Crowds turn out for Homecoming events

Much of last week was given over to Goodland High School Homecoming events leading up to Friday's football game. The Homecoming parade was Thursday evening down Main Street. Entries included everything from Goodland Regional Medical Center to the Junior Cowboys football team and Junior Cowgirl cheerleaders (below). After the parade was the pep rally at Cowboy Stadium. The senior parents put on a skit for the audience in which they got help defeating the Wray Eagles from the cast of the television show Duck Dynasty (above). The rally ended with the traditional bonfire (left). This year's Homecoming King and Queen were Brook Bahe and Maddie Mayer. First attendants were Ian Bonsall and Mara Kling and second attendants were Tyler Gastineau and Ellie House. This year the class of 1963 was the featured class.

Flu clinics planned at health department

Asign of the coming winter is the availability of flu shots. The Sherman County Health Departments will have walk in clinics the week of Sept. 30. Please consult with one of the department nurses to see if the high dose vaccine is right for you. Both the regular and high dose vaccine will give you protection against three strains of influenza: 2 type A and one Type B.

A different, live, attenuated or weakened influenza vaccine is also offered. The viruses in the vaccine have been weakened so they can't make you sick. This vaccine is sprayed into the nose and will

New website to help insurance customers

A new website was rolled out recently by the Kansas Insurance Department will help Kansans learn more about changes in the health insurance market in the coming months.

The site, insureKS.org, features educational information for Kansans who may be interested in accessing health insurance coverage through either the online Health Insurance Marketplace or in the regular insurance market outside of the marketplace. The Health Insurance Marketplace is an Internet portal that will allow people to sign up for health insurance as part of the new federal health reform law and to determine whether they may be eligible for financial assistance to pay for health insurance.

Also included on the insureKS.org website are the following:

- An interactive program nicknamed "Alex" that helps a viewer learn about the 2014 health insurance changes and how they might affect their insurance situation.
A premium estimator that will calculate premium costs and possible tax credits for individuals and families, based on the information they provide.

- Brochures and FAQs that explain provisions of the health insurance law that go into effect Jan. 1, 2014.
- A link to the federal Health Insurance Marketplace.
- A list of external resources.
- Information about Kansas Navigator programs, insurance agents, and other assisters that are offering personal help with understanding the law's provisions.

The site links to short videos of Sandy Praeger, commissioner of insurance, who explains portions of the law that may affect Kansans.

Social media users can also find links to the insureKS.org Facebook, Twitter and YouTube channel at the website. A link to the new department "Health Insurance in Kansas" booklet will also be there.

"I think that Kansans who go online to the new site will find many answers to the questions that have been raised about the new health insurance provisions," Commissioner Praeger said. "We have tried to provide information and education pieces that will give them a chance to get the facts for themselves."

Picking time at the pumpkin patch

Sami Philbrick, education coordinator for the High Plains Museum, helps a student from West Elementary School pick out a mini pumpkin to take home. Last spring students from the elementary school planted a pumpkin patch at the community garden. Students from West each got a small pumpkin and they also got a large one for their classroom. Students were told to let their pumpkins sit in a window for a couple of weeks after they had washed them. Then they could decorate them.

Merchant desk closes at store

The end of September will be the end of any type of presence the J.C. Penney will have in Goodland. Jacque's Hallmark will no longer have the capability of helping people order online from Penney as well as have their purchases delivered there. People will not be able to make payments or returns either.

The closing is part of a national decision to close all independent merchant desks. The retail stores will remain open. Online orders can still be made and the merchandise will be mailed to their home.

Jacques became an independent merchant desk the last part of August 2008. They started the Monday after the J.C. Penney store closed.

Jacque Cooper said they earned commission on how much was delivered to their store for people in Sherman, Cheyenne and Wallace Counties in Kansas and Kit Carson County in Colorado.

"It started out with good commission," she said. With the demise of the physical J.C. Penney catalog about two years ago business has become less and less.

