City appoints interim manager

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

After a closed-door session at their meeting last week, the Goodland City Commission voted unanimously to bring in retired Colby City Administrator Carolyn Armstrong as interim city manager while the commission conducts its search for a permanent replacement for Doug Gerber.

The commission had its first meeting without Gerber on April 7. Mayor Annette Fairbanks said she appreciated the city staff and department heads for being there to help until a new manager is hired. The commission voted to have Armstrong serve in the interim at the end of the meeting.

Fairbanks said that before leaving, Gerber had encouraged the commission to make a decision on wages. The city had conducted a compensation study, finding out that generally it was below par on wages for comparable jobs in surrounding communities and the private sector, but that it offered better benefits.

Commissioner Brian Linin asked for the department heads what they thought. Police Chief Cliff Couch said one of the main problems is the starting salaries are too low to attract good candidates. The police and the public works department each have openings that they are trying to fill, but are having a difficult time.

“Even if we just worked on the starting salary part it would do a world of good,” he said.

Fairbanks said there were several options: the commission could either work on all of the salaries at once, or work on one or more departments right away.

“I hate to piecemeal things, but we may have to for the police department,” she said.

Commissioner Gary Farris said he would have to see the total budgetary expense for each person before he could make a decision.

“The more information that I have, the better decision I can make,” he said.

Linin agreed that they needed to see that information, but said he didn’t feel like it is the role of the commission to decide what individual employees are paid. He said he would be OK with making an exception in an emergency, but that it might set a bad precedent if the commission were to micromanage.

The commission agreed to have the staff get the full budget information for employee salaries for the police and public works and then sit down with the department heads to work out what needs to be changed.

