Dangerous wind chill

Temperatures fall after weekend snows

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansan.com

Light snow Saturday and Sunday wasn't the biggest danger this weekend as temperatures dropped to dangerous levels across the High Plains due to wind chill.

The snow accumulated to up to 3 inches in some areas of Sherman County, most of it falling on Saturday. The low temperature Saturday was 1 degree, and although Sunday was nice enough for a little sledding, things took a turn for the colder on Sunday evening.

A National Weather Service issued an advisory Sunday, saying that the winds could drop temperatures to a dangerous level in the morning hours Monday. A Wind Chill Warning was also in effect until 10 a.m. Monday morning for the Tri-State Area, meaning that observed temperatures had actually dropped to dangerous levels. The lowest wind-chilled temperature for the area was measured at -35 degrees in Burlington.

The weather service advised wearing a hat and gloves when outdoors due to the danger of frost bite and hypothermia.

The actual low temperature in Goodland without wind chill was -9 degrees Sunday night with an average wind speed of 12.8 mph and gusting as high as 28 mph. The record low temperature for Jan. 5 was -14, set in 1942.

The service is predicting mostly sunny days this week, with temperatures reaching 48 degrees.

Icy conditions on Saturday caused several accidents on I-70. The first happened at 2:28 p.m. near mile marker nine west of town.

The roads were packed with snow (above) starting Saturday morning and have remained so in many areas around Goodland. Few people ventured out to city parks (below) as the snow fell, but Sunday afternoon people were observed sledding at the drainage areas.

Cheyenne County coyote contest is this weekend

By Amanda Miller

amiller@nwkansan.com

Starting this weekend, FoxPro's Midwest Coyote Contest will be taking place Saturday and Sunday, at the St. Francis Fairgrounds. This is the 17th year for the calling contests to be held in St. Francis.

Last year's contest was another great year. The "Masters of Coyote Calling" and winners of the Nikon Coyote Special Class was Wade Edis and Jay Lovitt from Mullen, Neb. They took in 18 coyotes. "It was a great hunt," said Brent Rueb, coordinator. "The hunters brought in 439 coyotes. This number of coyotes harvested is, in my belief, the largest number of coyotes taken in a two-day coyote calling contest in the nation."

There were a total of 135 teams registering - 83 of the "Nikon Coyote Special Class" teams and 52 of the "Hornady Novice Class" teams. Of those 13 teams came in with double-digit totals, which is the most ever.

This year, Frontier Arms of St. Francis has taken the sponsorship for the Advanced class. "The Frontier Arms Class" is the new name. The "Hornady Novice Class" still remains the novice team's name.

The "Hornady Novice Class" is already full, and "The Frontier Arms Class" had 50 teams already.

Teams are signed up from Kansas, Colorado, and Nebraska, as well as Arkansas, California, Iowa, Minnesota, Mississippi, South Dakota and Texas.

A new rule for 2014 states: There will be no public dumping of coyotes of any kind from contestants of the Midwest Coyote Calling Event. Penalty for this infraction is a 2-year suspension from competing in the Midwest Coyote Calling Event. No exceptions. On the second offense it will be the automatic banning from competing in the Midwest Coyote Calling Event forever.

People who are not participating in the event are urged to come to the fairgrounds during check-in on Sunday to see all the teams returning with their coyotes.

Services' incorporation into KanCare delayed

The State of Kansas and the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services have agreed to continue working toward the integration of home- and community-based services for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities into KanCare.

In order to complete work on the details of the agreement, the planned Jan. 1 implementation will be postponed temporarily.

The state and Medicare and Medicaid Services will work toward an agreement by Feb. 1.

The full implementation timeline will be determined in that process.

The extra time will allow for full consideration of public comments that were submitted to the services' website that was set up to take community comments on this change in the way intellectual and developmental disabilities waiver services are provided, including any updates to the KanCare Section 1115 demonstration Special Terms and Conditions to which the parties agree.

The federal website was down for a period of time in early December, so the comment period was extended through Dec. 24.

Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services and the state need more time to evaluate the comments.