She said that customers were not comfortable shopping online and it was time consuming even when they helped people. Older people were definitely not comfortable with it.

"I want to thank people for supporting the merchant desk," she said. There are plans to convert the space for another use in the store and she wants people to watch for it.

from our viewpoint...

KU professor tests First Amendment

First-Amendment rights are fine, apparently, unless what you say is so controversial no one wants to be associated with it.

At least that's what David Guth, an associate professor of journalism at the University of Kansas, found last week in the wake of the Navy Yard shootings in Washington.

Guth issued a "tweet" on the web service Twitter reacting to the 13 deaths: "Blood is on the hands of the #NRA. Next time, let it be YOUR sons and daughters."

Not much happened until a website called CampusReform.org posted a story on Thursday, but that sparked an angry reaction across the country. Soon, pro-gun members of the Kansas Legislature were called for the professor's job, if not his head.

At KU, his bosses were behind him — way back, it seemed. Chancellor Bernadette Gray-Little announced that Professor Guth had been placed on administrative leave pending a review, in order "to prevent disruptions to the learning environment."

Higher ups at the state Board of Regents issued a statement expressing "disgust and offense" at the tweet and backing the chancellor. Ann Brill, dean of the School of Journalism, said in a statement, "Professor Guth's views do not represent our school and we do not advocate violence against any group or individuals. ...

"While the First Amendment allows anyone to express an opinion, that privilege is not absolute and must be balanced with the rights of others. That's vital to civil discourse."

So much for freedom of speech, or academic freedom, for that matter. Gun-rights groups began calling for the professor to be fired. A National Rifle Association spokesman was quoted as calling the tweet "hate speech."

"It is disgusting and deplorable," he said. "It has no place in our society."

Mr. Guth himself was calmer.

"It got a conversation going," he told the Associated Press. "That's exactly what I wanted to do."

He said he agreed with the university's action in light of e-mailed threats he and others at KU had received.

"It's in the best interest and peace of mind of our students that I remove myself from the situation and let cooler heads prevail," to told the AP. "I know what I meant. Unfortunately, this is a topic that generates more heat than light."

