Agencies make drug arrests

Last Tuesday the Sherman County Sheriff's Office executed a search warrant on a house in the 1300 block of Caldwell resulting in the arrest of two people.

Six people — two in Sherman County and four in Thomas County — were arrested last week in a coordinated execution of search warrants aimed at curbing the sale of illegal narcotics in the area.

The Thomas County Sheriff's Office and the Colby Police Department, with the assistance of the Kansas Bureau of Investigation and Sherman County Sheriff's Office, obtained the warrants based on information uncovered through investigations by the offices involved. The investigations involved undercover drug purchases, sometimes called controlled buys.

Thomas County Undersheriff Marc Finley said the law enforcement officers seized approximately one pound of marijuana, various drug paraphernalia, an explosive device and about $4,000 in cash.

Truck catches fire on Interstate 70

A semi-tractor rig was destroyed Sunday morning after colliding with a bridge on I-70 and catching fire.

A Kansas Highway Patrol report said Yerani Guelmes, 32, of Miami, Fla., was driving his rig westbound at 8:30 a.m. near mile marker 11, about 5 1/2 miles west of Goodland when the vehicle strayed from the lane and hit a guardrail. It then hit the concrete bridge at County Road 14 and caught fire.

Sherman County firefighters and ambulances were called to the scene. The fire completely destroyed the truck and trailer.

The Highway Patrol report said Guelmes was taken to Goodland Regional Medical Center.

Traffic was diverted onto U.S. 24 at mile marker 12, but a second accident occurred near the same bridge in the eastbound lanes. While crews were busy with the first accident, a sport utility vehicle pulling a trailer suffered a blown tire, causing it to hit the bridge.

The vehicle was pushed off the road so traffic could be let through.

Vaccinations encouraged after measles cases arise

Although measles have not occurred in the western part of Kansas now is the time to get your vaccination if you need one.

The Kansas Department of Health and Environment and the Sedgwick County Health Department identified another possible exposure to measles from a Wichita restaurant bringing the total number of measles cases to 11, eight in Sedgwick County and three in Johnson County.

Measles is a respiratory disease caused by a virus, said the state. With the creation of the measles, mumps and rubella vaccine, measles cases have generally been rare in the U.S., however, it still sickens approximately 20 million and kills 164,000 people world wide each year. There has been a resurgence of measles cases in the U.S. in 2014. From Jan. 1 to July 3, 554 confirmed measles cases have been reported in 20 states. This is the highest number of cases since indigenous measles elimination was documented in the U.S. in 2000.

"The best way to keep from getting the disease is by being vaccinated. Protect children by making sure they have the measles, mumps and rubella vaccine when they are 12 to 15 month old, and again before they enter kindergarten," said Robert Moser, M.D., Kansas Department of Health and Environment secretary and state health officer.

The state says measles is highly contagious and is spread through the air by breathing, coughing or sneezing. Children or adults born after 1957 who do not have documented evidence of receiving at least two doses of a measles-containing vaccine, or documented evidence of laboratory-confirmed measles (a seropositive antibody test) are considered to be highly susceptible to measles.

The signs and symptoms of measles typically begin one to two weeks after someone is exposed

Study links depression to death risks

U.S. adults 50 and older who suffer from major depression face a 43 percent increase in the risk of death, especially cardiovascular disease or cancer, according to a study involving a University of Kansas researcher published recently in the Journals of Gerontology: Social Sciences by Oxford University Press.

"There's a major link between major depression and mortality. Taking all these other health behaviors out of it, you can continue to find this unique relationship between depression and mortality," said Jarron M. Saint Onge, a University of Kansas assistant professor of sociology and the study's lead author. "There's something that's leading to early death. And that's taking out smoking, taking out exercise, all these behavioral factors that would explain it."

Saint Onge said the study's findings are significant because they suggest that the relationship between depression and mortality is not due solely to people smoking or exhibiting unhealthy behaviors or experiencing chronic conditions that contribute to a higher risk of mortality.

When the researchers adjusted for factors such as marital status, education, employment status, family income, alcohol consumption, level of physical activity, smoking status, body mass, functional limitations and chronic conditions, they still found an independent association among major depression and increased risk of non-suicide mortality among the age group.

This includes findings that major depression was associated with 2.68 times the risk of cardiovascular disease mortality among those who did not have cardiovascular disease at the baseline.

