Heavy rains cause minor flooding

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

It's been a while since Sherman County saw this much rain at once. More than six inches fell in Goodland over a three-day period with more moisture following over the weekend.

The National Weather Service reported record rainfall on Thursday: 4.11 inches, beating the record of .85 for Sept. 12, set in 2008. The rain began falling Wednesday afternoon. Rainfall that day was 1.23, not far off from the Sept. 11 record of 1.85 set in 1933. The rain let up Friday after dropping an additional .79 inches, beating the Sept. 13 record of .64 from 1982.

The total rainfall in town was 6.13 for the three-day period. Higher rainfall — as much as 8.32 inches on Thursday — was reported in the southern part of Sherman County by the Community Collaborative Rain, Hail and Snow Network.

On Thursday there were reports of minor flooding in Kit Carson County. About 16 miles south of Burlington, a semi-tractor rig almost lost control when it tried to go through six to eight inches of water on Highway 385.

A flash flood warning was issued Thursday afternoon for Kit Carson and Sherman Counties as well as parts of Cheyenne and Wallace Counties. In Goodland large amounts of water collected in the retaining pools near Phillips and Pioneer Parks.

The South Beaver Creek was among those running high during last week's rainstorms. There was minor flooding in areas, including water flowing over a bridge, near the Smokey Hill River in southern Sherman County.

As county road crews got out and about Friday, flooding or washed out areas were discovered over several county roads including County Road 68 between 17 and 18; Road 13 between 52 and 55; Road 10 between 59 and U.S. 24; and Road 17 between 52 and 55. Water from the Smokey Hill River was flowing over a bridge on County Road 13.

There was also flooding in the eastbound lanes of I-70 between exits 11 and 14 on Friday. Traffic was diverted onto U.S. 24 between those two exits for several hours before it was re-opened in the late afternoon.

Areas to the south near the Wallace County border saw more rain Tuesday. Reports from the public indicated that between a half inch and an inch of rain fell.

It rained again in Goodland Sunday and Monday mornings. The weather service predicted a chance of rain throughout Monday. An approaching warm front from the south was to keep the skies mostly cloudy. Clear skies and temperatures in the mid-80s are expected today.

Before the multi-day rainstorm, Goodland was at a little over half its average rainfall for that point in the year — 8.8 inches out of 16.35. As of Sunday, the town was only 1.6 inches under the average.

The rains caused major flooding along the Front Range in Colorado. Up to 14 inches of rain fell in Boulder and other areas along the foothills, causing widespread flooding along most of the rivers. A federal disaster was declared on Thursday.

U.S. 36 Treasure Hunt to begin on Friday

By Amanda Miller

amiller@nwkansas.com

The Great U.S. Highway 36 Treasure Hunt begins this weekend. Starting Friday and lasting until Sunday, the Treasure Hunt is going to host around 40 vendors in Saint Francis and Bird City.

The first U.S. 36 Treasure Hunt was in 2006, making this the eighth annual event. The 400-mile-long garage and yard sale covers 13 counties in Kansas, ending with Colorado border in the west and starting at the Missouri border.

In Cheyenne County, we have several vendors that will start selling on Thursday to get a jump on sales when people arrive in town. The Milne's, at 220 S Adams, are planning to be available Thursday afternoon. They are selling antiques, primitives, vintage items, clothes and household items. They will also have lunch and supper on Friday and Saturday. BBQ sandwiches with all the fixin's will be available for shoppers that work up an appetite.

Scott and Carol Northrup are listed as open Thursday through Sunday on the map on the U.S. Highway 36 website. They are located at the well known lot on 300 S Benton. Some of the items available on their lot are farm primitives, antiques, furniture, and a little bit of everything. Visiting sales Thursday afternoon might give

Reward offered in metal theft case

Midwest Energy is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the recent theft of several brass switch tops from a storage yard near Colby.

Sometime between Sept. 1 and 13, thieves cut the fence at a Midwest Energy outdoor storage facility just north of the Colby city limits.