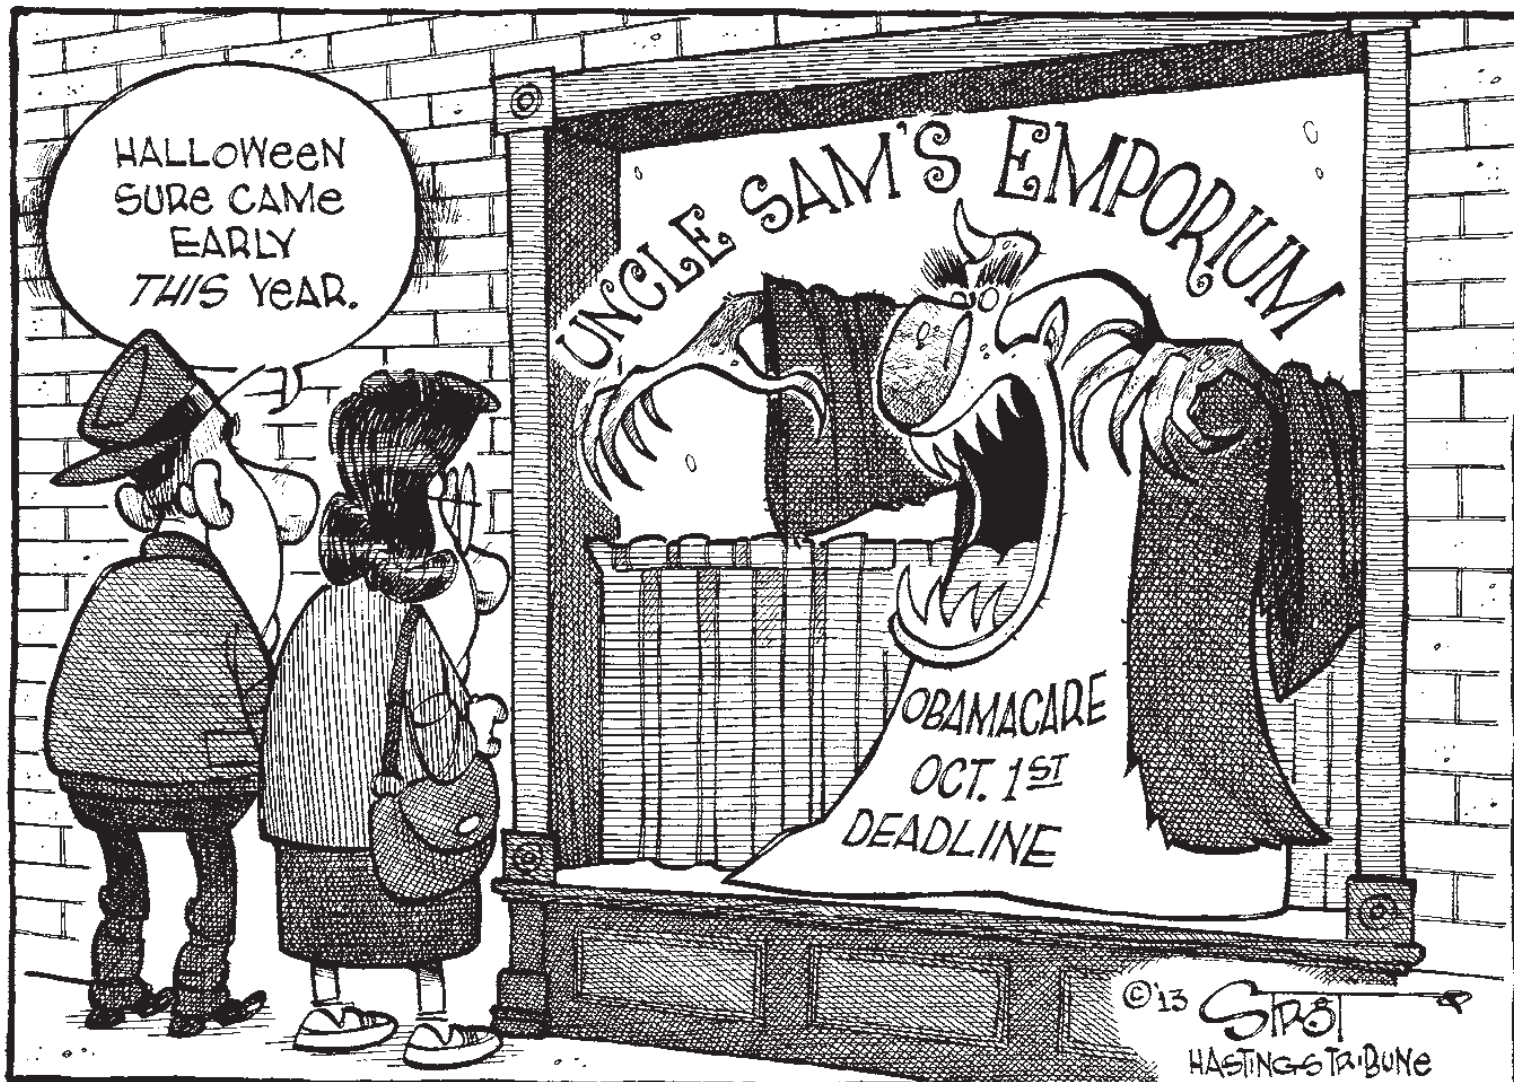

Dave Guth is not the kind of guy who'd want to see anyone shot. His was a comment sent off to the world in haste. He could perhaps have chosen his words more carefully. That's one of the pitfalls of Twitter.