The temporary postponement will also allow for refinement of the State's effort to eliminate the intellectual and developmental disabilities waiver's "underserved" wait list that has existed for more than a decade.

"The shared commitment by the state and CMS to comprehensive, integrated care for Kansans in Medicaid remains strong," said Kansas Lt. Gov. Jeff Colyer, M.D.

The "underserved" list comprises Kansans with developmental disabilities who are already receiving some Medicaid services.

"Going forward, this administration aims to keep Kansans off the underserved list and reduce the PD/DD waiting lists, and KanCare's integrated care coordination is key to solving that longstanding issue," Kansas Department for Aging and Disability Services Secretary Shawn Sullivan said.

Letters have been mailed to consumers and providers to notify them of this temporary postponement of intellectual and developmental disabilities and home- and community-based services in KanCare.

KanCare officials will continue to communicate program updates to those providers who were preparing to deliver additional home- and community-based services and supports under the previously planned waiting list reduction.

"It's important to continue communicating openly with current recipients of home- and community-based services so these KanCare members understand that their Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities waiver services will not be under KanCare starting Jan. 1, 2014. Their medical services will remain in KanCare while their I/DD waiver services will be in their KanCare health plan once the agreement with Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services is finalized," Secretary Sullivan said.

About KanCare: KanCare is the new Medicaid program in Kansas that began on Jan. 1, 2013, with integrated medical services for all Medicaid consumers.

The KanCare model uses managed care to support intensive care coordination and to deliver the highest quality of services under pay-for-performance contracts that hold the health plans accountable for improved health outcomes for KanCare members.

The first phase of Kansas' Medicaid reforms launched after two years of statewide discussions, including many stakeholder forums and public hearings across Kansas. Visit KanCare.ks.gov.

Federal government takes action on radon gas

January is National Radon Action Month, according to the Environmental Protection Agency. Health agencies throughout the U.S. have joined forces to promote action against the leading cause of lung cancer for non-smokers. The American Lung Association, Centers for Disease Control, and National Cancer Institute all agree that radon is a National health problem and encourage radon testing during the January call to action.

Radon is a naturally-occurring, invisible and odorless radioactive gas. One in 15 American homes contains high levels of radon. Millions of Americans are unknowingly exposed to this dangerous gas. In fact, a recent study by Harvard University ranks radon as America's number one in-home hazard. By taking simple steps to test your home for radon and fix if necessary, this health hazard can be avoided.

Radon gas is not isolated to certain geographical areas or home types. Radon problems have been detected in homes in every county of the U.S. It caused more American fatalities last year than carbon monoxide, fires and handguns combined! If a home hasn't been tested for radon in the past two years, the Surgeon General urge you to take action. Contact your state radon office for information on locating qualified test kits or qualified radon testers.

The federal commitment made by the agency, the General Services Administration and the departments of Agriculture, Defense, Energy, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Interior, and Veterans Affairs will focus efforts on radon reduction and mitigation in homes, especially those of low-income families, many of whom do not have the resources to make the simple fixes necessary to protect their homes and loved ones.

In the recent years, the federal consortium has met with key leaders in the public health, environmental and private sectors to launch the federal action plan that includes both immediate and long-term steps to reduce radon exposure.

Logan museum to offer painting classes in February

How many of you have been flipping through channels on the television and happened to come across the "Joy of Painting with Bob Ross" program. If you stopped for only a moment, you would have been captivated by the simple and easy method of his painting techniques. We will again have two certified instructors that teach classes at the Hansen Museum on a regular basis. T.R. Mathews and Sandy Seamone, Arriba, Colo., will be here to entertain and instruct, step by step, revealing how easy and fun it is to paint the Bob Ross way. No previous experience is necessary and anyone can do it.

On Saturday, February 15, 2014, the class will be painting "Fall Glory" and on Sunday, February 16, "Morning Light." The classes will run 8 to 11 a.m. and noon to 2 p.m. (Mountain Time) both days.