"What we're finding here is it's important to be vigilant to find depression among people older than 50 because of a host of reasons," Saint Onge said. "It's important because of its relationship with health-compromising behaviors, but it's also important because it stands as an independent risk factor in mortality. There might be something unique about depression, taking aside all of your other behaviors, that there's something about depression that might lead to an increased risk of mortality."

He said related research has suggested major depression may have a physiological effect on blood pressure or arterial tightening that can cause cardiovascular disease.

"It's physiologically important, but it's also socially important to think of depression as a risk factor for death as well," he said.

Saint Onge, who also serves in the University of Kansas Medical Center's Department of Health Policy within the School of Medicine, co-authored the study with Patrick M. Krueger, an assistant professor of sociology at the University of Colorado at Denver, and Richard G. Rogers, a professor of sociology at the University of Colorado at Boulder.

Saint Onge said he hoped the study would bring awareness to the issue of major depression among people older than 50. For example, white men older than 65 represent a group with one of the highest suicide rates. He said increased vigilance in recognizing the problem and coming up with better coping mechanisms to help adults deal with depression in a healthy way would be key.

"We are always thinking of 20 year olds with depression because there are highly publicized suicide rates among 20 year olds," Saint Onge said. "But increasing rates of depression among the elderly pose continued health risks, beyond suicide"

He said people who suffer from major depression often turn to unhealthy habits — like smoking or binge drinking — in addition to social withdrawal and disobeying doctors' recommendations for treatment that lead to long-term health problems. It also could help, he said, to promote treatment of depression and healthy habits among younger people before they reach the age of 50, because it can be more daunting for people of older ages to start exercising, for example, if they haven't done it much in their lives before.

"It's related to health behaviors and that you continue to see that risk of mortality goes down once you start accounting for some of these health behaviors," Saint Onge said. "When we think about that, it just suggests how important it is to focus in on behaviors like physical activity, especially among people who are depressed."

Political signs not allowed on highways

It's a sign of the season — campaigning to support your favorite political candidate. However, if your plans involve placing a political sign, the Kansas Department of Transportation reminds you to make sure it's not located on highway right of way.

By law, all right of way on state highways is to be used exclusively for public highway purposes. Only regulatory, guide signs and warning signs are allowed on the state highway system. The transportation department has jurisdiction over all interstate, Kansas and U.S. routes on the state's 9,500-mile system.

The public should be aware that all political campaign signs or billboards are prohibited on the state right of way.

When maintenance crews find political or business advertising on state right of way, the signs will be removed immediately without notice. All such signs will then be taken to the closest subarea office where they can be picked up by the owner with the agreement they will not be placed on state right of way again. All political campaign signs not picked up will be disposed of after the election.

Political campaign advertising is allowed on private property bordering state right of way. However, people erecting signs on private property must first obtain permission from the property owner.

Kansas Notable Books celebrate heritage

The State Library of Kansas is pleased to announce 15 books featuring quality titles with wide public appeal, either written by Kansans or about a Kansas-related topic. The Kansas Notable Book List is the only honor for Kansas books by Kansans, highlighting our lively contemporary writing community and encouraging readers to enjoy some of the best writing of the authors among us.

A committee of Kansas Center for the Book, affiliates, fellows, librarians and authors of previous Notable Books identifies these titles from among those published the previous year, and the State Librarian makes the selection for the final list. An awards ceremony will be held at the Kansas Book Festival, Sept. 13, to recognize the talented Notable Book authors.

2014 Kansas Notable Books

"Biting through the Skin: An Indian Kitchen in America's Heartland"

by Nina Mukerjee Furstenau

At once a traveler's tale, a memoir, and a mouthwatering cookbook, "Biting through the Skin" offers a first-generation immigrant's perspective on growing up in America's heartland. Nina Mukerjee Furstenau's parents brought her from Bengal in northern India to the small town of Pittsburg in 1964, decades before you could buy plain yogurt in American grocery stores. Embracing American culture, the Mukerjee family ate hamburgers and soft-serve ice cream. Her parents transferred the cultural, spiritual and family values they had brought with them to their children only behind the closed doors of their home, through the rituals of cooking, serving and eating Bengali food and making a proper cup of tea.

"The Black Country"

by Alex Grecian

The British Midlands. It's called the "Black Country" for a reason. Bad things happen there. When members of a prominent family disappear from a coal-mining village—and a human eyeball is discovered in a bird's nest—the local constable sends for help from Scotland Yard's new Murder Squad. Fresh off the grisly 1889 murders of The Yard, Inspector Walter Day and Sergeant Nevil Hammersmith respond, but they have no idea what they're about to get into. The villagers have intense, intertwined histories.