Many might agree with his argument that gun-rights groups would see things differently if some of these nut-case shootings involved someone they knew. It's not a sentiment that this newspaper endorses, by the way, but it is a legitimate argument for one side in the national debate.

The victim here, aside from Dave Guth, is the First Amendment, and the free and open debate the Founders wanted to protect when they wrote that "Congress shall make no law" abridging the right to free speech.

Those who love and protect the First know it can be lonely duty. The rights set out in the First cover everyone, from the man next door to your minister to the teacher at your kid's school, you and us and all the rest, but that includes a lot of people many of us don't like, from ponographers to the Rev. Fred Phelps.

And if we really mean it when we say we believe in free speech, then we sometimes have to defend all of them, not just pick and choose. David Guth will find a lot of people in his corner, even if they don't buy his choice of words — or his ideas about the Second Amendment. — Steve Haynes

Importance of crime scene investigation

Police departments, prosecuting attorneys and judges across the country are very worried. Newspaper headlines in West Virginia, Texas and other states tell the story: fake data, "expert" conclusions that were not supported by the evidence, crime lab fraud, wrongful convictions. Some crime scene investigators and lab technicians have been found to have failed their science. This results in overturned convictions. Some cases have the potential to reverse literally thousands of prior court cases.

While the televised "CSI" program has motivated many students to enter this field, the program stresses the few minutes of adrenalin and ignores the many long hours of tedious work. Such evidence officers are occupied with photographing crime scenes. They must ensure the evidence is secured from the time it leaves the scene to when it is finally presented in court. And most laboratory procedures and analyses that are shown in minutes in reality take days to run.

The televised glamour and bravado cover up the actual extent of real laboratory skill, command of statistics, clarity of reasoning and communication, and personal integrity that are essential in this job.

When the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals investigated one crime lab worker two decades ago, they found fraudulent data in every case examined. This included overstating results, misreporting the frequency of genetic matches, stating many items had been education frontlines

tested when only one was examined, altering lab results, and stating that inconclusive results were conclusive. As a result, that high court ruled all testimony and evidence provided by that crime lab worker over a decade "should be deemed invalid."

Such incompetence casts a shadow on hundreds if not thousands of convictions. That is why police, judges and prosecutors have major concerns that their crime lab specialists are solidly trained. And when tainted convictions are overturned and result in the release of bona fide criminals, the public needs to be just as concerned with the educational integrity of programs that train evidence officers.

Professionals in this field are concerned too. You can read their concerns for depth-of-training and rigor-of-program at the Council on Forensic Science Education website (cofse.org): "Forensic science is a unique scientific discipline requiring its practitioners to have in addition to technical skills and knowledge, also critical, analytical thinking skills, communication skills and an ethical awareness of the role of the scientist in our criminal justice system. A complete educational program should therefore create forensic science professionals."

They continue with the following critical assessment: "Recently there has been a marked increase in the number of forensic science programs at colleges and universities. Many programs have been established despite very limited resources, insufficient personnel, lab space, and support for these programs. Students completing these programs expect to find employment in crime labs but are surprised to learn that lab management is not impressed by the curriculum."

Police, prosecutors and judges all know that their work is futile unless these new technicians are well-trained. It takes real labwork with cadavers and hi-tech equipment to develop hands-on skills and technical competency. It takes mathematical depth to understand statistical significance. It takes speaking practice under pressure to develop the verbal reasoning to clearly explain and defend evidence in the courtroom. And it takes direct face-to-face course interaction for faculty to make judgements on personal integrity before recommending their graduates forward.

This is one specialty that we cannot afford to "half train," or the felon whose conviction is overturned due to sloppy labwork may move in next door.

Editor's note: Northwest Kansas Technical College has begun offering an associate's degree program in crime scene investigation. For more details, visit www.nwktc.edu/CSI.php.

A flood of memories

Last year it was fires. This year it was water sweeping through the places I know from my childhood in Colorado.

