Area troubled by wind, dust storms

High winds and dry conditions helped fuel a massive dust storm that dropped visibility to zero across northwest Kansas on Thursday.

Dave Floyd, warning coordination meteorologist with the National Weather Service, said strong winds 5,000 to 10,000 feet above ground mixed down toward the ground when temperatures climbed into the 40s around noon. The winds subsided around 4 p.m. when the temperature got cooler and cloud cover increased.

Floyd said that earlier in the week, forecasters had predicted the wind. Using computer models, they looked at what the weather might look like higher in the atmosphere and were able to have some idea what this area would see. A High Wind Watch was issued Tuesday, he said.

On Thursday, High Wind and Red Flag warnings went out, meaning that dry conditions and wind would increase fire danger. The service recorded winds of 45 mph, gusting to 63, at Goodland just before 3 p.m., the highest of the day.

More high winds materialized on Saturday. Sustained wind speeds got up to 44 mph with gusts up to 53. The winds put dust in the air again, but not as bad as Thursday. The weather service also issued a Wind Advisory for Monday, predicting gusts up to 50 mph and advising people that more dust storms were possible.

Thursday's wind dust caused several accidents around the region and helped spread one fire. At noon, a UPS truck caught fire on County Road 80 between roads 33 and 34, on the border between Cheyenne and Sherman Counties about 14 miles north of Brewster. The fire started when the truck drove over some dry tumbleweeds.

Brian James, Sherman County Fire Chief, said the Cheyenne County Fire Department arrived on scene first. The fire bled into a patch of thistles or tumbleweeds and the high winds pushed it into pasture ground, endangering some nearby cattle.

James said Cheyenne County had most of the fire out when Sherman Rural and Brewster firefighters arrived to provide support and mop up hot spots. He estimated the fire burned 30 to 40 acres.

Firefighters had difficulty getting to the fire because of its remote location and the lowered visibility due to blowing dust.

"In some places we couldn't see the front of the vehicle," he said. "We were down to 10 or 15 miles per hour."

Most of the firefighters cleared the scene about 2 p.m. James said one Brewster truck remained behind to make sure the wind didn't blow any embers past the fire line.

"We all worked together very well," he said.

At 2:30 p.m. a semi-tractor rig blew over at mile post 22 on I-70. The semi had been traveling east-bound and blew over into the median. James said a sheriff's deputy was able to get the driver, who was unharmed, out of the semi before the fire department arrived on scene.

Dust caused the state Department of Transportation to close most roads across the area, including U.S. 83 from the Nine-Mile junction east of Colby all the way to Oberlin, Interstate 70 from Colby to Burling-

Goodland hospital taking precautions for flu

Goodland Regional Medical Center is taking some preliminary precautions to limit the spread of flu and other germs by keeping the doors into the in-patient area of the facility closed at this time. Visitor access has not been limited, but if you are feeling ill, it may be best not to visit a patient in the hospital.

Symptoms of influenza include fever, headache, extreme tiredness, dry cough and muscle aches. Complications can include pneumonia, ear and sinus infections and dehydration; influenza may also worsen other chronic conditions.

The best way to avoid catching the flu this season is by taking a few very simple precautions. First, practice good hand hygiene. Wash your hands often with soap and water. If soap is not available, use an alcohol-based hand rub. Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth to prevent the spread of germs.

Second, cover your nose and mouth with a tissue when you cough or sneeze and throw the tissue in the trash after you use it. Try to avoid close contact with sick people and if you become ill limit your contact with others.

Perhaps the most important step in avoiding the flu is by getting a yearly flu vaccination. It's not too late to get your flu shot, however, vaccines may be in limited supply. Contact your health care provider or the county health department to see if vaccines are still available.

Anybody with flu-like symptoms should contact their healthcare provider or the Goodland Family Health Center before coming to the doctor's office, hospital or emergency room. This will allow staff to make the necessary precautions to limit the exposure to other patients. For more information about the flu, please go to the hospital website at www.goodlandregional.com or contact the Goodland Family Health Center at (785) 890-6075.

Health fair is scheduled for Saturday

The Sherman County Health Fair will be from 8 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. Saturday at the Northwest Kansas Technical College Student Union.

