City asks residents to start conserving water

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

With little rainfall this spring and a city well not functioning, the City of Goodland is requesting residents take voluntary water conservation measures.

Interim City Manager Carolyn Armstrong put out a notice on Wednesday:

“We ask that the public water lawns, shrubs and trees only between the hours of 7 p.m. and 10 a.m. whenever possible and avoid all wasting of water. The city commission will review the situation Monday, May 19, to determine if further conservation action is needed. Thanks for your cooperation in this matter.”

The commission briefly discussed the issue at their meeting Monday. Well Five, near North Elementary School, is not functioning at this time. Rich Simon said it is scheduled to be fixed, however, he said the city may still have trouble when the hotter days arrive.

City Clerk Mary Volk said Goodland is still under the Water Watch that the commission put in place in July of 2012.

The city has three conservation levels: watch, warning and emergency. A watch comes with some watering reductions by the city, and encourages citizens to voluntarily reduce their water usage. A warning comes

Northwest Tech has new coaches, athletics building

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com

The athletics department at Northwest Kansas Technical College has seen some shakeups in recent months, with several new coaches coming on board.

Two of those new coaches, wrestling Coach Mike Sebaaly and women's basketball Coach Landon Steele, have already hit the ground running.

Sebaaly comes to Goodland from the Buffalo, N.Y., area, where he served as the assistant wrestling coach for Alfred State College. Sebaaly said Alfred State has both a traditional university and a technical college, and is in a rural area of Upstate New York.

Sebaaly said he is still acquainting himself with all the programs offered at the college.

“I can't talk enough about how great the programs are here,” he said, singling out the communications technology and cosmetology programs.

Sebaaly started at Northwest Tech in April, and said he has been spending most of that time recruiting. His goal is to get 32 to 40 wrestlers. He has 17 locked in and another 10 to 15 on the fence.

“Given the nature of the school, a lot of them will decide in late July or early August,” he said.

The wrestling season will get Another addition to the athletic department at Northwest Tech is the Guy E. Mills Athletic and Academic Center (above) on 15th Street. The building includes four locker rooms, offices for several coaches, a large wrestling room (right), laundry, sauna and four classrooms, which are currently used by the crime scene investigation program.

started the first weekend in November. Kansas combines with several other junior college regions when it comes to wrestling, including schools in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Missouri. Practices will start in October, but there are plenty of off-season activities for the team.

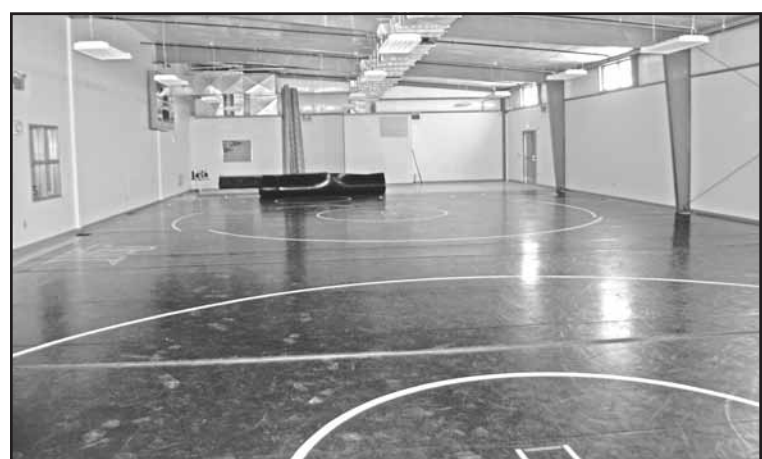

Steele brings with him eight years of experience coaching basketball at Wallace County High School. He spent two years as an assistant boys team coach and six years as head girls coach. During that time, his team made back to back state tournament appearances and won the state title once. Last season his team had a 16-6 record.

Steele said the coaches are trying to focus more effort on recruiting locally.

“I know every high school coach in western Kansas,” he said.

Steele has one player coming from Leoti to study cosmetology and another from Dighton coming to study business, with several more from the area interested in joining

Marlin Dwight “Moe” Eberhart

Marlin Dwight “Moe” Eberhart, 84, retired Burlington field man for the Agriculture Stabilization Conservation Service and farmer, died Friday, April 25, 2014, at Kit Carson County Memorial Hospital in Burlington after a long fight with Parkinson’s Disease.