"Bleeding Kansas, Bleeding Missouri: The Long Civil War on the Border"

edited by Jonathan Earle and Diane Mutti Burke

Long before the first shot of the Civil War was fired at Fort Sumter, violence had already erupted along the Missouri-Kansas border—a recurring cycle of robbery, arson, torture, murder, and revenge. This multifaceted study brings together fifteen scholars to expand our understanding of this vitally important region, the violence that besieged it, and its overall impact on the Civil War.

"A Death at Crooked Creek: The Case of the Cowboy, the Cigar-maker, and the Love Letter"

by Marianne Wesson

One winter night in 1879, at a lonely Kansas campsite near Crooked Creek, a cowboy from Lawrence was shot to death. The case might have been soon forgotten—except for the $25,000 life insurance policies the cowboy had taken out shortly before his departure. The insurance companies refused to pay on the policies, claiming that the dead man was not John Hillmon, and the apparent widow, Sallie Hillmon, was forced to take them to court in a case that would reach the U.S. Supreme Court twice. The companies' case rested on a crucial piece of evidence: a faded love letter written by a disappeared cigarmaker, declaring his intent to travel westward with a "man named Hillmon."

In "A Death at Crooked Creek," Marianne Wesson re-examines the long-neglected evidence, recreating the court scenes that led to a significant ruling on the admissibility of hearsay evidence.

"Dragging Wyatt Earp: A Personal History of Dodge City"

by Robert Rebein

In "Dragging Wyatt Earp" essayist Robert Rebein explores what it means to grow up in, leave, and ultimately return to the iconic Western town of Dodge City. In chapters ranging from memoir to reportage to revisionist history, Rebein contrasts his hometown's Old West heritage with a New West reality that includes salvage yards, beef packing plants and bored teenagers cruising up and down Wyatt Earp Boulevard.

"Echoes from the Prairie: A Collection of Short Memoirs"

edited by Nicole Muchmore

A modern memoir anthology by Kansas writers in the Great Plains Writers Group, "Echoes from the Prairie" consists of short creative non-fiction stories arranged in four sequential parts that begins by answering the question "Why write memoir?" The remaining parts are separated by the phases of life: childhood, transition to adulthood and adulthood.

"Edmund G. Ross: Soldier, Senator, Abolitionist"

by Richard A. Ruddy

Thanks to John F. Kennedy's "Profiles in Courage," most twenty-first-century Americans who remember Edmund G. Ross (1826-1907) know only that he cast an important vote as a U.S. senator from Kansas that prevented the conviction of President Andrew Johnson of "high crimes and misdemeanors", allowing Johnson to stay in office. But Ross was also a significant abolitionist, journalist, Union officer and territorial governor of New Mexico. This first full-scale biography of Ross reveals his importance in the history of the United States.

"The Good Lord Bird"

by James McBride

Henry Shackleford is a young slave living in the Kansas Territory in 1857, when the region is a battleground between anti- and pro-slavery forces. When John Brown, the legendary abolitionist, arrives in the area, an argument between Brown and Henry's master quickly turns violent. Henry is forced to leave town—with Brown, who believes he's a girl. Over the ensuing months, Henry—whom Brown nicknames Little Onion—conceals his true identity as he struggles to stay alive. Eventually Little Onion finds himself with Brown at the historic raid on Harpers Ferry in 1859—one of the great catalysts for the Civil War.

"Navigating Early"

by Clare Vanderpool

After his mother's death at the end of World War II, Jack Baker's father sends him from his home in Kansas to attend a boys' boarding school in Maine. Jack doesn't know what to expect. Certainly not Early Auden, the strangest of boys. Early keeps to himself, reads the number pi as a story, and refuses to accept truths others take for granted. Feeling lost and adrift, Jack connects with Early and the two become friends. During a break from school, the boys set out for the Appalachian Trail on a quest for a great black bear. As Jack and Early travel deeper into the mountains, they meet peculiar and dangerous characters, and they make some shocking discoveries. Jack's ability to be a steadfast friend to Early will be tested as the boys discover things they never know about themselves and others. This Young Adult novel will challenge and astound readers as they navigate mysterious and uncharted lands.