I watched on the news as the torrential rains fell on the northern Front Range, even as they fell here — though we got 10 or more inches less. I saw many places from my youth now underwater like the Larimer County Fairgrounds, the Big Thompson Canyon and Mariana Butte Golf Course.

My parents, extended family and many friends still live on the Front Range. I wasn't worried about my parents since they live on fairly high ground. There used to be a little creek (small enough to be pronounced "crick") about three streets away, but to be honest I don't know if there's even water in it any more. The area is so much more built up than it was when

kevin bottrell

• simple tricks and nonsense

I was a kid.

I wasn't worried about my best friends either. They have a house on the south side of town, not far from the Big Thompson, but up on a big hill.

The only thing I did worry about was the grandparents' duplex, which is in a flood plain. They don't actually live there anymore, but they still own it. However, while some homes on the street did flood due to an overflowing canal a block away, their house escaped harm.

I've also got a lot of family in the Greeley area, which was hit by floodwaters rolling down the South Platte River. That water kept going and got to where my brother lives in North Platte, Neb., last weekend. From reports in his newspaper, it looks like there was plenty of flooding but nowhere near the damage that was wrought in Colorado.

There's probably a lot of old friends still living on the Front Range that I've lost contact with over the years. Hopefully they escaped the worst of it.

I'll be heading back to Colorado for a weekend in October. It will certainly be interesting to see how things are faring after a month of cleanup efforts.

Learning on the farm

The farm has always been a fertile field for producing crops, but it is also an environment rich with learning experiences.

For generations, children who grow up and work with their parents on the family farm have learned valuable skills. While they are learning to sow seeds, cultivate weeds and harvest grains, flowers and vegetables, they are also growing knowledge.

Lessons learned on the farm include math, social studies and vocabulary, leadership, not to mention cooperation and responsibility.

All those skills acquired in a simple field of soil and vegetation?

Absolutely.

Tucked away in those vast acres of grass, trees and crops there's a living outdoor classroom teeming with lessons on life. Children who learn to till the soil come to understand such basics as distance, depth and height. They learn that the plants that bear our food come from places all over the world — rice from the Far East, wheat from Russia.

They see stems, leaves, seeds, flowers and bulbs in their hands, instead of in a book — an enduring way to plant words in their vocabulary.

Insight this week

• john schlageck

While growing up on a land whipped by the wind, warmed by the sun and cooled by the stars, youngsters learn to respect their environment. They learn that by caring for this fertile land it will in turn care for them.

Such a valuable learning experience can provide children with the tools likely to influence family and friends to respect the land as well or at least raise their level of awareness. Youngsters also learn that hope is not wishful thinking of harvest success. Rather, hope is the action of planning and planting seeds. There will be those years when harvest may not occur, but the seeds of hope must be planted if there is even the thought of next year's bounty.

Learning outside can also be fun. If you don't think so, ask children who've been on a field trip. They appreciate the opportunity to spend a day in a natural classroom where they can trade fluorescent lighting and four walls for blue sky and white clouds overhead.

While encouraging students to consider growing and caring for a small plot with wheat, roasting ears or assorted vegetables, be sure to equip them with youth-sized tools. Remember they are still youngsters and do not possess the strength, knowledge and wisdom of an adult.

Suggest themes for young gardeners. Try a garden theme that appeals to a child's literal sense, such as an alphabet garden with plants that begin with the letters A to Z.

Direct the children and instill in them that caring for a crop can be an adventure. Have them add excitement to the garden with decorations including scarecrows, painted stumps and tiles and child-sized benches.

Encourage them to dig in the soil for earthworms. Tell them to pick the flowers — when they're mature.

Above all, make certain the learning experience is enjoyable. Encourage them to keep a daily journal about each day's activity.