This fabulous learning opportunity is brought to you through the Hansen Museum Continued Education Program and offered to the public at a reduced rate. For more information call 785-689-4846 or go to our web at www.hansenmuseum.org. All you need to bring is a roll of paper towels, all other supplies are provided.

Museum Hours are Monday through Friday 8-11 a.m. and noon-3 p.m.; Saturday 8-11 a.m. and noon-4 p.m.; Sundays and holidays noon-4 p.m. All times are Mountain Time. Time of the year for scams

A Kansas Insurance Department employee recently received a credit card statement online that showed a balance due. Nothing new, you say — except that the employee has never had that credit card.

The holiday season is a time that everyone should be aware of cyber scams, said Sandy Praeger, Kansas Commissioner of Insurance.

"There are many fraudulent websites and scam artists who are working this holiday season to take your money or identity," Commissioner Praeger said. "Kansans should verify that the messages and solicitations you receive online are legitimate. We should also be cautious in sandy praeger

giving out personal information electronically."

Some of the potential online holiday problems may include the following:

- Electronic greeting cards that may contain malware.
- Requests for charitable contributions from organizations that you are not familiar with.
- Phony credit card applications.

- Online auctions for selling gift cards.
- Shipping notifications for items you didn't order.
- Opening up emails with unfamiliar names or addresses.

• Fraudulent solicitations for health insurance, under the guise of the new health care law.

"This is the time of year when we all need to be cautious of scam artists who want to take away our good cheer," Commissioner Praeger said.

Kansas State researcher gives update on study

Less than two years into a sweeping five-year study focused on prevention of Shiga toxin-producing E. coli in beef, researchers at Kansas State University and elsewhere are making progress on several fronts.

"We've already done some beneficial research," said Randy Phebus, Kansas State professor of animal sciences and industry, adding that scientists are working closely with industry production and processing partners because it's important to study the problem in real-life settings.

The $25 million effort announced two years ago includes more than 50 collaborators across the country, including 14 universities and government agencies. Seventeen Kansas State scientists are working with the lead institution, the University of Nebraska, and others on a multi-pronged approach aimed at reducing the occurrence and public health risks from Shiga toxin-producing Escherichia coli. This group of bacteria is a serious threat to the safety of the food supply, causing more than 265,000 infections in the U.S. each year. Eating contaminated food or direct contact with fecal matter from infected cattle and other ruminants causes most of these illnesses.

"I think this is really groundbreaking work that we're doing," Phebus said. "It's work that hasn't really been done elsewhere just because of the scope of it."

Kansas State's role

The part of the study Kansas State is focused on has several objectives, said Phebus, the lead K-State researcher.

- Objective 1 involves improving detection capabilities. "There are over 200 strains of this bacterium," he said, "but we're looking at the eight strains that the U.S. Department of Agriculture considers adulterants in raw beef and ground beef."
- Objective 2 has a team studying the biology and ecology of these organisms in the beef production environment. "Where do they hang out?" asked Phebus. "What makes cattle become positive? How does it get transmitted to the meat?"

• Objective 3 is the portion that Phebus leads directly. "This team is examining intervention technologies where researchers are looking at anything pre-harvest, post-harvest and even at the consumer level where we can control E. coli using current technologies, such as lactic or peracetic acid washing of carcasses," he said. "The issue is that we don't know how well these technologies that the industry's already using work against these new strains of E. coli. We have a better understanding of how they work against E. coli O157:H7, another potent strain that scientists have been studying for several years. Plus we're working on developing new antimicrobial technologies."

• Objective 4 involves what the team calls quantitative microbial risk assessment, Phebus said, which includes gathering all of the data coming out of the various research efforts plus data from other studies "so we can quantify and predict how well certain strategies work versus others."

• Objective 5 involves the outreach component, he said. Through educational modules, presentations, publications and other methods, the researchers will inform and educate the public, including beef producers and processors, about the findings of the various studies.

"A big part of our grant is to look at how we can reduce the risk of these pathogenic E. coli strains in food service and consumer situations. That's where education and human behavioral interventions come in," said Phebus, adding that there's a big need for consumer education when it comes to the proper storage, handling and cooking of food.