He was born on Jan. 3, 1930, to Lena (Lampe) and Rudolph Eberhart in St. Francis. He attended grade school at the Northrup Center County School near St. Francis until the family moved to a farm southeast of Burlington, where he went to the Smokey Hill School.

In 1944 he started Burlington High School as a freshman where he became known as “Moe.” He was active in the high school clubs, activities and sports. Mr. Eberhart played on the state championship teams in football in 1947 and basketball in 1948. He graduated in 1948. It was also during this time that he became a pilot, logging 40 hours on a student license by graduating and owning a 1947 Cessna. He flew with three other senior boys, Stub Dixon, Don Pavel and Ed Hatcher.

After graduation he began farming with his father and uncle Ted Eberhart.

On March 19, 1950, he and Darlene Donner from Kanorado were married. They married at the Burlington United Methodist Church and were married for 64 years. The couple were lifelong members of the church.

The couple bought a place near the Kansas border and adopted two baby boys. They retired from farming in 1975 and moved to Burlington. While living in town Mr. Eberhart grew a sizable vegetable garden and was legendary for leaving sweet corn, pumpkins, zucchini, cantaloup or tomatoes at local businesses, doctor’s offices, neighbors and strangers door steps, even in cars left unlocked.

In 1980 he went to work for the Agriculture Stabilization Conservation Service for 12 years. He retired again and did odd jobs with the post office as a substitute mail carrier and others.

Mr. Eberhart served on the Burlington City Council for a four-year term from 2002 to 2006.

When the gardening was poor he started wood working projects with a wishing well that became his signature piece. He eventually built a separate wood shop on the back patio of their home.

In 2007 a back injury from a fall at home began his health battle with Parkinson’s Disease. He was in rehab from then on in Goodland and finally in Burlington’s Grace Manor.

Preceding him in death were his parents and two brothers, Dale Eberhart and Jerry Eberhart.

Survivors include his wife of the home; sons Philip (Valerie) Eberhart of Centennial, Colo., and Larry (Lori) Eberhart of Salida, Colo.; a sister Ruth (Russ) Wilcox of Burlington; six grandchildren; five great-grandchildren.

Services will be at 10:30 a.m. on Monday, May 12, 2014, at the Burlington United Methodist Church, 290 13th Street, Burlington with inurnment to follow at the Fairview Cemetery in Burlington.

Memorials to the church may be sent to Brown and Latimer Funeral Home, 2910 Senter Ave., Burlington, Colo. 80807.

Weather delays tomato planting

By Kay Melia

Master Gardener
vkmelia@yahoo.com

Gardeners generally despise those late spring cold snaps that seem to make a mockery of the sometimes stilted planting plans we have been making since early February. It’s May, for crying out loud! It’s time to plant! Every gardener knows that! And then another period of “sub-May” temperatures and heavy winds passes through and I find myself struggling to keep those beautiful tomato plants warm for a while longer.

The last time we visited at length about tomatoes in the garden was early March when we were discussing the project of growing some of our own tomato transplants, and that it was important to get them started at the proper time so that they would be the right size when it came time to plant them outside. My proposed planting date was May 1. As I sit here with pen in hand and great expectations on my mind, I suddenly realize that May 1 was yesterday! But you know what? It will likely be the middle of next week before I actually plant them outside.

The main reason for the delay is that soil temperatures must get back up after taking a nose dive during the cold and windy final week of April. And lets face it. My average last frost date is May 6th so maybe I shouldn’t be in too big of a hurry anyway. However, my home grown plants are really growing and seem to beg for a less crowded environment outside. So, adding and subtracting the good and the bad, and with a quick admonishment to the weather man, those transplants are going outside before May 8th, barring some kind of stupid May blizzard, which is certainly within possibility.

For the past several years, I have preached loudly about how I felt it was important to set out tomato plants a little earlier than we have in past years. The earlier you plant them in the garden, the earlier you will pick a tomato. The season for picking tomatoes is much too short in this area anyway, But if we can safely put the plants outside sooner, then the picking season will be longer.