"Needle in the Bone"

by Caryn Mirriam-Goldberg

"Needle in the Bone" tells the astonishing stories of Holocaust survivor Lou Frydman and former Polish resistance fighter Jarek Piekalkiewicz. As mere teenagers during World War II, the two men defied daunting odds, lost everything and nearly everyone in the war, and yet summoned the courage to start new lives. Captured by the German army during the Warsaw Ghetto uprising, Frydman survived six concentration camps and three death marches. Piekalkiewicz started his own underground army at age sixteen. After the war, Frydman and Piekalkiewicz began the long process of healing, taking different paths through the refugee camps of Europe, and then through university, marriage, and work, eventually leading them both to teaching positions at the University of Kansas, where they met in 1975. Recognizing the trauma and courage of each other's experiences, they became best friends. By blending extensive interviews with the men, historical research, and the author's own responses and questions, this emotionally stirring book provides a unique perspective on still-compelling issues, including the meaning of the Holocaust, the nature of good and evil, and how people persevere in the face of unbearable pain and loss.

"Of Grave Concern: An Ophelia Wylde Paranormal Mystery"

by Max McCoy

The Civil War is over, and many a young widow has turned to spiritualism to contact their husbands on "the other side." But Ophelia Wylde won't be fooled twice. "Teatime to Tailgates: 150 Years at the K-State Table"

by Jane P. Marshall

To celebrate Kansas State's sesquicentennial, the College of Human Ecology published a book about the university's rich food heritage featuring stories and recipes from 1863 to 2013. The book encompasses the entire university, from Call Hall's ice cream parlor to Van Zile's dining room, from Cowboy Cabbage cooked in a cast iron pan to the union's Crown rolls. Much of the information for this book came from archives, diaries, newspapers and historical journals—demonstrating the link between the school and the business of feeding the world. Many of the recipes are accompanied by historical anecdotes, narratives and historic photos. It's the story of homesteaders and wheat fields, cowboys and steak, test tubes and textbooks.

"The Thing About Luck"

by Cynthia Kadohata

Summer knows that kouun means "good luck" in Japanese, and this year her family has none of it. Just when she thinks nothing else can possibly go wrong, an emergency whisks her parents away to Japan—right before harvest season. Summer and her little brother, Jaz, are left in the care of their grandparents, who come out of retirement in order to harvest wheat and help pay the bills.

"The Tie That Bound Us: The Women of John Brown's Family"

by Bonnie Laughlin-Schultz

John Brown was fiercely committed to the militant abolitionist cause. Less well known is his devotion to his family, and they to him.

The commitment of his wife, daughters and daughters-in-law to his cause and their crucial roles in preserving and transforming his legacy after his death often goes unacknowledged.

Brown's wife, daughters, and daughters-in-law were in many ways the most ordinary of women, contending with chronic poverty and lives that were typical for poor, rural nineteenth-century women.

They also lived extraordinary lives, crossing paths with such figures as Frederick Douglass and embracing an abolitionist moral code that sanctioned antislavery violence in place of the more typical female world of pamphleteering.

In the aftermath of Brown's raid at Harpers Ferry, these women experienced a particular kind of celebrity for their roles as "relics" of Brown's raid.

Because of their position as symbols of the most radical form of abolitionist agitation, the story of the Brown women illuminates the changing nature of how Americans remembered Brown's raid, radical antislavery, and the causes and consequences of the Civil War.

"Worth the Pain: How Meningitis Nearly Killed Me - Then Changed My Life for the Better"

by Andy Marso

Born at the beginning of the millennial or "me-first" generation, Andy Marso grew up believing he was smart, talented and entitled to his dreams. He coasted through school with minimal effort, but weeks before he entered the "real world," Marso was struck down by a bacterial infection that changed everything.

In this first-person narrative, Marso, a professional journalist who has written for the Washington Post and the Topeka Capital-Journal, details a transformative months-long hospitalization in which he fights for his life and then his limbs.

By the time he leaves the hospital, Marso will face a choice: continue to grasp futilely at the easy, comfortable life he knew, or embrace a new life more challenging than he ever imagined.

Israel-Palestine conflict must end

A riveting letter is making its rounds from Dr. Mads Gilbert, a Norwegian doctor volunteering in Palestine. In it, Dr. Gilbert describes his first-hand account of Israel's boots on the ground in Gaza - the sounds of F16s, drones and Apache helicopters, "So much made and paid in and by US." blended with the screams, the smells, the sight of shivers and blood. He pleads, "Mr. Obama - do you have a heart? I invite you - spend one night - just one night - with us in Shifa ... I am convinced, 100 percent, it would change history."