Studying live cattle and processing sectors

"We've done a ground beef study in a large beef processing plant already and will repeat it early next year," Phebus said. "We've also completed a study looking at sausage manufacturing."

In a specially outfitted space at Kansas State's Biosecurity Research Institute, team members are investigating how electrostatic spray technology can efficiently deliver food-grade antimicrobial solutions as a whole carcass treatment to control STEC and other meat-borne pathogens. Electrostatic technology puts a fog of chemical into the air that's charged and then is uniformly deposited onto all oppositely charged carcass surfaces.

"The technology works because it gives good coverage but also allows us to use chemicals that would be too expensive to use as a high-volume wash," Phebus said. "It also uses far less water than a wash does, which would be a huge bonus for (beef) plants in some parts of the country if it's effective."

The researchers are also examining possible intervention in live cattle, including trying to determine the prevalence of these organisms prior to harvest, he said.

"We're looking at what impacts the organisms at different times of the year and in different management systems at the feedlot level," he said. "We completed a big project this summer that looked at fecal and hide samples and then corresponding carcass samples to try to follow the contamination from the live animal through processing."

Phebus said that while researchers are making headway, there's more work to be done: "The minute you answer one question, you have 10 more questions to answer. It's an evolving process."

Livestock future rests with one senator

In an unprecedented display of political polarization and congressional gridlock, Congress was unable to pass a 2012 Farm Bill, which later became known as the 2013 Farm Bill, and now will be dubbed the 2014 Farm Bill.

One section contained only in the House of Representatives' (House's) version of the Farm Bill, Section 12102, would prevent the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) from writing rules to implement and enforce key provisions of the Packers and Stockyards Act of 1921. Those key provisions prohibit meatpackers from engaging in unfair and deceptive practices when purchasing livestock from independent livestock producers.

If Congress includes House Section 12102 in the 2014 Farm Bill, livestock producers will be left without any meaningful protections against unfair and anticompetitive practices such as retaliation, deception, and discrimination by the highly concentrated meatpackers.

The meatpackers do not want to be banned from such unfair and anticompetitive practices because they rely on those very practices to vertically integrate the livestock industries, which entails the replacement of marketplace competition with meatpacker control over the livestock supply chain.

Meatpackers have already vertically integrated the poultry industry and have nearly completed the vertical integration of the hog industry, which means independent producers in those industries now have few, if any, alternative marketing options other than to enter a production contract with one of the highly concentrated meatpackers.

The Farm Bill Conference Committee is expected to meet in early January to decide the fate of Section 12102 in the House Farm Bill that would deny producers the marketplace protections first passed by Congress in 1921.

Senator John Hoeven (R-N.D.) serves on the Conference Committee and his vote is viewed as critical for the future of the livestock industry. In fact, it could well be the deciding vote.

If Senator Hoeven votes to reject Section 12102, then livestock producers and their competitive markets will receive the protections Congress intended them to have against the abusive practices of the highly concentrated meatpackers.

If, on the other hand, Senator Hoeven votes to include the Section 12102 in the 2014 Farm Bill, then the meatpackers will proceed in earnest to vertically integrate the cattle industry by substituting their corporate control for the forces of competition.

Given that the U.S. cattle industry is the last of the livestock sectors to be vertically integrated by the highly concentrated meatpackers, the upcoming vote regarding whether producers will be protected from abusive market practices may well be the last opportunity that Congress has to decide the future of independent producers in the U.S. cattle industry.

We hope Senator Hoeven will encourage Congress to choose to continue supporting a cattle industry that consists of widely dispersed, independent cattle producers that market into a competitive marketplace rather than the centrally controlled model of today's hog industry. To do so, Senator Hoeven must fight to remove Section 12102 in the House version of the Farm Bill that deprives independent producers from protections against abusive marketing practices. —Bill Bullard, chief executive officer of R-CALF USA

2013 – a year of resistance

The year has shown monumental efforts by some to get back to the Constitution. An ever-growing portion of the largely distracted public is finally awakening to the fact that they are losing freedom and that both parties are responsible. Let us review those monumental moments of 2013 each of which have been covered extensively by us in previous columns.