Take pictures of the learning journey in the field and add them to the journal. Yes, there can be an abundance of lessons to be harvested in the soil. Take the opportunity to provide such an experience for a child you know.

protect you against four strains of influenza: 2 type A and 2 type B. This vaccine can only be given to people two through 49 years of age, who are not pregnant.

Flu vaccine is recommended every year. Children six months through eight years of age should get two doses the first year they get vaccinated. It takes about two weeks for protection to develop after the vaccination, and protection lasts several months to a year. Therefore it is important that everyone begin to get their vaccines early in October so that they are protected before the flu season makes an appearance in the area.

Flu is a contagious disease that spreads through the country every winter usually between October and May. It is caused by the flu virus and is spread by coughing, sneezing and close contact.

Symptoms come on suddenly and may last several days. They can include fever and chills, sore throat, muscle aches, fatigue, cough, headache and runny or stuffy nose.

"Flu can make some people much sicker than others," says Donna Terry of the county health department. "These people include young children, people 65 and older, pregnant women and people with certain health conditions - such as heart, lung or kidney disease, or a weakened immune system."

"Flu vaccine is especially important for these people, and anyone in close contact with them."

Handle food safely at tailgating parties

Tailgating season is underway, and as football fans flock to games with their grills and favorite tailgating foods, they must keep in mind several food safety measures to keep from getting sick.

"For some people, tailgating may be more important than the game itself," said Londa Vanderwal Nwadike, state extension food safety specialist for Kansas State University and the University of Missouri. "However, food safety can be more challenging when preparing and eating foods outdoors where refrigeration and running water are likely not available."

Nwadike said the following tips help people reduce their risk of getting foodborne illness from what should be a fun event.

Proper planning is key.

- Plan the menu with game time in mind. In addition to pre-game grilling, plan post-game snacks such as cookies, fruits, vegetables or a snack mix that don't need cooking and are not perishable.

- Plan party foods for the number of guests expected to minimize leftovers and food storage before, during and after the game.

- Bring along soap and water for cleaning and hand washing if none will be available on-site. Moist towelettes and bleach wipes also can be used for cleaning hands and surfaces.

- Make and bring along a "tailgating kit" with the most-used utensils, such as clean serving spoons, paper towels and trash bags, for every game.

- Ask out-of-town guests coming to your tailgate to bring less perishable items.

- Think about appropriate storage and handling.

- Be sure to chill perishable foods, such as meats for grilling, salads and sides, before transferring them to an insulated cooler. Keep that cooler packed with several inches of ice or frozen gel packs. Use a refrigerator thermometer in the cooler so you can check to be sure the food stays at 40 degrees Fahrenheit or below. Shade coolers or cover them with a blanket if no shade is available to keep ice from melting quickly.

- Keep raw foods separate from cooked foods. If marinating meat for grilling at the stadium, do so in a disposable, re-sealable plastic bag. Be sure to use a different plate for holding cooked meat than the one used for raw meat.

- If bringing take-out food, make that the last stop before the stadium to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold. Eat the food within two hours of purchase (one hour if the outside temperature is above 90 degrees.)

- Wrap and stow leftovers in the cooler or discard them. If perishable food is left out for two hours or more (one hour or more if the temperature is above 90 degrees, it should be discarded.

- To keep foods such as soup, chili and stew hot, use an insulated container. Fill the container with boiling water, let it stand for a few minutes, empty and put in the hot food. If you keep the insulated container closed, the food should stay hot (above 140 degrees) for several hours.

Cook responsibly.

- If grilling, use a food thermometer to ensure that the food has reached a safe minimum internal temperature. Raw beef, pork and lamb steaks and roasts should be 145 degrees with a three-minute post-grill rest time; raw ground beef, lamb, pork and veal should be 160 degrees; and all poultry should be 165 degrees.

- Make sure cooking appliances are shut down and cooling or otherwise stowed appropriately before going to the game to reduce the risk of fire hazards.

Serve responsibly.

- Shade the serving table, if possible.

sible.

- Wait to remove salads and sides from coolers until ready to eat.