The fair is organized by Goodland Regional Medical Center, together with the Sherman County Health Department, Sunflower District Extension Office and the Sherman County Community Partnership for Prevention & Education. It includes a variety of health care providers and vendors.

Screening results from the recent community blood draws will be available the day of the health fair for review with one of the Goodland Family Health Center physicians who will all be on hand to discuss the results. Residents who participated in the blood draws will be able to update their medical records and visit with a physician who can interpret the results of their blood profiles.

Two other free screenings offered prior to the health fair include the carotid ultrasound screening and the pulmonary function screening are still available.

Appointments for the carotid ultrasound can be made by contacting the Radiology Department at the hospital at (785) 890-6033 and appointments for the pulmonary function screening can be made by contacting the Respiratory Therapy Department at (785) 890-6023. Results from the pulmonary function screenings will be available at the health fair.

Physicians from the University of Kansas Medical Center will also be on hand at the health fair to conduct a variety of cancer screenings. Two dermatologists will be available that day for free skin cancer screenings and urologists will be available for digital rectal screening for prostate cancer. The KU Cancer Center will also have a wide range of materials to distribute explaining the screenings and other issues including breast cancer early detection.

In addition to all the services and health care providers, Goodland Regional Medical Center medical professionals will also participate in the health fair. Several areas will be represented.

ruleton eager beavers

The January 12th regular monthly meeting of the Ruleton Eager Beavers was called to order by President Jade Artzer. Nineteen members, 4 leaders and 5 guests answering roll call of my favorite Christmas present.

The treasurer and reporter each gave a report.

Parliamentarian, Caleb Dechant, gave the tip that members should not kick the chairs in front of them.

There were five birthdays to celebrate.

The members discussed fundraising. It was decided not to hold a garage sale this year, but to help with the Kiwanis's flags.

Members discussed ordering new club t-shirts; President Archer assigned a committee to come up with a design and color. Members were asked to present 4-H Days skit ideas at the next meeting.

Caleb Dechant led the group in singing "You Are My Sunshine."

Jade gave a project talk on How to Start a Business. Harrison Bhend led the group in the human knot game.

The meeting was adjourned by saying the Club Motto.

Our next meeting will be on February 9, 2014. Refreshments were provided by the Hills and Hookers.

Emergency measures to control blowing dirt

Kansas is no stranger to howling winds, but blowing soil has caused serious problems in northwest Kansas this winter, threatening crops and causing at least one horrific accident.

DeAnn Presley, Kansas State Research and Extension soil management specialist, said the problem this year with blowing soil stems largely from high winds coupled with a lack of residue cover on some fields. November through April is the peak time for soil erosion by wind.

Keeping more crop residue on the surface or having living vegetation year-round through the use of cover crops are best practices to keep soil in place, Presley said. For now, however, farmers can take some emergency measures to try to reduce wind erosion and blowing soil:

- Mulching. If wind erosion has already started, it can be reduced by mulching with manure or other anchored plant materials such as straw or hay. To be effective, at least 1 1/2 to 2 tons of straw or grass per acre or 3 to 4 tons of corn or sorghum stover are needed to control erosion, and the straw or hay must be anchored. Residue can be spread by hand, spreader or other mechanical equipment.

A stubble puncher or disk set straight may be used to anchor residue and prevent it from being blown away. Wet manure application should be 15 to 20 tons per acre and not incorporated into the soil. Care should be taken to not add wheel paths parallel to the wind direction as the mulch is applied. These can contribute to wind erosion.

Generally, mulches are practical only for small areas, so mulching is most effective when applied before the soil starts to move. Farmers should scout fields to identify areas that might be susceptible to wind (low vegetation cover and a high proportion of erodible-sized clods less than the thickness of a dime) if they plan to use mulch or manure.

- Emergency Tillage. Emergency tillage is a last-resort method that can be effective if done promptly and with the right equipment. The goal is to make the soil surface rougher by producing resistant clods and surface ridges. A rough surface reduces wind speed. The larger clods and ridges resist movement and provide traps to catch the moving soil particles.

Chisels with single or only a few tool ranks are frequently used to roughen the soil surface. The combination of chisel point size, speed and depth that produces the roughest surface with the most firm, resistant clods should be used.