Like President Obama, I'm complicit in this campaign of aggression in Gaza. We all are. The U.S. is using our money to pay for Israel's party of death.

U.S. taxes are supporting $3.1 billion in Foreign Military Financing to Israel in 2014. On Thursday, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved $621.6 million in U.S. funding for the U.S.-Israel Missile Defense Program. According to the Congressional Research Service's April 11 report, "U.S. Foreign Aid to Israel," American taxpayers give Israel's military campaigns $9.9 million per day - $121 billion in assistance to date.

This money is paying for the destruction of innocence - my tax dollars at work in the massacre of precious children, including a five-month-old baby. I will not be complicit in these crimes against humanity as they're disguised as self-defense.

It's a broken record; we've heard the lines and the lies before: "We're only defending ourselves." This timeless justification for violence has always failed the people. Like Hermann Goering, founder of the Gestapo, voiced at the Nuremberg Trials, "Naturally the common people don't want war... Voice or no voice, the people can always be brought to the bidding of the leaders. That is easy. All you have to do is tell them they are being attacked, and denounce the pacifists for lack of patriotism and exposing the country to danger. It works the same in any country." Despite the lessons we've learned since Nuremberg, it also appears to work in any era - so long as we allow it. Let's end this great delusion that serves to justify violence and pad the wallets of wartime elites.

What is happening in the conflict is not self-defense. The best defense for the people is an end to violence, which many believe could be achieved by returning to the 1967 borders, allowing refugees of the Nakba to return home and making honest attempts at collaboration toward resolution and reconciliation. Neither Israel's nor Hamas' strategies are directed toward peaceful resolution. Both target and terrorize innocent populations, and any use of violence to achieve political goals is morally wrong. I dare say that the greatest proof that peace is possible is that the war profiting elites are working so hard and spending so much money - our tax dollars - to oppose it.

I will not lose hope, however. More and more of us are speaking out about the abuse of our tax dollars and resisting paying war taxes, such as the National War Tax Resistance Coordinating Committee and War Resisters League. And I implore all of us to join these efforts. Because it's unlikely that President Obama will take up Dr. Gilbert's offer to spend a night in Palestine, otherwise things might be drastically different: "Nobody with a heart and power could ever walk away from a night in Shifa without being determined to end the slaughter of the Palestinian people ... The rivers of blood will keep running the coming night. I can hear they have tuned their instruments of death. Please. Do what you can. This, this cannot continue."

Wim Laven, writing for PeaceVoice, received a graduate degree in Conflict Resolution from Portland State University, is working on a Doctorate in International Conflict Management at Kenesaw State University and has taught courses on conflict and worked on peace projects for more than a decade.

An understanding of innocence

Isaac's oldest sons had been shot by the Germans. His wife and younger children had gathered with others in a church for safety, only to have the Germans block the doors and burn the church down. Isaac joined the war with revenge being his only desire. But after the Allies had taken Berlin, he came across a four-year-old German girl who was starving. Without thinking, he had pulled his revolver and nearly shot her when she attempted to steal food from him. But then he found a small bit of compassion in his heart, and not only let her go, but shared what little he had.

He never expected to see her again, but the next day she came. He could see in her face how hungry she was, but his rations were barely enough for himself. He struggled with thoughts that it was those like her that had killed his family. But then, in the next instant, he could see in her his own small daughter who had died in the fire.

Finally, after the battle had raged in his heart for some time, he divided his food and held out half of it to her. She cautiously crept closer. Once she reached him, she took the food and darted away.

Each evening after that, she grew more confident, and would come closer. Soon she didn't flee so quickly. Then, one day, before their usual meal time, he heard a cry, and turned to see her running toward him. Two men were chasing her with less than honorable intent. Isaac had grown accustomed to the horrors and ravishes of war, even of the very young, but this

from other pens

• daris howard

still sickened him. Even though the men were on the same side of the war as he was, Isaac felt anger swell in him. The girl ran behind Isaac and hugged his waist in fear. Isaac pulled his gun and faced the men. The men could see the angered expression on his face and quickly backed away.

The girl still held onto him, her face buried against him. Then Isaac did something he thought he could never do; he leaned down and hugged this little girl. That night, as he shared his food with her, she did not flee away, but stayed close. After they had eaten, Isaac did the best he could to help her understand that he would walk her safely home.