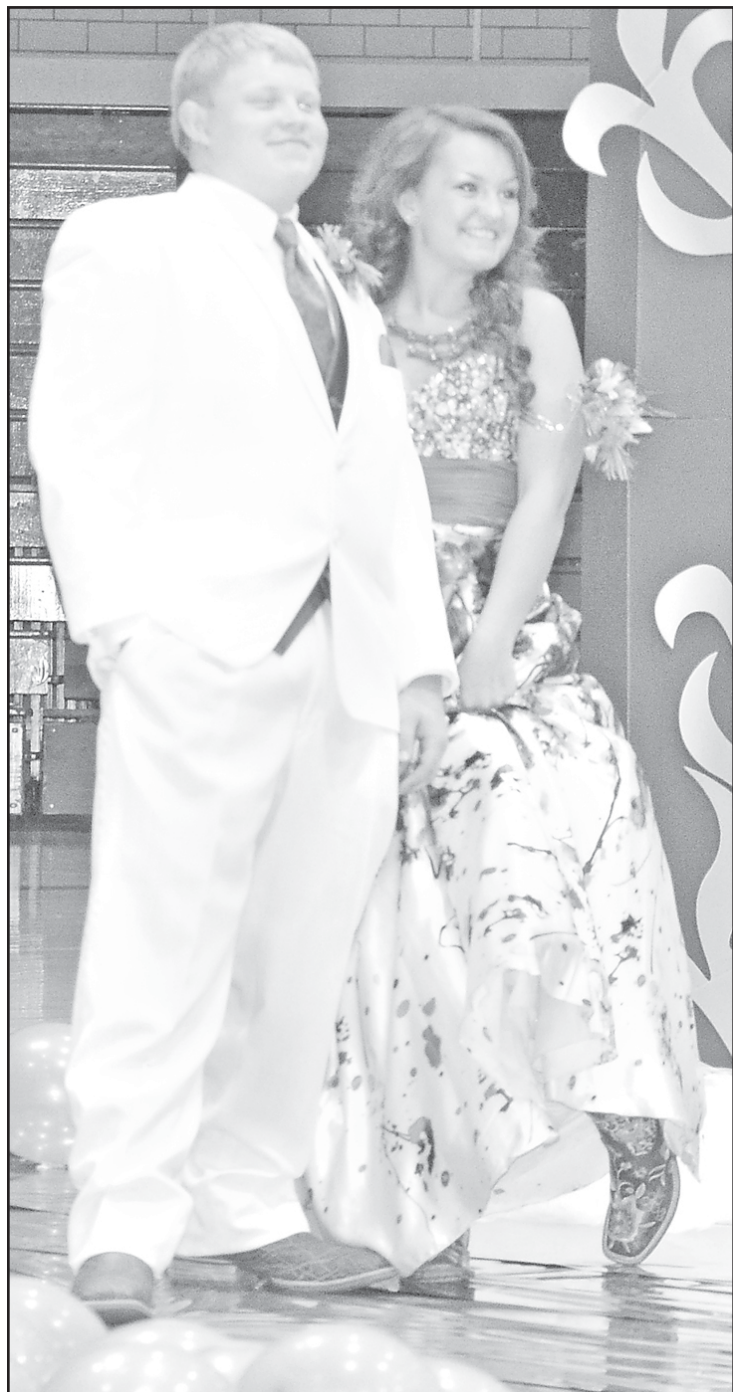

In other business, the commission:

- Approved economic development incentives for L&T Restaurant. Economic Development Director Michael Solomon said there was a miscommunication with the restaurant’s owners, who thought they had to be in business for a year before they could apply for the utility rebate, instead of applying at the beginning. Under the program, Solomon said, the business would get $4,586 in utility rebates. The business created nine jobs, he said, more than they had anticipated when it began.

- Discussed special improvement districts. Solomon said they are an economic development tool that creates a special sales tax — up to two percent — in a specific area for infrastructure improvements. Fifty percent of the property owners in the area have to sign onto the petition. The city has to approve the formation of the district and would coordinate the infrastructure work, which would be paid

Water Vision Team shares feedback

On Friday, the Governor’s Water Vision Team shared input received so far with the Kansas Water Authority.

This was the first time the authority and attendees heard input from the stakeholder meetings that have been held throughout the state to date, such as the one held in Goodland. At that meeting, various farmers, ranchers and other stakeholders gathered to ask questions and provide feedback to the water office on conservation efforts.

“The purpose of the workshop today was to define the major issues, priorities and ideas that will be used by the Vision Team to develop a first draft of the Vision,” said Tracy Streeter, Kansas Water Office director. “Over the next four to eight weeks the Vision team will be taking the guidance provided today to serve as the basis for the initial draft.”

The team shared that while thousands of comments have been received, there have been many consistent themes and priorities shared by stakeholders to be addressed in the Vision. Attendees participated in a facilitated discussion related to four themes: water management, water conservation, technology and crop varieties and new sources of supply.

Secretary of Agriculture Jackie McClaskey encouraged Kansans to be prepared to provide comment and direction during the next phase of the development of the Water Vision.

“To this point nearly 8,000 Kansans have participated in over 140 meetings,” McClaskey said. “As the first draft version is completed, the Vision Team will be hosting meetings throughout the state in June and July for public input of the preliminary document. The Vision Team wants feedback and direction on the themes and priorities that are being established today.”

More than 150 people participated in the workshop including members from the Kansas Water Authority, Kansas State Board of Agriculture, Governor’s Cabinet, Basin Advisory Committee Chairs, Ogallala Aquifer Advisory Committee, Reservoir Advisory Committee, State Conservation Commission Board, Governor’s Council of Economic Advisors as well as members of the general public.

Expect spring pests despite cold winter

We are finally catching a break from the long, cold winter, but if you're hoping that the extreme cold has killed off spring pests, you're out of luck, according to Jeff Whitworth, associate professor of entomology at Kansas State University. "Whether they're going to survive is not the question," Whitworth said. "It's probably how many are going to survive."

Whitworth says you're going to need to pull out bug spray this spring. Insects start coming out around the same time flowers start blooming. While we may see fewer insects at first, most of the insects will survive the colder temperatures.

Bugs have adapted procedures, like producing antifreeze or crawling into a warmer area, to protect themselves from the harsh temperatures in the winter. Even though temperatures this winter were colder than usual, Whitworth says these adaptive techniques help them survive.