Research has shown that a narrow chisel (2 inches wide) on 24- to 54-inch spacing, operated 3 to 6 inches deep will usually bring enough resistant clods to the surface to control erosion on fine-textured (clay-based) soils. A medium shovel (4 inches wide) can be effective for medium-textured soils (loamy soils).

Spacings should typically be narrower where there is no cover and wider in areas of partial cover. If erosion conditions recur or persist, a second, deeper chiseling should split the first spacing. Tillage passes should be made perpendicular to the prevailing wind.

If emergency tillage is to be used in growing crops that are covered by insurance, farmers should check with their agent regarding emergency tillage rules, Presley said.

“The degree of success of emergency tillage depends greatly on climatic, soil and cover condition,” she said. “It is often not necessary to till the entire field, but rather, it is effective to perform emergency tillage passes across 50 percent of the field by tilling a pass, leaving a pass, and repeating. Narrow chisel spacing, 20 to 24 inches, is best for this method.”

If half the area has been tilled and erosion persists, the omitted strips can be emergency-tilled in a second operation, she added. If needed, a second pass should be deeper than the first.

Wide chisel spacings are used in the full-field coverage method, Presley said. The space between chisel grooves can be chiseled later should erosion persist.

All tillage operations should be perpendicular or across the direction of the prevailing or eroding wind. For most of Kansas, this means that an east-west direction of tillage is likely best, she said.

The best wind erosion control is created when hard clods cover a most the surface.

“Research shows that lower travel speeds of 2 to 3 mph generally produce the largest and most resistant clods,” she said. “However, speeds of 5 to 7 mph produce the greatest roughness. Because clod resistance is usually reduced at higher speeds, the effect may not be as long-lasting as at lower speeds. As a result, higher speeds are recommended where erosion is already in progress, while lower speeds might be a better choice in anticipation of erosion.”

Depth usually affects clod stability more than travel speed, but optimum depth depends a lot on soil conditions, such as moisture level, and compaction. Deeper tillage passes can produce more resistant clods than shallow passes.

If the problem is severe and wheat has already been destroyed or the ground is bare, chisels 4 to 6 inches wide on a 24- to 30-inch spacing will generally provide enough clods to control erosion, Presley said. Operating depth should be 4 to 6 inches in that case.

More information is available in the K-State Research and Extension publication MF2206, Emergency Wind Erosion Control, at: www.ksre.ksu.edu/bookstore/pubs/MF2206.pdf.

Voice of Democracy winner will go to Washington, D.C.

Goodland High School senior Ian Bonsall will give his Voice of Democracy speech in Washington, D.C., on March 3rd as part of the Veterans of Foreign War's Legislative Conference.

His speech won first at the state level. For that he earned the trip, a scholarship of $1,000 and if he wins the national level a chance at a $30,000 scholarship.

This year's theme was "Why I'm optimistic about America's Future." The contest is sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Bonsall joins other Goodland students as state winners. They include Jason Showaler who placed eighth on the national level and Amanda Hoffman Cebula who placed 21st.

Winners on the district level have been Rich Liess, Ryan Liess (third on the state level), Alyssa Mason, Michael Smith (third on the state level), Devin Mangus, Brennan Clouse, Amy Floyd, Nicole Hendrich (third on the state level) and Holton Witman.

Kansas emergency care report card showed improvement needed

In the five categories that make up the 2014 American College of Emergency Physicians' state-by-state report card on America's emergency care environment ("Report Card"). Kansas received an A-, an F and three C's, signaling one success but many shortcomings in a state that ranked 8th in the nation just 5 years ago.

"A strong medical workforce and relatively short wait times in our emergency departments are points of pride for Kansas, but we received a failing grade in the category of quality and patient safety," said Dr. Jeffrey Norvell, president of the Kansas chapter. "Kansas needs to fund a state emergency medical services medical director and expand the size of its emergency medicine residency program."

Kansas' best grade, an A- in the category of medical liability environment, ranked it fourth in the nation. The state has enacted many reforms that discourage frivolous lawsuits, and its $250,000 cap on non-economic damages was recently upheld by the state's Supreme Court.