In order to plant them a little earlier, you must have a plan to protect the plants from a late frost. If you do not have a plan, then you must wait until later, which results in a shorter harvest season.

Last year, I set out my plants on May 12, later than I planned. I picked my first tomato, a Northern Exposure, on July 16. My first killing frost last fall came on October 16. My harvest season therefore lasted 90 days. I doubt that you can expect a much longer harvest season in this area. If you plant later, you pick later. If you plant earlier, you risk a freeze.

My plan to protect the early planted fragile plants is to utilize five foot high wire cages, with the bottom two feet securely covered with black plastic. If a frost threatens, I’ll drop a page of newspaper inside the cage, on top of the plant, and they’re good to go.

I like fresh homegrown tomatoes. From what I hear, so do you. I think it’s important to try to lengthen the tomato growing season as much as we safely can. I’ll plant the best varieties for my area. I’ll prepare a proper seed bed. I’ll plant as early as I dare, providing proper plant protection. I’ll pick tomatoes earlier!

from our viewpoint...

A victory for open government

Backers of open government achieved a milestone victory last week as the Kansas Legislature approved a compromise bill to open up affidavits filed to obtain arrest and search warrants, making Kansas the last state to make these public.

The bill had passed the House, but bogged down in the Senate over amendments that had nothing to do with these affidavits. In the time between the end of the regular session and the wrapup “veto” session, however, supporters got together with the state’s prosecutors and came up with a compromise.

With backing from Speaker Ray Merrick, this version was adopted by a conference committee, then passed with Senate 40-0 and the House 123-1. It’s not perfect; provisions allow prosecutors and defense attorneys to delay release as long as 10 days by asking for “redaction” of sensitive information such as Social Security and driver’s license numbers, phone numbers and addresses and some police secrets. They can even ask the judge to seal the records for good.

However, the change represents a quantum step forward for Kansas, which had been the only state not to make these documents public. In federal court, for instance, they routinely posted in online files available to any user of the court’s computer system. These sometimes make fascinating reading.

Prosecutors had opposed opening up the records, at least partly because they feared it could produce more pretrial publicity which might be endangering a defendant’s right to a fair trial. Backers pointed out that wasn’t likely, since Kansas has never had a defendant released because of pretrial publicity.

Another argument was it would be a burden on the attorneys to go through every affidavit to seek redaction of specific items, but there’s no requirement that either side do so.

A 10-day delay is less than perfect, but it’s something people will have to put up with for now. Given some experience with the new law, it might be possible to cut that time down later.

For now, it’ll be possible for any citizen to get to the bottom of why someone was arrested or why a house was searched. That would have come in handy for the Kansas City-area family who wound up being held at gunpoint while drug agents ransacked their house.

After a year and thousands in legal fees, they found out it happened because they had bought supplies for their son to grow tomatoes in the basement. The cops thought, after searching their trash and finding wet tea leaves, that the couple was growing marijuana.

One real benefit for the public will be a source of honest, factual information about crimes major and minor, to replace the current flow of rumors. Prosecutors and defense attorneys will be able to turn questioners to this source and avoid making any comments, as court rules require.

Otherwise, in Kansas, it’s sometimes six months to a year before citizens’ legitimate questions about a crime can be answered. That’s one reason why the Kansas Press Association was a major backer of this bill.

All in all, this law, which now awaits the governor’s signature, is a major step forward for open government. — Steve Haynes

EPA rule could shut down agriculture

A proposed rule that would expand the regulatory authority of the Environmental Protection and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers could bring farming and ranching to a halt. Ordinary field work and everyday chores like moving cattle across a wet pasture, planting crops and even harvest may one day require a federal permit.

EPA published its new proposal in the Federal Register March 25. The Environmental Protection Agency contends its new rule clarifies the scope of the Clean Water Act. In reality it provides more confusion and less clarity for farm and ranch families and could classify most water and some dry land as waters of the United States.

Clean water is important to all of us, but this issue is not about water quality – it’s about federal agencies attempting to gain regulatory control over land use by using the claim of clean water.

Throughout this republic’s history, Congress, not federal agencies, has written the laws of the land. Two Supreme Court rulings have affirmed the federal government is limited to regulating navigable waters. EPA’s recent proposal sends conflicting messages and would extend the agency’s reach.