They pried open several storage crates and stole the brass tops from a dozen electrical switches.

The company values the damaged switches at over $10,000, though the stolen tops have no value beyond scrap.

"The switch tops themselves have no other application, other than as scrap metal," said Chris Gerstner, Colby Operations Manager for Midwest Energy.

The company estimates the scrap value at less than $300.

The Thomas County Sheriff's Office is leading the investigation.

Scrap dealers in Kansas and surrounding states have been made aware of the theft and will be looking for individuals trying to sell these uniquely shaped brass tops.

Anyone with information can contact Undersheriff Marc Finley at the Thomas County Sheriff's Office at 460-4570.

Moran accepts applications for nominations to the academies each year. The application deadline this year was Friday, Sept. 6. K-State recognized for climate research

An increased investment in climate research and climate/weather data management at Kansas State University has paid off with national recognition for the program.

The Department of Agronomy recently achieved the American Association of State Climatologists Recognized State Climate Office, designation, according to Gary Pierzynski, agronomy department head and professor. This represents an important milestone.

"The demand for climate-related research and education is increasing, and we are committed to providing the best possible information for the state of Kansas, the Central Plains region, and on a national and global scale," Pierzynski said.

"In addition to work on climate change issues, climate research will help improve irrigation scheduling and water use efficiency in Kansas, which is so very important in preserving our valuable water resources for the future," he added.

One of the keys to attaining the designation was the recent hiring of Xiaomao Lin as state climatologist and assistant professor in the department of agronomy, Pierzynski explained. Lin brings the research credentials needed for the program to achieve the status.

As the state climatologist, Lin will be involved in gathering, organizing and reporting agricultural climate data for Kansas. He will be working with others in the climate team in agronomy to set up a mesonet system in the state.

His current and future research will involve investigating the atmospheric mechanisms related to drought in western Kansas, interpreting extreme events from a climate perspective, and assessing the more general impacts and adaptations related to climate change in Kansas.

This is in line with the kind of work he had been involved with in his previous position with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, where he was assessing the quality assurance of historical and current climate data; climate change detection and visualization, mesonet organization; bio-atmospheric interactions, and soil water/drought-related research.

In addition to the hiring of Lin, the department of agronomy also hired Christopher Redmond as manager of the Weather Data Library; Brian Petersen as a web/database developer for the Weather Data Library web site; and Fred Caldwell as a full-time technician for establishment and maintenance of weather monitoring equipment. Mary Knapp also serves in the Weather Data Library.

"Taken together, all of these changes and additions represent a major investment in climate research, climate data gathering, and outreach in Kansas," Pierzynski said.

"Also, as an important part of this overall effort, we established an advisory board for our new climate program. This board consists of representatives from the Kansas Water Office, Ground Water Management Districts, crop consulting companies, faculty, and producer organizations," Pierzynski added.

All state climate office programs in the country are expected to engage in a variety of activities and services that include one or more of the following:

- Coordinate and collect weather observations for the purpose of climate monitoring.

• Summarize and disseminate weather and climate information to the user community.

• Demonstrate to the user community the value of climate information in the decision making process.

• Perform climate impact assessments and weather event evaluations.

• Conduct climate research, diagnosis, and projections.

The American Association of State Climatologists, National Climatic Data Center, and the Regional Climate Centers are fully committed to supporting the development of the ARSCO program.

Replica of tabernacle to be in McCook

"The Tabernacle Experience," a life-size replica of the biblical tabernacle, is coming to McCook, bringing a glimpse of Israel's history to the community.

The experience is not a museum, nor is it a theater production, said promotional coordinator Christy Stevens.

Instead, visitors step into Old Testament times by entering the tabernacle's courtyard.

Visitors will experience a day in the life of an Old Testament priest, including many elements of the historic tabernacle such as the altar of burnt offering, altar of incense, lamp stand and table of bread.

Visitors can participate in many activities common to priests, such as lighting oil lamps and participating in communion.