For public health and injury prevention, Kansas received a C+. According to the report card, the state needs to put programs in place to address the high rates of traffic fatalities and fatal occupational injuries. In addition, the state needs to dedicate funding for occupational injury prevention enact a ban on hand-held cellphone use while driving.

Kansas received C-'s in both categories of access to emergency care and disaster preparedness. The state has a solid health care workforce and an ample supply of emergency physicians, the direct result of the creation of its first emergency residency program. However, in order to improve, Kansas must expand the size of its residency program and address its high rates of uninsured and uninsured children.

The state improved on its previous disaster planning and has a strong infrastructure for a disaster or mass casualty event, but must increase the number of health care providers registered with the Emergency System for Advance Registration of Volunteer Health Professionals.

Kansas' F for quality and patient safety environment ranked it 44th in the nation. The grade was chiefly attributed to a lack of guidelines and protocols for its emergency medical services system, which is particularly challenging for rural areas of the state. A state emergency medical services medical director also could oversee development and implementation of field triage guidelines and destination policies for stroke, heart attack and trauma patients.

"America's Emergency Care Environment: A State-by-State Report Card - 2014" evaluates conditions under which emergency care is being delivered, not the quality of care provided by hospitals and emergency providers. It has 136 measures in five categories: access to emergency care (30 percent of the grade), quality and patient safety (20 percent), medical liability environment (20 percent), public health and injury prevention (15 percent) and disaster preparedness (15 percent). While America earned an overall mediocre grade of C- on the report card issued in 2009, this year the country received a near-failing grade of D+.

Library to have book discussion

Margy Stewart of Junction City will lead a discussion of "The Ox-Bow Incident" by Walter Van Tilburg Clark at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 20, at the Goodland Public Library, 812 Broadway.

This is the second book in a four-part "The Best of the West" series. This classic story of vigilante justice unfolds in Nevada in 1885, when a cattle theft and a murder drive angry men to take the law into their own hands.

Stewart is a retired English professor from Washburn University and is co-founder of Prairie Heritage Institute. She received her Ph.D. in English from the University of Wisconsin. She became a discussion leader in 2008.

The Talk About Literature in Kansas book discussion series is provided by the Kansas Humanities Council.

from our viewpoint...

Local elections should be separate

A proposal that gained little traction in the Kansas legislature last year, but could resurface in the current session, was a cock-eyed plan to change the date of municipal elections from spring in odd-numbered years to fall in even years.

The effect would be to merge city and school elections with those for county, state and national office, and that would be a bad idea.

It's one of those things that may sound OK at first, but the more you think about what would happen, the worse it looks.

The idea is to get more people involved in local elections, but it wouldn't work. Instead, local elections – covering cities, schools and other districts – would be lost in a sea of state and national issues.

It's true that city and school elections seldom attract the number of voters that turn out in presidential years, or even to vote in the "off" years for governor. But just because city elections might be run at the same time as presidential races doesn't mean voters would know who is running for mayor.

There's no way to say the result would improve city government or local schools. The reverse might be true.

City and school elections were carefully separated from partisan voting for state and county office by an earlier generation of reformers. We say they should stay where they are, in the the spring in years when no one else is running for much of anything.

It's fashionable to decry a perceived lack of interest in local government, city, county and school, whether talking about low voter turnout in elections of a lack of citizens at public meetings.

However, voters have shown time and again that if they want change, they'll demand it. City and school officials discerning what people want when they decide things are not going the right way. Citizens show up for meetings, make themselves known, even run for office.

Most of the time, we think, they're pretty happy with what they get from their elected officials, and they are content to let them do their jobs. It's the same with local elections. Shifting them to the fall, when partisan politics dominates, won't change things.

In fact, it might result in less interest and understanding of local issues as voters focus on the big races. Leave things well enough alone, we say. Spring elections have served Kansas cities and schools well; there is no need to change. — Steve Haynes

More items to be considered this year

It amazes me how much money is spent on political campaigns. The election for Governor will be this coming November, and the cash the candidates have on hand (so far) to spend is big dollars. The Brownback/Colyer ticket has $1,990,905 and the Davis/Docking ticket has $1,002,839. There will be more money going into both campaigns this summer. Election year politics can be all about not upsetting the electorate.