Farmers and ranchers are straight-forward people who believe words mean something. Agricultural producers believe the authors (Congress) of the Clean Water Act included the term navigable for a reason.

Is a small ditch navigable?

Is a stock pond navigable?

Ever see any maritime barges trying to navigate a southwestern Kansas gully during a toad strangler?

Because a farmer’s field, a homeowner’s lawn or a playground collects water after a rain does not mean they should be regulated under waters of the United States. The new regulatory proposals could do exactly that.

Bugs in the drawers

My wife has bugs in her drawers. I think I need to be careful here, lest someone gets the wrong idea, or ideas.

The drawers we are talking about are in her jewelry cabinet, which sits next to the chest of drawers where she keeps her drawers, the ones she wears. I have no knowledge of any bugs over there – and wouldn’t admit it if I did.

In the jewelry drawers, however, she does have, or did have, bugs. They did not last long, nor did the necklaces that attracted them.

The bugs did not seem to be too healthy when discovered, but they did cause some consternation. These bugs, little seed-eating larvae and the tiny beetles they morph into, are the kind you usually see in old corn meal in the back of a kitchen cabinet. They’re fairly common, though nothing a cook wants to find in his or her pantry. I have seen them in old granola bars, too.

These bugs had somehow located a couple of edible necklaces Cynthia had stashed away. Nothing you or I would eat, mind you, but edible, apparently, to the bugs.

One was a cheap Indian-style corn necklace they were giving away at a convention in Albuquerque a couple of years ago. The other a necklace of nuts strung together by kids who steve haynes

• along the sappa

waylaid her during a jungle tour the year before that. Both were of passing interest for their story value, if not exactly valuable.

Cynthia had stashed them in the inch-high drawers of the old oak document case where she keeps her necklaces. And, I have to assume, forgotten them. At least, I hadn’t seen them since.

Now Cynthia is usually a gentle soul, with a live-and-let-live attitude toward all God’s creatures, whether of the two-, four-, six- or eight-legged kind, and even the slithery kind. The bugs in her drawers, however, had eaten into the seeds of her necklaces and left behind something that resembled small piles of sawdust.

I didn’t do any testing, but I’m assuming it was not sawdust. There was no apparent damage to any of the wood in the drawers, at least.

To say this offended her would be putting it mildly. When she found the bugs in the corn, she marched the drawer right out to the brick patio, where she grabbed a bug bomb and began spraying. I do not think a single bug was spared, not that the world does not have more than enough of them already anyway.

She began checking drawers, but I think it was the next day before she found the nut necklace, which looked like nothing more than a bunch of pecans strung together with heavy thread. That drawer, too, contained little piles of “sawdust.” It got marched out to the patio and sprayed mercilessly just as fast as the first one.

I thought it interesting that the bugs apparently had emptied the nuts by entering and leaving through the string holes, not boring into the shells. It was a very neat job.

To my knowledge, no other drawers have been found to contain either bugs or edible necklaces. That is a fad, I think, destined for oblivion. If one should show up, it probably would require regular dousing in insecticide before storage, but I don’t think that will be anytime soon.

For, apparently, there’s nothing that will upset a gal more or prod her to action more quickly than bugs in her drawers.

What’s in a name?

It’s hard enough to come up with good names for our children and pet. So, why do we immediately start calling them something else?

Our latest foray into naming is the two new cats my sister-in-law gifted us. Well, she sorta spotted them at the shelter and talked us into them.

The first was a lovely flame-point Siamese that had gotten caught up a tree in subfreezing weather for about three days. He had to be retrieved by workers using a bucket truck and lost about 3/4 of his tale, making him look like a strange-colored manx.

We though about Bobcat or Lynx and finally settled on Larry after the lynx in the Frontier Airline commercials – and on the tail of one of the company’s airplanes. I added Longcat, because he will allow himself to be picked up and stretched out like a show cat and he’s really, really long.

So Larry Longcat joined the family, then a young female flame point ended up in the same shelter My sister-in-law called and said she thought she might take her. Then she decided we should take here. We decided to stay with the theme, and named her Foxy after the only

cynthia haynes

• open season

female in the Frontier commercials.

So after about a month of Larry and Foxy, Steve has given Larry a new nickname and is sure to stick. Larry has become Stubby. And since he doesn’t come to either name, any more than he responds to “No! Down!”

