Fort Hays president pays Goodland a visit

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com Fort Hays State University President Ed Hammond is focusing on the Kansas Board of Regents' new master plan, called "Foresight 2020," as he visits counties around the state on his annual media tour.

The plan includes three objectives: increasing higher education said Fort Hays State is leading that retainment, producing graduates for charge. in-demand jobs, and maintaining quality education programs.

"If you lose ground on that percentage, the amount of money in the workforce goes down," he said.

The regents' goal is to get that to 60 percent by 2020. Hammond

Watch for deer on the roads

Deer can be spotted near Kansas roadways any time of the year. However, deer breeding season peaks in mid-November, and this marks the period when deer-vehicle collisions are highest. That's why the Kansas Department of Transportation, the Kansas Department of Wildlife, Parks and Tourism, and the Kansas Highway Patrol are working together to raise awareness and help drivers avoid collisions with deer. Not only are deer more active during the fall, shorter days mean dusk and dawn occur when commuter traffic is highest. According to Transportation Department spokesperson Steve Swartz, 15 percent, or 8,695, of all traffic crashes in 2012 involved deer. Two people were killed and 322 were injured in these crashes.

Motorists should Be especially watchful at dawn and dusk when deer are particularly active, watch for more than one deer, as they seldom travel alone, and should reduce speed and be alert near wooded areas or green spaces.

Out for a ride

Saturday families could ride their bikes together around Goodland and visit designated zones with activities to learn about heath and wellness. The bike-a-thon started at 9 a.m. at the Goodland Activities Center and lasted until 11 a.m. Activities were planned at Chamber Park by the City of Goodland, Memory Park by the Commissioner Ken Klemm said he still does not see good value for the taxpayer and that he doesn't think the incentives are helping increase the local economy.

Among children today, obesity is causing a broad range of health problems that previously weren't seen until adulthood. High intake of added sugars, as opposed to naturally occurring sugars, is implicated in the rise of childhood obesity. This added sugar is found in candy, cakes and cookies - the same treats we all indulge in on Halloween! Be careful not to make snacking on left-over Halloween goodies a trend in your family's daily diet.

The American Heart Association hopes you'll consider these tips to keep your ghosts and goblins a little healthier along the way!

Feed them first. Make sure your

Halloween can bring out the against the law to not pass out candy on Halloween, so don't be afraid to be "that" house that doesn't. Start a new tradition on your street and think about a healthier version of treats to give out. How about trying boxes of fun toys instead of sneaky sweets. Try crayons, stickers, colored pencils or Halloween tattoos! Remember, avoid using toys that could be a choking hazard to little ones

Savor It. Remind your kids to eat their treats in moderation, so they last longer (wink, wink).

The Halloween indulgences don't stop after trick-or-treating! Follow these suggestions to have a healthy post-Halloween:

Can companies act with impunity?

Can the world's biggest corporations act with impunity? When it comes to General Electric - the eighth largest U.S. corporation, with $146.9 billion in sales and $13.6 billion in profits in 2012 the answer appears to be "yes."

Let us begin with a small-scale case in upstate New York, where in late September 2013 GE announced that it would close its electrical capacitor plant in the town of Fort Edward. Some 200 workers will lose their jobs and, thereafter, will have little opportunity to obtain comparable wages, pensions, or even employment in this economically distressed region. Ironically, the plant has been highly profitable. Earlier in the year, the local management threw a party to celebrate a record-breaking quarter. But the high-level financial dealings of a vast multinational operation like GE are mysterious, and the company merely announced that the Fort Edward plant was "non-competitive." The United Electrical Workers, the union that has represented the workers there for the past 70 years, has already begun a vigorous campaign of resistance to the plant closing, but it is sure to be an uphill battle.

If we dig deeper into the record, a broader pattern of corporate misbehavior emerges. Indeed, the Fort Edward factory is one of two GE plants that polluted the communities at Fort Edward and nearby Hudson Falls, as well as a 197-mile stretch of the Hudson River, with 1.3 million pounds of cancer-causing PCBs for several decades. When the extent of this environmental disaster began to be revealed in the 1970s, GE began a lengthy campaign to deny it and, later, a multimillion dollar public relations campaign to prevent remedial action by the Environmental Protection Administration. GE lost this battle, for the EPA insisted upon the dredging of the Hudson River and ordered GE to pay for it. Thus, the Hudson Valley became the largest Superfund cleanup site in the United States, with a project that will take decades to complete.