It will be interesting this year on what bills and programs the Republican Leadership brings forward. The only requirement the legislature has is to complete a budget bill and that has already been done with our two-year budget completed last year. If there is ever a year when we could save taxpayers money by adjourning early, this is the year. Again, that is dependent on the school lawsuit ruling.

Last year, I made a successful amendment to the budget bill that would not take away funding from community and technical colleges. The amendment was successful, but it was for one year only. I lobbied the governor to include the funds in this year's adjustments but that was not done. I will now propose this in my budget committee and if successful I will then have to get it through my appropriations committee. Any time we make a monetary amendment, we have to find the money in another budget and take it from them. The process is called Pay-GO. So I can make one entity happy and one rather upset.

The governor has included in this year's adjustment money for the gas and oil exploration fund, which is very important to many western Kanas counties.

so. Maybe it's just time that makes things seem warmer, fuzzier and more comforting than they really were.

Daughter lived with Jez, Rupert and Penelope for several years, while she was in college and after she started teaching in eastern Kansas. They all moved south when daughter started graduate school at the University of South Carolina.

And even when Brad came into the picture, the cats were a part of her life. But Brad is allergic to cats. It's not that he doesn't like them – he just can't be around them for more than half an hour or he gets really congested.

Soon Brad became more important and the Steve's chair is vacant and every time I walk past it, I feel a little hole in my heart.

That was Jezebel's sleeping spot.

Oh, she had dozens of spots. She was, after all, a cat, and sleeping was one of the things she did best.

Jez wasn't our cat. She was rescued from under a neighbor's porch by our youngest daughter back in her college days.

That early taste of life in the wild stayed with Jez the rest of her life.

You could walk into the room one day, and she would look up and never bat an eye. Later the same day, she would take one look at you and take off as if she had never seen you before and was fairly sure that you ate cats for breakfast.

She was one spooky cat. The woman who helps me with cleaning saw her only once, she said, and that was just the tip of her tail disappearing up the stairs.

Youngest daughter says that she was a lot more friendly when she lived with her. Maybe Agriculture Dale Rodman. I am hearing that it will be an issue again this year. Kansas farm organizations oppose the concept.

The state's water supply is becoming an increasing concern as the Ogallala Aquifer continues to decline at alarming rates. We need to do something but the Ogallala Aquifer involves more than one state and when we involve the federal government it becomes even more complicated. The governor is working many angles to help this situation. He certainly made it a big part of his State of the State speech.

There is a strong chance that prescription pot will have a bill this year. The Kansas Silver-Haired Legislature officially has come out in favor of medical marijuana, and polls show 70 percent of the state would approve cannabis for medicinal purposes.

There will be many topics coming this year and as always I will be glad to answer your questions and will work at keeping northwest Kansas informed.

cats were parceled out. Penelope went back to Steve's sister, who had given her to her youngest daughter. I didn't even know that my sister-in-law took returns on cats.

We got Rupert and Jez.

I have to admit, Rupert was my favorite. Sweet, mellow and loving, I loved Rupert, but one year after we'd been gone for 10 days, she just didn't come home. That was five or six years ago.

Since then we've had Jez. But, a month ago, when Jez didn't look well, I took her to the vet.

She was suffering from kidney failure, he said. There was nothing much that could be done. He suggested wet food instead of the dry we usually use. I bought the fanciest wet food I could find, and she turned her nose up.

Over the last month, she got skinnier and weaker day by day, and by last week, I knew it was time. We took our last trip to the vet.

Now, I don't think about it much except when I pass Steve's empty chair.

Directions to nowhere

I have never liked the words, "You can't miss it," but I have learned to really, really hate them lately.

Recently, I had found it necessary to talk to a fellow who lived out of town a ways. I don't remember what the deal was, but it seemed important at the time. Now, I admit I get lost very easily. For that reason, I always try to get directions. Often I even ask for a map, which I did this time.

"A map?" one of the young ladies in my office said after I asked for one, "What do you need a map for? For heaven's sake, you can't miss it."

"Well..." I responded.

"All you have to do," said the person I had asked, a young woman who has lived in town most of her life, "is head straight that way out of town (she gestured vaguely over her shoulder) and turn right at the old Garcia place. It used to be kind of beige, but then they painted it."