Call for Larry or Stubby, though, he seems to always show up for dinner.

Foxy is mostly called Baby right now, probably because she’s so much smaller and younger than Larry/Stubby. We once had a Siamese named Baby but hey, we liked that Baby and we like this one, too, so who cares.

She likewise shows up for dinner and doesn’t give a hoot what we call her.

If someone is scandalized that we would call our short-tailed cat Stubby, you should know that, when our children were little, we had a cat named Spazzo.

I have to admit, we’re just as bad about nicknames for our children.

While son Lacy seems to have mostly escaped the nickname fad, the girls are only called by their given names at work and not always there, I’m told.

Oldest daughter is Felicia but when she became a ski instructor, her students couldn’t say that. They called her Fish, and that just naturally migrated into Fisha. So for most of that last 40 years, Fisha she’s been. (Oops, I let that cat out of the bag. Happy 40th, Fisha baby.)

For some reason, Lindsay has had more nicknames than the cats. Somewhere along the line, her father started calling her Lindsay Lou, or Lindser Lou, or Lou, or Loodle Doodle, or Doodle Bug, but Lou she remains to this day. She also used her initials for awhile in high school, and Lindsay Ellis Anne Haynes became Leah. Now, sometimes, she uses Leab, for Blake.

In the paper’s graduation issue, her dad wrote “Congratulations Bean.” I’ve no idea where that came from, but like Leah, it disappeared while Lou and Doodle have stuck around (for only a little less than 40 years).

public notice

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF SHERMAN COUNTY, KANSAS CIVIL DIVISION

STATE OF KANSAS, ex, rel. KANSAS HIGHWAY PATROL, Plaintiff,

v. $3596.00 IN U.S. CURRENCY, M/L; 5 GRAMS OF MARIJUANA; Defendants.

Case No. 14 cv 13

Pursuant to the Kansas Asset Seizure and Forfeiture Act, K.S.A. 60-4101 et seq.

NOTICE OF PENDING FORFEITURE Pursuant to K.S.A. 60-4109

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that property herein described has been seized for forfeiture and is pending forfeiture to the Kansas Highway Patrol pursuant to the Kansas Standard Asset Seizure and Forfeiture Act (KSASFA), K.S.A. 60-4101 et seq. If you have not previously received a Notice of Seizure for Forfeiture, this is notice pursuant to the Act. The property was seized by the Kansas Highway Patrol on March 14, 2014, on I-70 at milepost 20, in Sherman County, Kansas. The value of the property has been set at $3596.00; and the drugs have no lawful value. The conduct giving rise to forfeiture and/or the violation of law alleged is: the property is the proceeds of and/or was used or intended to be used to facilitate violation(s) of illegal drug transactions, all act(s) giving rise to property's forfeiture. Further, a presumption of forfeitability exists in that illegal substances were located in/on the property at seizure.

Should you believe you have a true ownership interest in the seized property, you may so either of the following; (1) File a verified claim with the Court, sending copies to the Plaintiff's Attorney and the Seizing Agency; or (2) Do nothing.

You may also wish to consult with an attorney before deciding what is best for you. However, if no valid claim is timely filed within thirty (30) days of your service of this Notice, your interest in the seized property, if any, will be forfeited. Any claim shall comply with the strict requirements of true ownership documentation, as set out in K.S.A. 60-4111.

You should be aware that it is a crime to falsely allege an ownership in property or to provide other false information in a claim. Further, pursuant to K.S.A. 60-4116(f), a claimant who fails to establish that a substantial portion of the claimant's interest is exempt from forfeiture may be responsible to pay the reasonable costs, expenses and attorney fees of other claimants and the State.

This Notice seeks claims to the seized property only. Should a valid claim(s) be timely filed, as may be determined by the Court upon motion of the State, the State will respond with a judicial petition for forfeiture, and this matter will proceed to trial.

The law enforcement agency's copy of your claim should be mailed to:
Lt. Brian Smith, KHP, 122 SW 7th., Topeka, Kansas 66603

The original claim for the court should be mailed to:
Clerk of the Sherman County District Court, 813 Broadway, Rm 201, Goodland, Kansas 67735

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