We began the year with what was called "successionitis" – a desire of some of the people to leave the Union – not seen in the United States since the Civil War. Fifteen states posted over 25,000 signatures with Texas posting 116,000 by itself. The President closed down his site to further counting. With his refusal to allow further counting and the establishment media's refusal to continue coverage, the issue was squelched. Discontent with the federal government not following the Constitution and the resultant loss of freedom (especially cited were NDAA and TSA) were said to be the reasons for the backlash by those participating.

This was followed by the 2013 Sheriff's Rebellion wherein by mid-February, 336 elected county sheriffs had signed pledges that they will not enforce any unconstitutional gun control laws or executive orders – seventeen of them in California. Nine states refused to comply. The Utah Sheriff's Association made the strongest statement aimed directly at the President. "We, like you, swore a solemn oath to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States, and we are prepared to trade our lives for the preservation of its traditional interpretation." Wyoming's new "Firearm Protection Act," threatened federal officials with up to five years in prison and $5,000 in fines if convicted of attempting to enforce unconstitutional statutes or decrees infringing on the gun rights of Wyoming citizens. Kentucky has enacted something similar and reportedly, Missouri and Texas have similar legislation pending.

Also in February thousands gathered from California to New York and from Florida to Alaska, on February 23, to remind the federal government that the "right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed." They were saying, in effect, "Back off Mr. President with your executive orders and Congress with your proposed new laws, you are on sacred Constitutional soil." The establishment press was weak, almost non-existent, in its cover-

from other pens

• dr. harold pease

The 124 cities participating largely had to enter their own pictures of their event on the Internet to get coverage – so weak was press response. Seventeen such rallies were held in California alone, a state already sensitive to the loss of gun right freedoms and threatened with more of the same by a largely hostile democratically controlled State Legislature.

On March 6, 2013, one man stood on the Senate floor arguing for 13 hours, even against his own party, to prevent the President's use of drone strikes to kill Americans on U.S. soil. Without Tea Party support he would have been alone. The phrase, "Stand With Rand" became popular overnight. Senator Paul wanted assurance from the President that he would never do this to us as he had Americans in other lands. The assurance finally came the next day from Eric Holder but it was far from convincing.

Summer brought the "Gang of Eight" and immigration reform that had every appearance of just another amnesty. S. 744 did nothing to improve border security or immigration enforcement and the House, resisting the pressure to be railroaded, has chosen not to act upon the Senate's favorable vote until 2014. The Tea Party Patriot movement played an important role in revealing its numerous defects.

The year brought an outbreak of media coverage of the National Security Administration's, NSA, spying on over 100 million Americans, recording their telephone conversations, emails, and other electronic messages for the last seven years. Attention turned to, "Whatever happened to congressional or judicial oversight?" Included in the revelations was the 35 years of FISA court's special surveillance requests on 34,000 citizens, with virtually no denials. This has caused many to look to the Constitution for protection from their own government. They asked, "Is government spying on its own citizens constitutional?" Edward Snowden said no and intentionally shared with the world that which our government was doing to us and everybody else. He helped give us focus on our government's serious violations of Amendments I, IV, V and even VI. To millions he was a hero.

In the Fall of the year, Barack Obama, by himself, in total defiance of the Constitution Art. I, Sec. 8, Clause 11, almost took us into war by his intention to, send a "missile across the bow of a Syrian ship." He was supported in his doing so by Secretary of State, John Kerry and Republican power Sens. John McCain and Lindsey Graham. At least 60 percent of Americans did not support another no-win war and the President backed down.

In November Senator Ted Cruz stood for 21 hours and 19 minutes, once again mostly by himself with but Tea Party support. Our national debt at 17 trillion dollars, the highest in our history, with Obama responsible for seven trillion of that number in the last five years, was central to his stand. The Republicans had not shut down the government as the media said. Instead they fully funded the government with the exception of Obamacare. More and more people are realizing that the U.S. is going to experience a fiscal collapse unless we return to fiscal responsibility. A core principle of the Tea Party movement. Senator Cruz opposed the debt-ceiling rise as another always follows.