I should point out that she had a note in her voice that made it clear she thought I was only marginally more intelligent than a rutabaga.

"Garcia's place?" I asked.

"Well," said someone else who had just come into the office while I was trying to make notes on the back of my hand, "The Garcias don't actually live there anymore, of course, but everybody knows it used to be their place. I think the Johnsons live there now, or maybe it is a Smith..."

Another young woman from my office chimed in and pointed out that the Garcia place where the Smiths moved, but no longer lived, was further down the road and a little east of where I wanted to turn, besides, it had been more of an eggshell color before it was repainted and not beige.

"Anyway," said the second person, "you turn at the old Garcia place and stay on that road, well....until you get to that big old cottonwood tree about three miles down."

"You mean the one that lightning hit and was carted off about five years ago?" asked yet another person who had wandered in while I was scribbling down more directions. By this time the directions were all the way up to my elbow.

"Yep, that's the one," said the second person. At this point, everyone was nodding knowingly as if these were the simplest directions imaginable.

"So I turn at the cottonwood tree?" I asked hopefully.

Absolutely everyone (except me) broke into gales of laughter as if my IQ finally dipped into negative digits.

"There's no place to turn there," said my third explainer smiling patronizingly. "Everyone knows that (there's another phrase I'm learning to hate). No, you go down a few more miles (just how many are "a few" anyway?) and turn at the blue irrigation pump. At least, I think it's still blue. I know it used to be blue... anyway, you turn there, and there's a house."

"Yep, that's the one," agreed yet another person in the room – yet another person I had never seen before.

"And that's where the man lives?" I asked hopefully.

"Heck no, that's where his cousin lives. He lives further on."

"Yeah," said my initial guide, "and now it gets complicated, so pay attention."

I swear I did pay attention and left 30 minutes later with 27 pages of notes on how to get to this person's house about 30 miles northeast of my office. I called back seven hours later from a small ranch just two states south and a lake west and explained I had missed the interview. People in the office offered to just give me directions back to town, but I told them I would just ask the rancher whose phone I was using.

"Don't worry," I heard the rancher say with a smile as I hung up his phone, "I'll get you right there. You can't miss it."

High winds, dust cause trouble around northwest Kansas ton, Colo., K-27 from Goodland to St. Francis and U.S. 36 from Wheeler to Atwood. As winds whipped up to 63 mph, accidents were reported east of St. Francis, on I-70 and elsewhere across northwest Kansas.

Five cars and six trucks piled up about two miles west of Rexford in the larger crash, the Kansas Highway Patrol said. In a separate accident less than half a mile to the west, the patrol said, two semi-trailer rigs collided.

Fatalities in the Rexford accident included Leonard Scott Breeden, 51, of Colby; James Ocie Perrott, 57, of Perryton, Texas; and Jerold L. Lamb, 66, a truck driver from Florissant, Colo. All were killed when six semi-trailer rigs and five passenger vehicles piled up near mile marker 179 about 2 p.m.

Breeden was driving a small van, Ocie a Chrysler and Lamb one of the semi rigs.

Anthony Scott Ortiz, 30, Garden

City; Federico Ortiz, 47, Apple Valley, Calif.; Dennis Wayne Pitzer, 44, Leoti; and David Edward Hapes, 50, Holcomb were among the truck drivers taken to Citizens Medical Center. Another trucker, Abraham Wiebe-Peters of Chihuahua, Mexico, was unhurt.

Andrew Abdrakmanov Karstrom, 19, and Timothy W. Karstrom, 62, of Omaha, were both taken to Citizens with what the patrol called "possible injuries." They were in a 2012 Toyota involved in the pileup.

David Leroy Shoemaker, 51, and Dottie J. Shoemaker and Richard Shoemaker, all of South Dakota, were in a 1996 Ford F250. All were unhurt.

The patrol was still investigating the pileup this morning, said Trooper Tod Hielman, information officer for the patrol in Hays. Reports did not list information about the occupants or owners of one of the passenger cars, a 2000 Plymouth Breeze with Kansas tags.

Hielman said he didn't know when the report might be updated to include that information.