The 50-minute tour of the tabernacle will be open Friday, Sept. 27, through Sunday, Oct. 6, south of McCook Community Hospital for a $5 donation. Hours are 11:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, 1 to 6:30 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Reservations are encouraged for groups of six or more.

The experience is being brought to McCook by Red Willow Ministerial Association, which needs volunteers for the program. To volunteer, sign up at tabernacle.

Poor job done selling judicial plan

While we will wait for history to judge Gov. Sam Brownback's plan to appoint Kansas judges, with approval from the state Senate, the governor could and should have done a better job of setting up and selling his plan.

Kansas once elected Supreme Court judges, as some districts still do their trial-court judges. We gave that up for a supposedly better plan, where appellate judges were nominated by a panel made up mostly of lawyers, who supposedly knew a good judge when they saw one.

The governor got to choose from among a panel of three nominees to fill each post, but the process actually left the state's chief executive with little real power in the matter. Left completely out of the process were voters, who get only to approve "retention" of judges at the end of their terms.

This year's Legislature changed the process, at least for judges of the state Court of Appeals, whose selection is governed by state law. (Supreme Court judges are chosen by the same process, but under a section of the state Constitution, which cannot be so easily changed.)

First of all, after promising openness, the governor made his selection almost completely behind closed doors, revealing only the name of his ultimate nominee. Despite calls to disclose the names of other applicants, the governor refused.

While the way he went about the nomination is the same as governors have used to fill most state jobs for many years, the secrecy looked bad when compared to the open nature of the old application process for judges. It just didn't look good, and there was no reason not to keep an open list of applicants.

Then, the governor chose one of his closest associates to fill the first post. While there was nothing "wrong" with that, nothing illegal or unethical, and while the new judge, Caleb Stegall, seems well qualified, the appointment left both open to charges of cronyism. Stegall was the governor's office attorney and a close adviser.

Better that the governor had chosen someone with more academic or judicial experience and fewer ties to him personally.

While Sam Brownback is a good enough politician to have gotten elected to most everything he's run for, including the U.S. Senate twice, at the Statehouse, he's shown some ineptitude. His series of closed-door meetings with legislators last year, in possible violation of the state Open Meetings Act, showed that. While there was much argument about the possible violation, both he and the Legislature should have avoided even the appearance of impropriety.

Same with the judicial appointment. It just muddied the water for his change in the selection process. And government just runs better without this sort of thing. — Steve Haynes

Attack would have violated law

With the Russians coming forth with a possible brokered agreement with President Bashar al-Assad of Syria for him to give up his chemical weapons in exchange for America not attacking him, America's military threat has dissipated for the moment.

But issues still need discussed. Is an attack warranted under international law and, if not, would we not be viewed by the world as an aggressor nation? A giant irony is that we would have punished Syria for violating international law by our also violating international law. Who says two wrongs do not make a right?

Consider the following United Nations Charter violations of the United States had we attacked Syria: Article 2, Sec. 4, "All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state...."

Even our threat of the use of force is a violation. The only exception to the use of force is self-defense as stipulated in Art. 51. "Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defense if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security."

Obama has yet to make a case to the United Nations for wanting to attack the sovereign country of Syria. He has not, and will not, because he would have to justify such action on the basis that Syria had first shown actual aggression toward us necessitating our responding in self-defense. This he cannot do. Were U.S. citizens gassed we could respond in self-defense, but we were not. Such acts of aggression justifying self-defense must immediately be provided to the U.N. Security Council who then decides "such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security."

from other pens

• harold pease

Other U.N. Charter rules also would have had to be satisfied. Article 39 stipulates that "the Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations ... to maintain or restore international peace and security."

Even before this takes place Article 40 must be satisfied which reads: "In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before ... deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable.... The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures." So in order for a state to use force in self-defense, it or some other state must have suffered an armed attack. Such has not been demonstrated.

There exist other complications; even had the U.N. ruled Syria an aggressor nation, which it has not, and sanctioned a coalition force against Syria, the President was unsuccessful in getting any other country to bomb with him. Nobody agrees with him enough to commit armed forces. The Syrian offense had already occurred, so the mission was punishment, clearly not self-defense. Syria had signed only one of two treaties prohibiting the use of gas, containing no enforcement provisions and no one made the United States the policeman of the world.