"Insects are heterotherms," Whitworth said. "They are 100 percent controlled by temperatures."

Whitworth says warmer weather is more detrimental to insects than extreme cold.

Band gets recognized

Jimmy Dee and The Fabulous Destinations were among the 10 inductees at the 2014 Kansas Music Hall of Fame induction ceremony at Liberty Hall in Lawrence on March 1.

The band from northwest Kansas joined among other Kansas musical greats Melissa Ethridge, from Leavenworth (inducted in 2006) and Martina McBride, from Sharon (inducted in 2007) in the Hall of Fame.

Despite bad weather, a crowd estimated between 500-600 people filled Liberty Hall. Most of the inductees performed at the ceremony, including Jimmy Dee and The Fabulous Destinations, who according to Brenda Schmidtberger (Jimmy Dee's sister), "blew the roof off the building."

In 1975 the band was formed in Victoria and is comprised of friends and relatives. The Destinations are known for their classic rock sound from the 1950's, 60's and 70's, and got their start playing 50's themed "Greasers" dances.

"In the 70's there was Happy Days, American Graffiti, Grease and Animal House. It was a nostalgic era (for classic rock and roll) and we latched onto it," said Jim Schmidtberger, also known as "Jimmy Dee."

Besides Schmidtberger as lead vocalist, the band members are Ray "Red" Schmidtberger ("Jimmy Dee's" cousin), plays bass, Joe Dreiling plays keyboard and vocalist, Tim Pfeifer plays saxophone and vocalist, Anthony Pfeifer plays lead guitar and vocalist, and Bill Gasper plays drums. The Destinations also have a band photographer and stage helper, Doug "Spook" Cunningham, Stockton, who has taken over 40,000 pictures of the band.

Former Destination band members Fulton Calvery and Leon Frank attended the induction ceremony. Not in attendance but recognized by the band were Don Hart, Dave Brull, and Danny and Terry Pfeifer, and three former band members that have passed away; Tim Calvery, Brad Wagner and Wayne Billinger.

The band has been rocking ever since its reunion concert in 2000 and they have no plans on slowing down.

"The crowds kept coming out and they were getting bigger and bigger," said Schmidtberger.

They also know the key to their success.

"The Hall of Fame induction is a great, great thing and we work very hard, but we got this award because of the fans," said Schmidtberger. "It's big, it means a lot to us."

Besides touring northwest Kansas this summer, Jimmy Dee and The Fabulous Destinations are planning to go into the recording studio in July and August to perform their own original material. The band has recorded three CD's since 2000. Prior to that they recorded an album in 1979 and a single, known as a 45, in 1980.

America's clandestine war in Africa continues

The Washington Post reported in late March 2014, "a sharp increase in U.S. Special forces deployed to Uganda." President Barack Obama "sent U.S. military aircraft there for the first time in the ongoing effort to hunt down warlord Joseph Kony across a broad swath of central Africa. At least four CV-22 Osprey aircraft will arrive in Uganda by midweek, along with refueling aircraft and about 150 Special Operations airmen to fly and maintain the planes." Such is by no means new.

Three and a half years ago, I wrote of President Barack Obama's clandestine operation in central Africa called Operation Lightning Thunder, involving 100 U.S. military "advisers," sent by the President to help capture the allusive child abuser Joseph Kony and his Lord's Resistance Army. Congress was informed of the engagement by letter October 14, 2011, but reportedly troops were already on site two days before, so the letter was decidedly not asking for permission to use armed forces in a foreign country, as is required by the Constitution.

Of course, nothing more was said of Kony who was never found, making it now appear that he was but an excuse for our penetration of the continent with forces from Afghanistan as we wound down our involvement there. An expanded military presence in Africa started with George W. Bush his last two years in office, as "about a dozen air bases have been established in Africa since 2007" ("US expands secret intelligence operations in Africa" Washington Post, June 13, 2007).