When they arrived at the place where she indicated she lived, Isaac saw it was nothing but a bombed out building. He looked for an adult, and finally found an old woman. Through her broken French, and his limited German, he was able to learn about the little girl. Isaac found out that her name was Alexandra, and that she had no family. Her father, a German soldier, had been killed while fighting. The rest of her family were killed as the battle moved into Berlin.

Isaac suddenly felt a surge of anger. What if the girl's father had been part of those who had killed his family? Then another thought came. What if, as he himself had been fighting, he had been the one who had killed her father or others of her family? He started to think about how Alexandra had done nothing wrong. There were many on both sides who didn't want to fight but had no choice. It is usually the innocent who pay the biggest price in any conflict.

The old lady watched Alexandra and could see the trust she had in Isaac. "Do you have family?" the lady asked him.

"They were all killed by the Germans," Isaac said quietly. "One was a daughter Alexandra's age."

The lady was silent for a moment, and when she spoke, she spoke with great empathy. "You have lost your family, and so has she. Perhaps she was brought to you, and you to her, because you need each other so that you can both have a family once more."

As Isaac considered this, the lady spoke again. "I can not take care of her. If she stays here, she will most likely die."

Isaac wondered if he could find the forgiveness in his heart to raise a child of the enemy that had killed his family. And if he did, could he love her as his own daughter?

As he looked at Alexandra, and she looked up at him with her trusting big blue eyes, he determined it would be worth it to try.

Electric racing to start soon

While the Formula 1 season is reaching its halfway point - and with little change in overall standings from the first of the year - my new favorite racing series, Formula E, is ramping up.

Earlier in July, the first ever practice sessions were held at Donnington Park in the United Kingdom. This was everyone's first real chance to see what these new single seat, open cockpit electric racing cars can do.

A lot of lessons were learned. First, of course, is that reliability will be an issue. Any time you're working with complex machinery, there will be breakdowns, and the testing days showed that electric car motors are no exception. There were plenty of faults, plenty of missteps.

Overall though the practices went very well. It was a great chance to see the drivers in action, and to hear the cars, which make a very distinctive sound, almost like what you hear when you're in a jet plane that's taking off.

• simple tricks and nonsense

One interesting observation that I stumbled across is that Formula E could become Prost vs. Senna 2.0. Anyone with an interest in racing will know about the rivalry between F1 drivers Alain Prost and Ayerton Senna in the 1980s and 90s. They battled back and forth both on and off the track until Senna's death in 1994.

In Formula E, we have Prost's son Nico and Senna's nephew Bruno racing for different teams. Could be fun.

However, neither of them ended up with the top times during the practices. All the analysts say that you shouldn't expect these times to mean anything, as the teams are still getting used to the cars. Not that it will stop us comparing to see who was fastest, and that honor went to Nico Prost's teammate Sebastian Buemi.

I still haven't decided who I'm going to root for yet. As I said in a previous column, there's a lot that can go into that decision.

Do I root for Buemi just cause he was the fastest in practice? Do I root for Mike Conway because he knows how to win on street circuits? Do I root for the Andretti team cause they're from America? Or do I root for the Trulli team because their cars look the coolest?

All of these questions will be answered in time. The first race just over 40 days away. I'm excited to see what electric cars can do. I like that they are becoming more prevalent, with companies like Tesla building large networks of charging stations. It may soon be truly practical to have one, even way out here.

A great place to visit

• open season

I love visiting Denver.

It's fun seeing all the people on 16th Street walking, talking, eating, panhandling.

We try to get to the city several times a year, usually to attend the annual Colorado Press convention or to go to a baseball game.

The convention is always fun because we get to see a lot of old friends, but it isn't a great go-down-to-the-16th-Street-Mall-and-watch people kind of event because they hold it in February.

For those who aren't familiar with Denver, the 16th Street Mall is about a mile strip of 16th in downtown Denver that the city closed to cars and opened up to pedestrians and shuttle buses. Free buses run up and down the streets, plus the occasional maintenance or police vehicle, but mostly it's just shops, restaurants and people walking all over the place. There are trees, flower pots and tiny shops in the median. The merchants have put out old pianos and checkerboards for people to sit and play if they like. Street musicians and performers - most of them really bad - can be found singing and playing everything from a guitar to bagpipes.