Ohio-licensed company barred from Kansas

Sandy Praeger, Kansas Commissioner of Insurance, has issued fines totaling $9,000 and a cease and desist order against an Ohio-licensed insurance marketing firm for illegal activities in Kansas.

sandy praeger
insurance comm.

The company, now known primarily as Lead Generating Systems, LLC, was fined $5,000 in August as part of a judgment by the Kansas Insurance Department. An earlier fine of $4,000 was levied against the same company in March 2012, when it was doing business as Unlimited Fulfillment Services, LLC. The company, owned by Matthew Dilday, Medina, Ohio, has also used the names Smart Leads, UFS Marketing Services, Annuity Leads and Annuity Leads Today.

sas residents on behalf of agents throughout the state will not be tolerated," Commissioner Praeger said. "Part of our department's mission is to take action against these illegal solicitations so that our citizens' money and insurance guarantees are protected. We urge all Kansans to be on the alert for this type of activity."

The insurance department legal order says the company solicited insurance business for Kansas insurance agents using deceptive and misleading postcards that were mailed to Kansas residents. The postcards misled recipients into believing their financial well-being was in jeopardy because an annuity product they were holding supposedly was at the end of its surrender period.

An annuity is a financial contract in which an insurance company makes a series of income payments to a person at regular intervals in return for a premium or premiums the person paid.

The company's violations fall under the provisions of the Kansas Unfair Trade Practices Act.

Hays speaker to cover healthcare law in October

At the first of the year, most of the Affordable Care Act, known popularly as Obamacare, will go into effect, yet if the polls are correct, most people still don't understand how the law will affect them.

In what he describes as an attempt to "lower the political heat and shed some light on the issue," Sheldon Weisgrau, director of the Health Reform Resource Project, will talk about health care, health insurance and why it is an important public policy issue in the Fort Hays Ballroom of Fort Hays State University's Memorial Union at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 15.

The free presentation is open to the public. Weisgrau is appearing at the invitation of the university's College of Health and Life Sciences in conjunction with the Senior Companion and Foster Grandparent programs.

"We encourage anyone who wants to understand the new law to attend," said Dr. Jeff Briggs, dean of the college.

The project is a foundation-funded initiative to provide education and technical assistance to consumers and others in the implementation of health reform and the Affordable Care Act in Kansas.

Weisgrau will talk about the law, how it may (or may not) address problems in the health system, and the impact it will have on consumers, health care providers and businesses. He said that he will make a presentation and then open the floor to questions.

Weisgrau has been explaining the act around the state since the law was passed in March 2010. By now, he said, he has made many hundreds of presentations.

"Right now, with implementation so close, it's pretty much nonstop," he added.

He has 30 years of experience in health policy and has worked in the public, private, and nonprofit sectors. He earned an undergraduate degree from Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., and a master's in health policy and management from the Johns Hopkins University School of Public Health, Baltimore.

The project was formed to do public education and consumer and stakeholder engagement related to health reform and to help Kansas agencies find grants available under the new law.

Money for the project comes from a coalition of six organizations that comprise Kansas Grantmakers in Health: the Sunflower Foundation, the United Methodist Health Ministry Fund, the Reach Healthcare Foundation, the Health Care Foundation of Greater Kansas City, the Kansas Health Foundation and the Wyandotte Health Foundation.

For information, contact the College of Health and Life Sciences at (785) 628-4200 or by e-mail to chls1@fhsu.edu.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. Homecoming victory for Cowboys football team

By Kevin Bottrell
kbottrell@nwkansas.com

The Goodland High School varsity football team made it 3-0 with a win at Friday's homecoming game against Wray, Colo.

The Goodland defense left the Eagles with nowhere to go in the first half, allowing the offense to run up a 33-0 lead by halftime. Wray was able to break the shutout in the second half, but couldn't score enough to erase the damage. The Cowboys won 46-21.