More than half of the states showed their resistance to Obamacare by opting out of exchanges. Resistance to it mounted exponentially when the government website did not work as promised and when the people realized that the President knowingly sold his forced care plan under the false premise that they could keep their doctor and their existing healthcare plan. Most Americans now oppose it.

Seemingly those who damage the Constitution always win. But this year, 2013, had many victories. Let us remember with gratitude those who did stand for freedom and remove from power those who did not. Happy New Year my liberty loving friends!!

Dinner guests and sewer problems

It was New Years Eve, and I had friends coming for dinner.

So, I wasn't surprised to find that there was a small lake centered on the drain in the basement.

People coming over, dinner to make, sewer problems – sounded normal to me.

I asked Steve to call the drain guy, who said he couldn't get here until "tomorrow."

I scratched my head, wondering what plumber works on New Years Day, but I couldn't do anything one way or the other, so I let it go.

Steve bailed the basement and asked if we should cancel our dinner plans.

I said no, we'd go forward. The toilets worked. The shower and bathtub worked. The sinks in both bathrooms worked. The only things we couldn't use were the kitchen sink, dishwasher, garbage disposal and washing machine. We'd improvise. We'd get by. We'd do it.

And we did. I alternated between the tiny bathroom sink and the porch for washing my preparation bowls and dishes, washing, rinsing and drying each piece as I went. It was slower and clunkier than usual, but the day was beautiful and we got 'er done.

• open season

Oh, we had a few setbacks. Several times, the water would start rising and Steve would have to start baling again.

Then there was the dishwasher.

I had carefully removed everything – it had been full – and hand washed and dried every piece of silverware and glassware, every plate, bowl and pan in the dishwasher so that they would be available. Then we went for a walk.

What I had forgotten was that I had set the dishwasher on a two-hour time delay in the morning before I had discovered the basement swimming pool. When I pulled all the dishes out of the dishwasher, I had left it open a crack. Somewhere along the line, however, it got closed and two hours later, as we merrily walked the dog in park, the empty dishwasher turned itself on, washed nothing and poured all that water down the drain into – you guessed it – the basement.

When we got home, the dishwasher was happily finishing its task and, with a gunt and a grumble, Steve got out the ol' bailing bucket.

Still things were in good order when our guests arrived and we all traded stories of plumbing problems past. The dishes were scraped, rinsed in the bathroom sink and stacked on the kitchen bar.

New Years Day saw no drain guy, but the bar began to look like Dish Mountain.

On Thursday, the drain guy showed up, the problem was solved and Steve did three loads of dishes.

He said he was happy to do the dishes. It was a whole lot better than baling, but he's keeping his bucket close at hand. Just in case.

Jacob Gardner, 36, of Bloomington, Ind., was driving west on I-70 in the passing lane when his 1999 Jeep Cherokee hit a patch of ice and went into the median. The car rolled once and came to rest on its wheels.

Gardner and passenger Sarah Freeman, 22, also of Bloomington, were injured and taken to the hospital. Freeman was reported as suffering disabling injuries. She had not been wearing a seatbelt.

A second similar accident happened at 4:15 at mile marker 12. A sport utility vehicle driven by Elyse Green, 18, of Columbus, Ohio, was traveling west when it hit an icy patch and rolled. The vehicle came to rest on the driver's side. Green was taken to the hospital.

About 15 minutes later, a 2006 Toyota 4Runner driven by Godoy Aldaberto Mendoza, 61, of Burbank, Calif., struck the back of a tow truck that had been picking up Green's vehicle.

Godoy Mendoza, along with passengers, Blanca Mendoza, 50, Maria Mendoza, 17, and Ashley Mendoza, 11, were all listed as injured and were transported to Goodland Regional Medical Center.

2014 Tax Information

Tax changes to affect local residents

Starting with the 2013 tax returns, several Internal Revenue Service changes will begin affecting Sherman County residents.