The Washington Post reported in June 2012, "The U.S. military is expanding its secret intelligence operations across Africa, establishing a network of small air bases to spy on terrorists hideouts from the fringes of the Sahara to jungle terrain along the equator, according to documents and people involved in the project."

Four months later in an article, "White House widening covert war in North Africa," the Associated Press reported that an expanded U. S. role is anticipated and that Delta Force units eventually "will form the backbone of a military task force responsible for combating al-Qaida and other terrorist groups across the region with an arsenal that includes drones."

Global Research was even more explicit. In an article "America's Shadow Wars in Africa" it went into greater detail (Nick Turse, July 13, 2012). Although Camp Lemonnier in Djibouti, with "more than 2,000 U.S. personnel stationed there" is the "Pentagon's showpiece African base," there are many "nodes" of U.S. military presence elsewhere. Add to this the extensive counter-terrorism training provided by the United States in Algeria, Botswana, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Chad, Gabon, Lesotho, Mauritania, Morocco, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, South Africa, and Tunisia.

With respect to the size of U.S. forces on the continent at any one given time, they added, "On an average basis, there are approximately 5,000 U.S. Military and DoD [Department of Defense] personnel working across the continent."

Something does not pass the smell test. U. S. Special Forces have been hunting Joseph Kony in a foreign country for 3 1/2 years with the most sophisticated technology on the planet, without success, and we need to send more? Is it possible that while our eyes are focused on Kony as the excuse for intervention, American imperialism in Africa is the real news?

Orchestra concert on the horizon

I can't believe that another orchestra concert will be in three weeks. I would like to report that I have made some progress in being able to hit the notes, just not all of them, if the piece moves rather fast. The next concert will be 2:30 a.m. (Mountain Time) on Sunday, May 4, at the Frahm Theatre/Cultural Arts Center on the Colby Community College campus.

The orchestra is playing a medley from the musical "Wicked," the overture from the "Magic Flute" by Mozart, a movement from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. One fun piece that I may be able to completely play is the background music for three short silent movies about cowboys. It's fun especially for the percussion with all the different sound effects. For the encore we will play Sousa's "Circus Galop" which reminds me of a calliope. Even though it moves quickly I get most of it.

Also Josiah Akers from Weskan will be featured as the Magician.

One difference I have noticed between the orchestra and smaller ensembles is that working out individual parts or sections is the responsibility of the players. When the orchestra meets it is for the whole orchestra to play the piece. Sometimes we start from the last section and move to the beginning section by section.

pat schiefen

I appreciate being able to sit by Bev Rucker who plays the first bass clarinet part. Having her there seems to bolster my self confidence and I actually play better. She directed the first concert I played in.

The director for this concert is Andrew Salvador, talented keyboardist and band teacher at Burlington. At one practice session he wanted the group to play the first few notes from the first movement of Beethoven's Fifth. He gave us the notes in concert pitches. I haven't thought about concert pitches since

I was in high school. It seemed like I wasn't the only one. The concert key is the key the piece is written in. Each instrument then has to transpose the notes so each instrument is playing in the correct key. For example if a B flat clarinet is told to play a Concert C that means the note is a B flat. Instruments that are B flat instruments are clarinets, trumpets, coronets and saxophones. C instruments that do not have to transpose include violins, oboes, bassoons, tubas, trombones, bass, piano and guitar. My curiosity got the best of me and I had to look it up.

Stretching the old brain cells is good for all of us. He said that the movement we are going to play is available arranged for bands and is generally not available for orchestras.

The "Magic Flute" is fun but it has lots of notes and I will play what I can of it. The thing I really try to do is not to play a wrong note that really sticks out.

I don't know if the orchestra then moves onto getting ready for another concert and tries out music for next fall. I guess I will find out.

Education funding is the hot topic

Every year at this time, the news from Topeka is about education funding. It was March 7 when the Legislature received the Supreme Court's Gannon decision. The task was before us – a requirement to establish equity and adequacy – and only a short time to get it done.

Building consensus between the House and the Senate on any topic is difficult. The House passed a bipartisan bill that would have met the Gannon equalization mandate. The Senate leadership wanted policy changes attached to the bill, however, so back and forth we went.