Goodland is now 3-0 overall and 1-0 in league play. Next action will be a Great West Activities Conference matchup at 6:30 p.m. Friday against Holcomb at Cowboy Stadium.

The Cowboys allowed no gains on the Eagles' opening drive, forcing them to punt. Dax Ruhs made the return to the 40 yardline. On second down Teeter passed to Ruhs, who ran it in for a touchdown. Goodland made the two-point conversion to go ahead 8-0.

Wray made short gains on the next drive, forcing another punt. The Cowboys took over on the 16. Garrett Taylor made a short gain, then Kolt Trachsel caught a pass and was brought down at the 50 yard line. Taylor ran it to the 23 for another first down, then Trachsel made another reception and ran to the nine yardline for a third first down.

Teeter handed the ball off to Trachsel who ran it in for a touchdown to make it 14-0. A dropped snap prevented the Cowboys from getting the two-point conversion.

Adam Simmerman was injured on the kickoff to Wray and left the game. After short gains, the Eagles got a first down on a penalty. The quarterback ran for another first down, then with three minutes left Trachsel intercepted a pass and ran it back to the 49 yardline.

Ruhs made a catch on the next play and ran it in for a touchdown. A false start set the Cowboys back five yards on the two-point conversion. Teeter's pass attempt was no good, but the Cowboys were ahead 20-0.

Wray returned to the 27, but were held there by the Cowboys. The Eagles punted and Ruhs made the return to the 42 yardline. He then caught a short pass and ran it in for another touchdown to make it 26-0. The Cowboys were stymied on another two-point conversion.

Wray had the ball back to open the second quarter. The Eagles made a first down, but were stopped by the Cowboy defense. Ruhs made the punt return down the left sideline to the 50 yardline. This time - after two incomplete passes and a short run by Taylor - the Cowboys were forced to punt.

Wray put together a longer drive with a first down at the 36, but Ricky Milke intercepted the ball after Colton Cooper put pressure on the quarterback. Teeter ran it down to the six yardline, but the Eagles held them there, forcing a turnover on downs.

With 4:05 left in the half, Wray got a first down on a facemask penalty. A fumble by the quarterback rolled out of bounds. The Eagles made up the yardage with a pass, but that brought up fourth and five and the Eagles punted.

Goodland returned the ball to the 27 yardline. A personal foul on Wray took it up to the 42. Trachsel caught a long pass, getting a first down on the 33. The Cowboys got another first down on a penalty, then ended up at third and 12 on the 20 yardline. With 44 seconds left, Taylor ran it in for a touchdown. Teeter kicked the extra point, making it 33-0.

With just four seconds left, Wray turned the ball over on downs. Teeter completed a pass to Trachsel, but the half was over.

Wray made an onside kick to start the second half. Gerell Miller jumped on it at the 36 yardline. Taylor ran it to the 23 and then Taylor down to the three. He got the ball again and ran it in for a touchdown. Teeter's extra point kick made it 40-0.

The Cowboys forced another three and out on the next Wray drive, however a pass from Teeter was picked off and run back by the Eagles for a touchdown. The extra point was good to make it 40-7.

The next drive didn't go well either, with the Cowboys forced to punt. A high snap went over Taylen Smith's head. The Eagles recovered at the 32 yardline. The Cowboys were able to get the ball back. This time Teeter pitched it to Ruhs who ran it in for a touchdown. 46-7

Both teams punted back and fourth. Wray made a pair of touchdowns in the final minutes of the game, but it wasn't enough to overcome the Cowboys, who won it 46-21.

Dax Ruhs (above) made a reception during Friday's game against the Wray Eagles, running it in for a touchdown. Kolt Trachsel (left), Nolan Deeds, Garrett Taylor and Connor Simpson got in on a tackle. The Cowboys won 46-21. They are undefeated so far this season with a 3-0 record. Photo by Kevin Bottrell/The Goodland Star-News