Rescue workers and law-enforcement had trouble getting to the scene, fighting the dust and trying to get around cars backed up on both sides of the wreck. Officers said that several injured drivers were trapped in their vehicles. One woman who called dispatchers saying she was in her car later was found safe in a trucker's rig.

Area sheriff's offices and Department of Transportation workers helped the patrol shut down nearby roads and clear the accident scene.

Traffic was backed up for several miles, and the Department of Transportation shut down U.S. 83 from the Nine Mile Junction to K-383 and K-23 just east of Selden at 1:50 p.m.. The closure was extended to Oberlin at 2:45 p.m.

The second accident happened when Gary Allen Godeill, 50, of New Haven, Conn., who was driving another semi-trailer rig toward Rexford, stopped almost a half a mile away from the pileup. The patrol reported that Wayne Haberstock, 69, of Alberta, Canada, hit his rig from behind. Godeill was OK, but Haberstock had to be taken to Hays Medical Center.

One fire official said the twisted pile of metal and plastic, with fire burning in the center, was the worst he'd seen in 30 years of rescue work.

Steve Hirsch of Oberlin, training officer for the Sheridan County fire departments and the Thomas County department in Rexford, said it was frightening watching the fire rigs disappear into the wind-whipped dust clouds. Fire fighters had to get off the road and drive in the barrow ditch part of the way, he said, not knowing what might be coming at them.

"I couldn't have been prouder of my people," he said. "They went into it not knowing what to expect, and at some danger to themselves. They performed admirably."

Fire crews from Rexford, Selden and Menlo responded to the initial call, and were joined by a rescue crew from Colby. Ambulances came from Selden, Rexford and Colby.

Other accidents were reported across northwest Kansas as blowing dust reduced visibility.

By 4:15 p.m., all had reopened except U.S. 83 between U.S. 24 and Selden, which stayed closed as crews worked to untangle the mess and haul off the burned and battered vehicles. The road finally reopened about 10:45 p.m. By morning, several trailers remained, along with spoiled grain which was being salvaged for feed.

The first accident was reported on U.S. 36, shortly before that highway was shut down. An empty cattle truck rolled over about eight miles west of St. Francis. The Cheyenne County sheriff's office first reported the rollover at 1:31 p.m. The truck was partially blocking the road until it was removed by 3:51.

At 12:50 p.m., U.S. 36 was shut down from Atwood to the Colorado state line and K-27 from U.S. 36 to Goodland. The transportation department cited high winds and poor visibility as the reason.

I-70 from Colby to Burlington was closed at 1:50 p.m. One motorist ran around the barricades closing off the freeway about 3:40 p.m. He got a ticket and an escort back to Goodland. Officers reported trucks were still coming south from Nebraska shortly after 3 p.m., and the K-27 closure was extended from St. Francis to the state line at 2:30. These roads were among those opened at 5:15.

Ambulances, fire rigs and patrol cars had to be cleaned as heaps of dust sifted inside many. Fire fighters hosing down the blaze were caked with mud as mist and dust mixed and settled on their bunker gear and faces.

2014 Tax Information

Internal Revenue Service offers free filing software

To help people get a jump on their taxes before the Jan. 31 filing season opens, the Internal Revenue Service has announced the immediate availability of Free File brand-name software for most taxpayers. Fourteen commercial software companies that provide their Free File tax prep products at no cost began offering their products today – available only at IRS.gov/freefile. Although you can complete and e-file your tax return now, the Free File companies will hold it until Jan. 31 when the IRS begins accepting returns. As previously announced, the IRS delayed the filing season due to critical system testing following the federal government closure. “Many tax preparers and tax software companies are now open for return preparation, including Free File. If you plan to get a head start on your taxes, remember to e-file. Electronic filing will allow software companies to hold your return and to automatically send it to the IRS on Jan. 31.