Finally, although there is no doubt chemical weapons were used on Syrians, the source, although presumed, has not been proved. Everyone remembers the "proof" presented to by Colin Powell, that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction when it did not. Assad maintains that his own men were gassed as well.

The Assad regime may well have gassed her own people, which Assad denies, but she has not attacked another country. We, on the other hand, would have done just that, had we bombed Syria. I think it likely that had the U.S. attacked, Russia, China or even Syria would have asked the United Nations to define the U.S. as the aggressor nation and Obama as a war criminal. That could have been followed by a "call upon the parties concerned," the United States especially, "to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable," which could include economic sanctions as has been used on other nations.

Did we think when we signed the Charter, creating the "world government," that the rules did not apply to us, that we could just bomb whomever, whenever and wherever we wished as with our drone strikes? Unfortunately for President Obama, but fortunately for us, the U.N. Charter does not allow a military attack on a sovereign nation for punishment.

Apparently the Russians will be brokering, at least with Assad, the mess that we created for ourselves by not using the United Nations. The "slouch-looking kid in the back of the classroom," as Obama recently referred to Vladimir Putin, has ironically saved the president from his own ignorance of international law.

Make the Farm Bill a priority

Talk to anyone in farm country and next to concerns about the need for more rain, the farm bill remains at the top of the list of things Congress must do before the end of the year.

Unfortunately, the farm bill doesn't seem to be a priority in our nation's capital. At the present time Congress is mired firmly in the matter of whether we use military action in Syria.

With every passing day, the likelihood of a farm bill extension increases. The current extension of 2008 farm program authority expires September 30.

The fly in the ointment has become the continued debate over whether the bill must include nutrition programs and the formation of a conference committee to work out differences between the Senate and House versions of the proposed bills.

Kansas Sen. Pat Roberts told a full house at the Farm Bureau leadership breakfast during last week's State Fair the farm bill debate is a perfect storm.

"The Senate won't pass a farm bill without what they consider to be an appropriate food stamp program," he said.

Roberts promised to do what he can to protect, preserve and strengthen crop insurance and to stop using it as a bank for other programs.

Allowing the current extension to expire is not an option, he added. This would leave the 1949 farm bill to fill the void. If that happens, farmers and consumers will be in trouble because programs from conservation to research will disappear.

Policy reforms, such as a larger role for crop insurance as part of the farm safety net, more equity across crops and increased support for fruit and vegetable growers, will not be possible if the current farm bill is extended.

In addition, some commodity prices could soar because they would be tied to farm productivity from the 1940s. Milk, as an example, could double or triple at the supermarket.

"I don't want to go back down the road where farmers plant for the government rather than planting for the market," Kansas' senior senator said.

A new farm bill will provide farmers the certainty they need to plan their crops and obtain financing. This is the number one reason a new farm bill must be hammered out in Washington. Another extension will not do so.

Additionally, a new farm bill provides stability to an industry buffeted by volatile weather conditions, erratic world commodity prices and international trade scenarios that cause spikes and valleys in world food markets.

It also helps ensure this nation's domestic food supply. Every U.S. citizen benefits from quality, affordable food.

Consumers understand deep in the pocket what it feels like to be dependent on oil from the Middle East. The farm bill ensures Americans can depend on American farmers to feed them.

Since the Second World War, nearly all nations help their farmers in one way or another. The United States does so with its farm bill.

"We need a bill, we'll get a bill, rest assured, with your help we'll live to fight another day," Roberts said. "We'll try to make this farm bill more market oriented as we go down the road."

Heavy rains cause minor flooding here and at least five people have been confirmed dead.

The towns of Lyons and James-town were completely cut off as roads were flooded and bridges were washed away. Lyons was evacuated by the National Guard on Friday, but as of Monday, hundreds still remain unaccounted for.