Starting with the 2013 tax return that will be filed by individuals between January and April, most Americans will lose the ability to deduct any medical expenses on their tax returns. The Affordable Care Act increased the amount of expenses needed before medical deductions are allowed from 7.5 percent to 10 percent of adjusted gross income. A family with income of $70,000 will need $7,000 of medical expenses before anything will be deductible and then submitted by

- Accounting and Tax Services

only the excess above the $7,000 will be allowed.

Americans over the age of 65 will still be able to use the old 7.5 percent threshold for deductible costs through 2016.

The next change affects people utilizing an employer-sponsored fringe benefit called a healthcare flex spending account. Starting with the 2013 year the maximum amount you may set aside for this is $2,500 annually, per person, per employer.

The change affecting wealthier people is that taxpayers with wage or similar earned income over $200,000 (single) or $250,000 (married) will pay an additional Medicare surtax of .9% for every dollar above the base amount.

In addition, taxpayers with any type of income, not just earned income, higher than the above amounts will pay an additional 3.8 percent unearned income surtax on investment earnings such as interest, dividends, capital gains and other similar items.

Foundation always needs donors

For those looking to make a tax-deductible donation, the Northwest Kansas Area Medical Foundation may provide that opportunity.

The Foundation raises money to assist development of health care systems and delivery at Goodland Regional Medical Center. The Foundation has helped provide equipment for nearly every department at the hospital and provides medical scholarships for high school graduates and hospital personnel.

Gifts to the Foundation are tax-deductible and can be designated for a specific purpose by the donor.

Founded in 1968, the 501-C3 organization helped finance equipment and furnishings for the hospital when it was first built. The Foundation was revived in 1983 to help the hospital deal with reduced payments from third parties such as Medicare and Medicaid. It currently serves as an intermediary between potential donors and the hospital.

The Foundation holds several fund raisers, including the Slice of Life golf tournament in June and a year-end campaign in December.

To inquire about making a contribution, contact Resource Development Director Jeff Mason at 890-6588.

Kansas ends year on target

Kansas ended 2013 with budget revenues on target Tuesday, beating the fiscal year to date estimates by $4.3 million. December revenue receipts were $3.3 million, or almost 1 percent, more than expected.

Corporate income revenue receipts were up $4.4 million for December, or almost 7 percent, in part because of about $10 million more in estimated payments made in this month compared to December 2012 which indicates that corporations had larger profits compared to the prior year.

Internal Revenue Service has videos to help with tax returns

The Internal Revenue Service is offering taxpayers a number of instructional YouTube videos to help prepare their taxes for the upcoming filing season, which begins on Jan. 31.

Several options are available to help taxpayers prepare for the 2014 tax season and get their refunds as easily as possible. Many software companies are expected to begin accepting tax returns in January and hold those returns until the IRS systems open on Jan. 31. This includes the Free File partners that offer access to their software for free at irs.gov/FreeFile. The IRS will not process any tax returns before Jan. 31, so there is no advantage to filing on paper before the opening date. Taxpayers will receive their tax refunds much faster by using e-file or Free File with the direct deposit option.

In addition, the IRS has short and informative YouTube videos on a number of tax-related topics in English, Spanish and American Sign Language (ASL). The channels have received nearly 6.5 million views:

- IRS Videos – www.youtube.com/irs/videos
- ASL Videos – www.youtube.com/IRSVideosASL
- Multilingual Videos – www.youtube.com/IRSVideosMultilingual

Specific videos that taxpayers may view to help them get ready over the coming weeks include:

- Do-It-Yourself Free Tax Preparation – Helps taxpayers find free help from certified volunteers to electronically file tax returns. Taxpayers interested in helping their own communities can also watch a video to learn about becoming involved in the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance or Tax Counseling for the Elderly programs.

- Do I Have to File a Tax Return? – Learn about the requirements for filing a tax return, including income limits and age, and why taxpayers may want to file even if they don't have to.
- How to Get 1040 Forms – Provides tips on the quickest way to get the various 1040 forms on IRS.gov.
- Tax Scams – Offers some tips on how to protect personal information and avoid becoming a tax scam victim.
- Record-keeping – Learn which financial and tax files to keep and how long to keep them.