There is absolutely no advantage to filing by paper,” said IRS Commissioner John Koskinen. “If you want to save money and time, just use Free File to prepare and e-file your federal return at no charge.” As Jan. 31 approaches, Koskinen reminded taxpayers that IRS.gov has a range of information and services to help taxpayers prepare their tax returns. “Free File is just one of the many services available through IRS.gov to help people with their taxes,” Koskinen said. “Additional services include Where’s My Refund for timely updates on refunds, YouTube videos with quick tax tips, and many other ways of getting information. We encourage taxpayers to explore IRS.gov as tax season approaches.” Free File, a public-private partnership, is the free way to do your federal tax returns either by using brand-name software or online fillable forms. Free File software is available now to more than 100 million individuals and families that earn $58,000 or less, which is 70 percent of taxpayers. Starting Jan. 31, Free File Fillable Forms will be available to accept tax returns for free e-filing from any taxpayer who is comfortable preparing their own tax return. Nearly 40 million taxpayers have used Free File since it debuted in 2003. These taxpayers have saved more than an estimated $1.2 billion by using Free File. Here’s how it works:

• At IRS.gov/freefile, select the “Free File Software” button. Each of the 14 Free File companies sets specific offers – generally based on income, state residency and age – to use their software. If your income is $58,000 or less, you will find at least one, if not more, offers available to you.
• You can review each of the 14 company offers or use the IRS “Help Me Find Free File Software” tool to find an offer that matches your situation. Once you make your selection, you will be directed to the commercial provider’s website to begin preparing your return.

• Free File is for federal returns but most companies also offer state tax return preparation, some for free.
• If your income was more than $58,000, you can still do your taxes and e-file them. Just select the “Free File Fillable Forms” button. Again, this product will be available starting Jan. 31.
• Free File Fillable Forms is the electronic version of IRS paper forms, and it is best for people used to doing their own taxes. This option helps with math but not with step-by-step assistance. Instructions for filling out the form can be found on the IRS website. State tax return preparation is not available using this option.
The fastest way to get your refund is by combining IRS e-file with direct deposit. Once the IRS begins processing returns, it expects to issue more than 90 percent of refunds in fewer than 21 days.
Check “Where’s My Refund?” for personalized refund information based on the processing of your 2013 tax return. You can start checking on the status of your return within 24 hours after the IRS accepts your e-filed return. Updates to refund status are made once a day so you don’t need to check the status more than once a day.

The 14 Free File companies are part of a consortium called the Free File Alliance, which has partnered with the IRS for 11 years to make these commercial products available for free to taxpayers who don’t earn high incomes. You must access these products through IRS.gov to be eligible for their free offers.
There also are a number of products to help spread the word about Free File. Companies, organizations, churches or others that have eligible employees, clients or customers can help increase awareness about Free File. Learn more at freefile.irs.gov/partners.

Consumers warned of tax scammers trying to immitate IRS

The Internal Revenue Service today warned consumers about a sophisticated phone scam targeting taxpayers, including recent immigrants, throughout the country. Victims are told they owe money to the IRS and it must be paid promptly through a pre-loaded debit card or wire transfer. If the victim refuses to cooperate, they are then threatened with arrest, deportation or suspension of a business or driver’s license. In many cases, the caller becomes hostile and insulting. Other characteristics of this scam include:
• Scammers use fake names and IRS badge numbers. They generally use common names and surnames to identify themselves.
• Scammers may be able to recite the last four digits of a victim’s Social Security Number.

• Scammers spoof the IRS toll-free number on caller ID to make it appear that it’s the IRS calling.
• Scammers sometimes send bogus IRS emails to some victims to support their bogus calls.
• Victims hear background noise of other calls being conducted to mimic a call site.

• After threatening victims with jail time or driver’s license revocation, scammers hang up and others soon call back pretending to be from the local police or DMV, and the caller ID supports their claim. If you get a phone call from someone claiming to be from the IRS, here’s what you should do:
• If you know you owe taxes or you think you might owe taxes, call the IRS at 1.800.829.1040. The IRS employees at that line can help you with a payment issue – if there really is such an issue.

• If you know you don’t owe taxes or have no reason to think that you owe any taxes (for example, you’ve never received a bill or the caller made some bogus threats as described above), then call and report the incident to the Treasury

Inspector General for Tax Administration at 1.800.366.4484.
• If you’ve been targeted by this scam, you should also contact the Federal Trade Commission and use their “FTC Complaint Assistant” at FTC.gov. Please add “IRS Telephone Scam” to the comments of your complaint.

We've got the knowledge and experience to handle all your tax services!

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
