed fruit, and if we only knew, they're worth every cent! Blueberries are described by those in the know as "the worlds most healthful food, rich in vitamins C, E and K...loaded with manganese and fiber, and the highest level of antioxidants of any other food! Eating them regularly can make a noticeable difference in our overall health.

I'm glad Aiden likes blueberries and not jelly beans. Smart kid!

Next retreat scheduled

Rachel's Vineyard of the Salina Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church announces its next retreat to be Friday through Sunday, Sept. 27 through 29, at the Capuchin Center for Spiritual Life in Victoria. This weekend retreat is designed for anyone affected by abortion.

"Today's culture normalizes abortion," Donetta Robben, retreat coordinator, said. "But abortion always affects a woman, and often the man, psychologically, spiritually and many times physically.

"Once a woman has an abortion, she pushes it to the back of her mind. But the pain remains, and women pretend everything is OK when they are really falling apart inside."

"Rachel's Vineyard provides a nurturing environment where anyone affected by abortion can safely grieve their loss while dealing with the anger, guilt and shame that accompanies this decision," she said.

The retreat is not only for women who have had abortions, but for men, grandparents, aunts, uncles, siblings, married couples, people who have worked in the abortion industry - anyone affected by the loss of abortion.

Rachel's Vineyard Ministries was founded by Psychotherapist Theresa Burke. The weekend meshes faith and psychology into an intense, emotional, supportive and non-judgmental process.

Studies by Burke, Psychologists David Reardon and Philip Ney indicate that individuals suffering from an abortion decision often endure life in confusion and silence. Many individuals begin hurting immediately, while others begin facing their grief five to 25 years after their abortion.

For more information, please contact Rachel's Vineyard toll-free at (877) I-GRIEVE or by e-mail: rvineyard@ruraltel.net. All correspondence is confidential.

River compact group to meet

The Republican River Compact Administration will hold its 53rd annual meeting at 8 a.m. (Mountain Time) on Thursday, Sept. 12, at the Community Building in Colby. They will discuss water related issues, including compact compliance in the Republican River basin in Colorado, Nebraska and Kansas.

The three states entered into the Republican River Compact in 1943 to provide for the equitable division of the basin's waters, remove causes of potential controversy, promote interstate cooperation and joint action by the states and the federal government in the efficient use of water and the control of destructive floods.

The administration comprises three commissioners representing the states: David Barfield, chief engineer for the Kansas Division of Water Resources, Colorado State Engineer Dick Wolfe and Nebraska Department of Natural Resources Director Brian Dunnigan.

The group will hold a work session at noon on Wednesday, Sept. 11, at the Northwest Kansas Groundwater Management District Office, 1290 W. Fourth.

District manager Wayne Bossert noted that this is a new address and the office has not moved yet but will be relocated by the date of the meeting.

Both sessions will be open to the public. For information about the Republican River Compact, go to agriculture.ksgov/divisions-programs/dwr/interstate-rivers-and-compacts.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