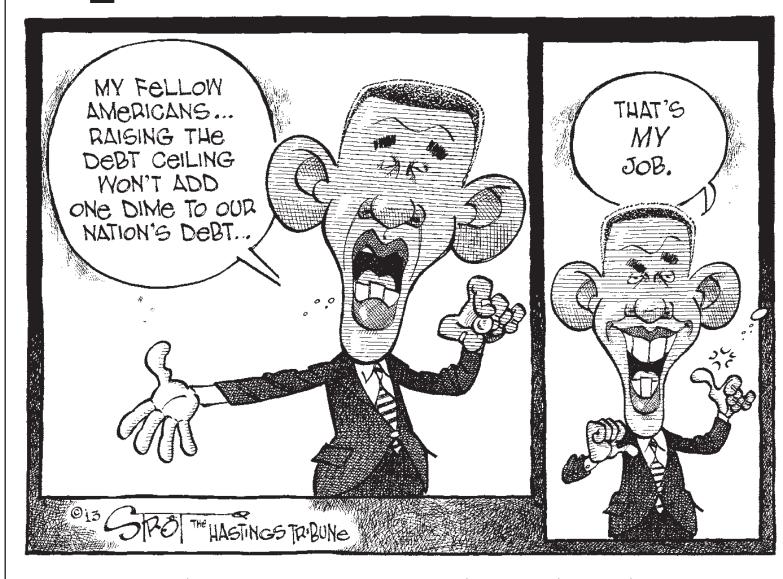

GE has produced other environmental disasters, as well. Three GE nuclear reactors at the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power site in Japan melted down and exploded on March 31, 2011. This was the world's worst nuclear accident in three decades, and quickly spread radioactive contamination nearly 150 miles. Indeed, the stricken reactors are still sending 300 tons a day of radioactive water flooding into the Pacific Ocean.

Despite this appalling record, the U.S. government has been very generous to GE. During the financial crisis of 2008-2009, the federal government's Temporary Liquidity Guarantee Program loaned approximately $85 billion to GE Capital, the company's huge finance arm. GE needed the bailout because, among other reasons, GE Capital was marketing subprime mortgages. The Federal Reserve also bought $16.1 billion worth of short-term corporate i.o.u.'s from GE in late 2008, when the public market for this kind of debt had nearly frozen. In yet a further indication of GE's influence, President Obama appointed Jeffrey Immelt, GE's chief executive officer, as chair of his Council on Jobs and Competitiveness, which strategizes about how to revive America's manufacturing base. One of Immelt's favorite panaceas is to end taxes on the overseas profits of corporations.

Thus, it might seem that those 200 embattled workers at Fort Edward have no possibility at all of effectively challenging a corporation this wealthy and influential. But stranger things have happened in the United States - especially when Americans have had their fill of corporate arrogance.

Formula 1 season anything but boring

I've read a lot of news stories lately saying that the 2013 Formula 1 season is boring. Even though this year is my first foray into the sport, I think it's anything but boring.

I understand the arguments. Sebastian Vettel and his Red Bull car seem unstoppable. Going into Sunday's race in Japan, he had won five out of the last six races and during those he led most of the time, often pulling out tremendous leads over the competition.

He's also far ahead in the points. Before Sunday, he had amassed 272 points, far ahead of the 195 points held by second-place Fernando Alonso.

We were going into a situation where the driver's championship could be decided with four races left to run. There was almost no chance of a gripping last-second contest, such as the 1976 shootout between Niki Lauda and James Hunt, depicted in the new Ron Howard movie "Rush."

Vettel won again on Sunday, but Alonso scored high enough to stay in the running, barely. There could be an upset, but something pretty extraordinary would have to happen.

So why do I think this is exciting? Because of everything that is going on behind first place.

Take the race at Yeongam, Korea, a few weekends ago. This was another example and secure a position at one of several teams, where Vettel got out to a big lead at the start such as Lotus, that are already known to have traffic jam. But, since I don't have millions of and stayed their for most of the race. However, an open spot. I think that's going to create some there was a lot of riveting racing going on exciting battles, just not for first place. behind him. Sauber is not a team that you see at the front to Colorado this weekend. I had, thanks to of the pack a lot. They don't have the fastest the owner of the paper, a pair of tickets to the cars and certainly don't have the money of the giants like Red Bull and Ferrari. They are the Buffalo Bills of the F1 world. Esteban Gutierrez hasn't gotten above 11th all year and Nico Hulkenberg had been in that vicinity as well. But at Yeongam, Hulkenberg got up to fourth place and amazingly held off former world homecoming, since I'm a CSU alumnus. I took champion Lewis Hamilton in his much faster Mercedes until the end. It was one of the most epic battles I've seen all year.

My analysis, which admittedly is based on no experience at all with the sport, is that with the Driver's Championship all but sown up for Vettel, the main motivation for most of the other drivers is securing a seat for next year.

In Hulkenberg's case this is particularly crucial because he's a bigger guy than most of the other drivers and there are new weight limits in 2014. Nico could find himself being rejected as "too heavy." But with his performance in Korea generating him a lot of press, he's now being mentioned as a possible driver for Lotus next year.

A lot of the other drivers are going to be trying to distinguish themselves to either shore up their position at their current team or to try I missed the Japan race because I went back Colorado State University homecoming game on Saturday. Even though I cover a lot of sports for the paper, I'm still not much of a sports fan apart from Formula 1. I do enjoy going to games, however, and what better game to go to than a good friend of mine who, although she did not attend CSU, is really the only football fan among my friends.