In the foothills near Boulder, National Guard helicopters are being used to rescue people cut off by flooding. Fog and rain prevented flight operations Sunday, and more were set to begin Monday morning. Many buildings on the University of Colorado campus suffered flood damage, and the CU football game scheduled for Saturday was cancelled.

In Loveland, flooding on the Big Thompson River cut the town in half, with residents unable to get from the north side of town to the south or vice versa until Sunday morning. Homes along the river were evacuated. Further upriver in the Big Thompson Canyon, raging waters destroyed parts of U.S. 34 and washed piles of debris downriver. That road has been close, cutting off one of the main access routes to Estes Park, which was also hard-hit by flooding.

In Fort Collins, flooding along the Poudre River forced evacuations. I-25 was also closed in places due to water on the road.

Flood watches remained in effect Monday morning across the state, and there is still a slight chance of showers for Tuesday.

U.S. 36 Treasure Hunt to begin on Friday

you an edge on finding those special pieces that you are looking for.

Antiques and garage sale items aren't the only things you can purchase during the U.S. 36 Treasure Hunt. Kathy, Barb and Shirley will be having a bake sale where you can buy some of their delicious cinnamon rolls, cookies and coffee cakes. And you can call ahead to ensure you get some to enjoy! Look for an ad in this paper for more information.

Starting Friday, all the vendors will be out in full force selling their treasures. Butch and Jackie Raile have camping items, furniture, and lots of we-just-moved items on E 1st Street. There are multi-family sales that you can visit as well, which will have items like baby clothes and toys that families will find useful.

There will be vendors that are not listed on the U.S. 36 map as well. Look for signs while driving. For example, the car wash in Saint Francis is a location where you can find collectors items for sale.

This will be a good time for restaurants and other organizations to advertise treasure hunt specials. Many people will want to eat out, go shopping, and perhaps stay the night while traveling the Treasure Hunt.

The vendor's map can be obtained in St. Francis at the extension office in the courthouse, at Majestic Service; at the mailbox on 300 S.

Benton, and, in Bird City, at Hometown Market.

Those wanting a statewide map of the vendors, can purchase one at Majestic Service in St. Francis.

There will be "just as many, if not more, vendors that last year," said Linda Elfers, event coordinator in Saint Francis.

People can also go to the website at www.ushwy36.com for maps and items that will be sold during the three-day event. Each year, the Treasure Hunt grows in the number of people traveling U.S. 36 for the many sales and bargains. The number of those having booths and sales has also grown.

Farm safety is a concern during harvest season

Each year since 1944, the third week of September has been recognized as National Farm Safety and Health Week. This year, Gov. Sam Brownback has also proclaimed Sept. 15 to 21 as Kansas Farm Safety and Health Week.

It's no coincidence that national attention turns to safety during the busiest season of the year for agriculture, said John Slocombe, farm safety specialist with Kansas State Research and Extension. The push to get crops in and out of fields hits full speed in the fall. Livestock are moved from summer pasture to fall and winter locations. Tractors and farm implements become more common on rural roads in Kansas and throughout rural America during the fall. Sharing the road becomes increasingly important as farming season peaks and days become shorter.

"This year's theme, Working Together for Safety in Agriculture, really gets to the core of safety on the farm and on rural roadways," Slocombe said. "Each of us, whether we work on the farm or not, has a responsibility to work safely and this is especially true as farm vehicles share the road with other motorists during the busy fall farming season."

Most crashes involving farm equipment on public roads involve a passenger vehicle and a farm implement. Too often these crashes result in fatality and most are preventable.

- Tips for motorists:
- Expect to see more equipment on roadways during the busy agricultural seasons, such as during fall harvest, but be alert for farm equipment on the road year round, especially on rural roads.

- Be alert for agricultural equipment with slow-moving vehicle emblems, reflectors, or flashing lights.
- Slowing down immediately when you see agricultural equipment with emblems, which are red and orange, retro-reflective triangles attached to equipment meant to warn motorists to slow down because the equipment displaying the emblem is moving less than 25 miles per hour.
- Be extremely cautious when passing equipment because the operator may not see or hear you. Be patient; do not pass the slow moving equipment unless it is absolutely safe to do so.