This week, we were in the city to ride the Denver Post train to Cheyenne for the rodeo on Saturday and then to pick up our daughter and granddaughter at the airport on Sunday. As an added bonus, we stopped by the Denver Bookbinding Co. and picked up the bound volumes of all the 2013 newspapers.

Each year, we collect a copy of each issue of each paper and take them in for binding. We had them done in Selden for many years, but when Koerperich's went out of business, we had to find another place.

So, on Friday afternoon we arrived at the bindery. They close early on Friday, so most of the employees were gone, but one man had stayed behind to help us. We loaded the boxes of books into the back of the truck and we had the rest of the evening free.

What to do?

That was easy. Park the truck and take a walk down 16th Street.

It was a soft summer evening, and the crowds were out. We saw mimes, lovers, skateboarders, young girls in short skirts and high heels tottering down the street with guys in dirty jeans and torn shirts, businessmen, street people, families with kids, young, old, and everything in between. Even a couple in their 70s all dressed up, out on a date.

We had a lovely supper at a little restaurant and went to bed early.

We had a train to catch - at 6 a.m. - and our granddaughter to pick up.

I love Denver. I wouldn't want to live there, but it's a great place to visit.

Sherman, Thomas County agencies make drug arrests

during the Thomas County search warrants. While even large drug busts may not completely stop the flow of illegal drugs, Finley said, every seizure and drug dealer stopped benefits the community. Sherman County Sheriff Burton Pianalto said the information developed the night of July 14 during the cooperative investigation in Thomas County was sufficient to obtain and execute the search warrant in Sherman County. He said the information was accurate and all items seized were as described. Jail records indicate that Wendy Faye Huthunsel, 39, of Goodland, and Tyson Roy Owing, 35, of Colby, were booked into the Sherman County Bastille last Tuesday on charges of possession of hallucinogenic drugs, sale and distribution of hallucinogenic drugs, possession of drug paraphernalia with intent to store, ingest, etc., and arranging sale or purchase with a communications device. David Anthony Rodriguez, 42, of Colby, was also booked into the jail by the Thomas County Sheriff's Office on charges of possession of hallucinogenic drugs and arranging sale or purchase with a communications device. Rodriguez is a former Colby law enforcement officer who ran for sheriff in 2010. The investigation is ongoing and additional arrests are pending.

Measles vaccinations encouraged to an infected person. Symptoms include:

- Fever
- Blotchy rash on the skin, which spreads from the head to the trunk then to the lower extremities (Measles can be spread to others from four days before to four days after the rash appears.)
- Cough

- Runny nose
- Red, watery eyes (conjunctivitis)
- Feeling run down, achy
- Tiny white spots with bluish-white centers found inside the mouth (Koplik spots)

"If you have a fever, stay home except to see a healthcare provider. If you need to visit your health care provider, call ahead so appropriate measures can be taken to protect other patients and staff," said Donna Terry, Sherman County Health Department administrator. If you are unsure of your vaccination status contact the health department to see if you have a vaccination record with the state of Kansas. The health department can also vaccinate you against the measles but this must be done before exposure. Call (785) 890-4888 for an appointment.

Atwood hospital upgrades phone system

The Rawlins County Health Center now has an updated phone system that includes automated direct access. With the new capabilities, a direct dial extension will help you get straight to the person you need, including patients, departments, or individuals. "When I arrived and discovered the steps it took to talk to a loved one in the hospital," Sharon Cox, head of the hospital, said, "I knew we needed to improve our customer service in this department quickly." Destiny Schroeder, information systems director, said that the project was complicated by the limitations of phone services to Atwood. "An added benefit to the automated system is that now when you are registering for services, there should be fewer interruptions," Cox said. With the upgrade, there is an automatic connection to a patient's room by entering a three-digit extension number; automatic connection to your party without having to go through an operator; and quicker access and availability to who you need. Hospital and clinic phone numbers remain the same.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
 Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Sherman County walks to aid cancer research

Cancer survivors and caregivers got the first lap (above) at the Sherman County Relay for Life on Friday at the Goodland High School track. The two groups started off going in opposite directions, then met on the far side of the track and completed the lap together. Before the lap, the survivors were handed balloons to be released later (below). Before the relay began, the Kiwanis Club served dinner (right). Rich Blanchette of the First Baptist Church provided an opening prayer (bottom left), and the X-pressos sang the National Anthem. The Relay had to be cut short and everything dismantled (bottom right) due to a severe thunderstorm moving in from the north.