We had a great time, even though CSU lost to San Jose State 34-27. Even with my knowledge of football - which is mostly based on watching the Cowboys the past couple seasons - I could see what was going on: the defense couldn't tackle to save their lives. The offense seemed to do quite well and could have won if the defense had been able to bring down the Spartan ball carriers without giving up so many first downs.

It was still an enjoyable day at the stadium. I have no officially been to more CSU football games as an alumnus than I did when I was a student there. I'll definitely miss Hughes Stadium, as the effort to build a new on-campus stadium doesn't seem to be slowing down. I have a lot of good memories of that stadium, and not just for football games. When I was in high school in the early 2000s, I performed with the Loveland High School marching band on that field several times. It's a great stadium to play in, in some ways even better than Mile High in Denver.

I'm sure the new one will be nice and all, but it'll be a nightmare to get in and out of. That part of Fort Collins is already a slow-moving dollars to donate to the school they're unlikely to listen to me. As the saying goes, "the only permanence is change." There have been a myriad of changes in the six years since I graduated from Colorado State, and there will be many, many more in the years to come. Hopefully I'll still get the opportunity to go to a few games, I'm sure I'll enjoy the experience no matter where the stadium is.

A lot of changes over the years

While we were on our way to Arkansas a couple of weeks ago, my sister and I started talking about what you used to be able to do that you can't do now.

She told a story, related by her mother-inlaw, of her husband, who at the age of 16 was driving a school bus to pick up the youngsters in his area of rural Kansas. Down in Arkansas, our cousin George, who is 70, said that he remembers being on a school bus driven by a high school-age boy when he was a student.

Can you imagine a 16-year-old taking a school bus around today? It would be a statewide, if not nationwide, scandal.

Still neither my brother-in-law nor cousin George could recall any accidents, and these boys drove in all kinds of weather, because in those days, they didn't cancel school every time there was half an inch of snow. If the roads were slick, you drove slowly and there weren't dozens of other vehicles on the roads.

Don't ask me how that led us to hot dogs.

I asked George if his mother had boiled the hot dogs when he was a boy.

Oh, yes, he said. That's the only way his mother, our Aunt Adele, or our mother, or anyone else ever cooked them. You tossed the hot dogs into a pot of water and cooked them until they split.

We would sometimes roast them over an open fire when we were camping, but barbecues were rare and we were probably in our teens before we had a roasted hot dog.

Of course there, was a little device Mom bought that basically electrocuted the wiener. You put the hot dog between two probes, closed the lid and plugged it in. In just a few minutes, the dog was cooked to a turn - no boiling water needed. Mom loved it.

My sister remembers it as similar to those gadgets you find in stores marked "As seen on TV." I think that's about right. It was a one-trick gadget that was fun for awhile and then got put on a shelf – sort of an early chocolate fountain. I was surprised when George said that another thing you don't see anymore is people paying with cash. He said he remembers the Army paying troops off in cash each month.

Now, George graduated from West Point in 1966 and rose steadily through the ranks until he retired as a three-star general about 10 years ago, so I was not surprised that he had been the head of a company (I'm not sure how many) soldiers in the late 1960s and early '70s. However, I was amazed that the Army still paid in cash that late in the game.

Today, I'm sure that the Army doesn't even hand out checks, much less cash, but George said he remembers going down to the payroll center once a month and being handed a box of cash. He remembers it as being about $10,000, a small fortune in those days. He had to sign for it and could count it or not as he pleased.

"I always counted it," he said, "and as I counted, I put it in envelopes marked with each soldier's name. That way when I was done, I knew the amount was correct and that each man would get the correct pay."

Wow! Shades of westerns, when they stopped the train and stole the Army payroll.

Yep, times have changed, some for the better, other maybe not so much, but at least the hot dogs are better from the microwave.

tuition costs, he said. While Fort Hays often appears on top education quality lists, Hammond said the real test is how students do on national exams and licensure tests. Fort Hays has two students who scored in the top 10 in the Certified Public Accountant exam, and of the 266 elementary education graduates of 2013, 260 passed their licensure exam.

"That tells me we're doing things right," he said.

Hammond said a Kansas Department of Commerce study identified five areas where there is a lot of demand for new college-educated workers: education, manufacturing, professional science, hospitality and healthcare.

"We've got programs in all those, and we're spending 40 percent of our instructional budget in those areas," he said.

Hammond pointed out that although agriculture is not on the list, Fort Havs still maintains a strong agriculture program that focuses on family farm operation.

Hammond said one idea he's been kicking around is to recruit the best and brightest students from rural counties and put them in a business entrepreneurship program. When they come out of the program, he said, teams of two students each would have a business plan and a loan for startup money as long as they opened that business in a rural county.

"Our research shows lots of graduates would come back in the jobs were available," he said.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mindbending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