- Pass with caution. The equipment may be longer and wider than you think.
- Be aware of possible left hand turns by farm equipment into fields. Watch for signal lights and hand signals. Scan your surroundings for the location field driveways before beginning to pass.
- Tips for farmers:
 - Use slow-moving vehicle emblems on all farm equipment traveling 25 mph or less.
 - Emblems must be clean, unfaded and visible. New emblems can be reflective up to 1,200 feet. Replace faded and broken emblems.
 - Check lights and reflectors before road travel. Make sure lights and blinkers function properly and visible by motorists.

- Maintain high visibility on the highway. Use lights, flashers, and turn signals to indicate your location and intentions.
- Use reflective marking tape to show the size of farm equipment.
- Pull over and allow traffic to pass, when it is safe to do so and you can pull off the road entirely with your equipment.
- Avoid or minimize road travel when it is dark, during morning and evening peak drive times, and during bad weather when visibility may be poor.
- Use an escort vehicle when moving large equipment on the road.
- Consider installing service roads in fields along busy highways to eliminate travel on highways when feasible.

One final tip for farmers – never transport extra passengers on a tractor designed for one person. It's unsafe for the passenger and is a distraction to the tractor driver. Extra riders are at tremendous risk of falling from the tractor, which could place them in the path of a towed implement if one is attached to the tractor. If the tractor is equipped with an extra seat the rider should be seated and buckled while the tractor is moving.

It takes time to prevent farm accidents, Slocombe said. Unfortunately, it takes only seconds to become a farm accident victim. Plan ahead. Think safety first.

Cowboys win second straight

The Goodland High School varsity football team ran roughshod over Norton on Friday, winning 30-7 on the Bluejays' home turf.

Goodland is 2-0 for the season and 1-0 in league play, having beaten Hugoton on Sept. 6. Next action for the Cowboys will be the homecoming game against Wray at 6:30 p.m. Friday at Cowboy Stadium.

Norton got the ball first, but the Bluejays fumbled on the return. Garrett Taylor jumped on it, giving the Cowboys the ball at the Bluejays' 42 yardline. In just three plays the Cowboys scored a touchdown. Making the score was Dax Ruhs, who caught a 31-yard pass from quarterback Trey Teeter. Goodland made the two-point conversion to make the score 8-0.

Norton kept hold of the next kickoff. The Bluejays picked up a pair of first downs, but the Cowboys pushed them back to fourth and 36 on three straight plays, including two sacks from Colton Cooper.

Norton punted, but the Cowboys were unable to get anywhere on their next drive, punting back to the Bluejays.

Back on offense, the Cowboys drove to the goal line where they were held by Norton. Teeter kicked a successful field goal to make the score 11-0.

Norton was unable to get anywhere on the next drive and their punt went short. Ruhs and Adam Simmerman made catches for first downs, then Ruhs ran it across for a touchdown. A two-point conversion extended the Cowboy's lead to 19-0.

Norton was able to get a first down before the clock expired at halftime.

The Cowboys received the kickoff to open the second half. They were stopped at fourth and long and punted to Norton. It wasn't long before the Cowboys got the ball back. A catch by Ruhs converted the third down and got the Cowboys to the 21 yardline. A catch by Simmerman on fourth and 12 got the first down.

The Cowboys settled for a field goal, Teeter's second successful field goal of the night.

Up 22-0, Goodland got the ball back when John Peden recovered a fumble. Ruhs made a reception to get to the 10 yard line and Ricky Milke ran it to the five. Simmerman caught a seven-yard pass from Teeter for the touchdown. Teeter ran it in for the two-point conversion, making it 30-0.

The Bluejays avoided the shut-out in the fourth quarter, scoring a touchdown on a pass fake and a run by the quarterback. Their extra point was good to make it 30-7.

The Cowboys ran down the clock to end the game with the 30-7 win.