My biggest concern was money. I saw problems developing that could have resulted in the layoff of at least two teachers in each of my districts. When the debate was on to reduce transportation expenses, I received information from most of the 120th District superintendents as to how much that would affect each district. The message was to do my best to not let that happen.

When all was done, our districts received property tax relief and more money for their classrooms. For that to happen, the House had to agree to teacher tenure being revoked and to a tax credit for corporations to grant scholarships to pay for low-income students to attend private schools.

• state rep.

The corporate scholarship program is capped at $10 million – not a real high price compared to the $6 billion that will be spent on K-12 education in Kansas this year. I have learned a lot about the diversity of education in Kansas and how the achievement gap keeps widening between poor students and those who are better off.

Legislators are looking for ways to diversify our education. Right now, the only real school choice in Kansas is our virtual schools. These are growing rapidly, and we now have 93 approved virtual programs.

I had no problem voting for the tenure change, as I have always been opposed to that provision. What the tenure piece does is to eliminate the requirement that school districts provide a due-process hearing upon termination or no-renewal of a teacher contract – simply because the teacher has been with the district for more than three years.

Due-process hearings will remain intact for any teacher who feels they were terminated because they were exercising a constitutionally protected right in the course of their job duties. School districts can still choose to grant due-process hearings based on longevity; the bill just removes the state requirement to do so.

Teacher unions are not strong in northwest Kansas. Teachers realize their school boards and administrators are trying to provide a quality education for students and to put teachers in a position to succeed. I know all of the 120th District superintendents, and they would never give up a quality teacher just to save money by hiring a lower-paid teacher.

What I am most proud of this session dealt with higher education. I was again able to help Colby Community College and Northwest Kansas Technical College get decent funding and to curtail some proposals that would have hurt both.

What I like best of all is helping constituents with state agencies. I have good contacts in every agency, and have helped solve many problems for people in the district this year.

The Legislature returns for the veto session on Wednesday, April 30, and I will have a wrap-up column at that time.

In the top of the fifth, Rangel hit a double, scoring Brianna White to make it 8-1.

The Cowgirls retired the Lady Eagles in order in the fifth and sixth innings, but would not score again until Cochran hit a home run in the top of the seventh, scoring the final two runs of the game. The Lady Eagles got a runner in scoring position in the bottom of the inning, but a strikeout from DeLaRosa ended the game with the 10-1 win for the Cowgirls.

In game two, Brianna White hit a leadoff triple on the first pitch. She scored on a passed ball. Bauman and Rangel walked. After Cochran got out on a fly ball, then Berkley White got aboard to load the bases for Siruta, who hit a two-RBI single to make it 3-0. Berkley White scored on a passed ball.

Pitcher Selena Acosta got on base on an incomplete strikeout. Siruta scored on the play to make it 5-0. Amber Smith was hit by a pitch and DeLaRosa got on board to load the bases. Back at the top of the order, Brianna White hit back to the pitcher, who threw Acosta out at home.

Two runners were forced home, making the score 7-0, then Brianna White scored on a passed ball. Cochran was hit by a pitch to load the bases again. After another run was forced home, Siruta hit an RBI single to make it 10-0. Acosta got aboard on an error that allowed Berkley White to score the Cowgirls' 11th run of the inning. Smith hit the ball right to the Lady Eagles' pitcher, who caught it for out three.

The Lady Eagles put one run across in the bottom of the first on a long double fielded by DeLaRosa. Brianna White made the cutoff throw to Berkley White at home to get one runner out. The Cowgirls were able to retire the side without any further damage.

The Cowgirls were unable to put any runs across in the top of the second, but allowed a two-RBI single in the bottom half of the inning, making the score 11-3.

In the top of the third, the Cowgirls got three runs across to make it 14-3. Acosta retired the Lady Eagles with one walk, no hits and no runs in the bottom of the third.

DeLaRosa had a leadoff triple to start the top of the fourth. She later scored on a passed ball. Cochran hit an RBI double to make it 16-3.