• Changed Your Name After Marriage or Divorce? – Find out what you need to do if you have changed your name before you file your tax return.

• Choosing a Tax Preparer – Hear some useful tips for choosing a reputable tax preparer.

The IRS uses social media tools and platforms to share the latest information on tax changes, initiatives, products and services. These social media platforms include the IRS2Go phone application, YouTube, Tumblr, Twitter and Facebook. To protect taxpayer privacy, the IRS only uses social media tools to share public information, not to answer personal tax or account questions. It advises taxpayers to never post confidential information on social media sites.

We've got the knowledge and experience to handle all your tax services!

Mavericks begin new year with 78-62 win

By Kevin Bottrell
kbottrell@nwkansas.com

It may have started out as an even match between the Northwest Kansas Technical College men's basketball team and Frank Phillips College on Friday, but the Mavericks took the lead in the second half with a 19-0 run and never looked back.

The Mavericks won the game 78-62. The women's team lost two road games over the weekend, falling 88-53 to Iowa Western Community College on Friday and 86-48 to Seward County Community College on Saturday.

Next action for the Northwest Tech basketball teams will be at home Wednesday against Dodge City Community College. The women's game will be at 5 p.m. with the men's game to follow.

In Friday's game, the first six minutes did not go well for the men's team. The Plainsmen put in a trio of three pointers, while Northwest Tech got a two-pointer from Marcus Walden and three free throws from James Sylvester and Izais Hicks.

With 11:42 left in the half, Luis Heurtas put in a two pointer, but the Plainsmen hit their fourth three pointer of the game to make the score 12-7. Colin Foos answered with a three-point shot, closing the gap to 12-10.

Both teams scored two pointers, then Jackson Hussey got a putback on a missed free throw by Foos to tie the game 14-14. The Plainsmen pulled away again, but the Mavericks kept up with points from Lamar Britton, Hicks and Gian Clavell, who hit back-to-back three pointers to give the team its first lead of the game, 24-22, with 3:12 to play in the half.

The Plainsmen got a two pointer to tie the game at 24-24. John Caraballo put in his first points of the game on a pair of free throws, answered by another two pointer from the Plainsmen. Clavell put in a two pointer and with just seconds on the clock, the Plainsmen got a free throw to end the half with the Mavericks in the lead 28-27.

It would take more than a minute for the first score in the second half, a two-pointer from Walden. The Plainsmen tied the game 30-30 with a two pointer and a free throw. Walden got another two points, answered with a basket by the Plainsmen. Clavell got a three pointer, again answered by the Plainsmen, who kept things tied up 35-35.

At the 17:10 mark, the Mavericks opened up the taps. Hussey put in five points, followed by nine from Clavell and three from Britton. Hicks added a basket on an assist from Huertas, giving the Mavericks a 19-0 run.

The Plainsmen broke the run with a three pointer with 12 minutes on the clock to make it 54-38. They added a pair of free throws, answered by two free throws from Sylvester to make it 56-40. Sylvester then fouled a Plainsman on a three point attempt, resulting in another two points off free throws.

Hussey put in a two pointer, then over the next several minutes, Caraballo was fouled three times, making four out of six free throw attempts. With 7:09 to play, the Plainsmen added three points on free throws to make it 62-45.

Huertas and Walden hit jump shots, answered by a three pointer from the Plainsmen. Hicks put in a pair of free throws to make it 68-48.

The Plainsmen went on a 9-0 run before Sylvester put in a free throw with three minutes to play. The Plainsmen put in a two pointer to make it 69-59. The Mavericks would add eight more in the final two minutes on a free throw from Caraballo, three pointers from Clavell and Hussey and a two pointer from Sylvester. The Plainsmen put in the final shot, a three pointer, to end the game with a 78-62 victory for Northwest Tech.

Lamar Britton drove inside during the Northwest Tech game against Frank Phillips College on Friday at the Max Jones Fieldhouse.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
