School's back in session

Today was the first day of school, and to celebrate the opening of the remodeled West Elementary, the school district and the Goodland Ambassadors held a ribbon cutting this morning (above). The district also held open houses at West, North, Grant Junior High and Central, which for this year is serving as the high school. The district is on a shortened schedule this year to accommodate the ongoing construction. Several more weeks were added to the summer break, and the school day was lengthened.

Governor facing stiff competition in November

By Kevin Bottrellkbottrell@nwks.com

The race for the top executive position in Kansas could either be a dead heat or swinging in favor of the Democratic challenger, depending on which polls you look at.

A Survey USA/KSN-TV poll from last week shows Paul Davis, the House Minority Leader, ahead of incumbent Gov. Sam Brownback 48 percent to 40 percent. However, the Brownback campaign rejected the results, and released an internal poll which puts the governor at 43 percent to Paul Davis' 42 percent.

With the election coming up on Tuesday, Nov. 4, the Brownback campaign announced Friday it had agreed to four debates. The first will be from 8 to 9 a.m. (Mountain Time) at the State Fair in Hutchinson on Saturday, broadcast on WIBW radio. The second will be aired on KWCH television on a date to be determined. The third will be Friday, Sept. 19, in Johnson County. The fourth will be from 11:40 to 12:15 p.m. at the Wichita Airport Hilton, and will be broadcast by a variety of Kansas stations.

Brownback himself will be in Goodland on Sept. 16 for a fund raising luncheon at Northwest Kansas Technical College. The Davis campaign currently has no events scheduled in the area.

Davis, who hails from Lawrence, holds an undergraduate degree from the University of Kansas and a law degree from Washburn University. He owned a private law firm — Fagan, Emert & Davis — in Lawrence.

Davis was first elected to the Kansas House of Representatives in 2003. He was elected House Minority Leader in 2008. While in the House he sponsored legislation to curb abusive workplace environments and an equal rights amendment to the state constitution, as well as helping create the T-WORKS transportation plan. His issue priorities include promoting renewable energy, health care reform and tax reform. He favors restoring funding to schools and keeping taxes low.

Davis made headlines in July when a group of 100 Republicans — current and former elected officials — endorsed him over Brown-

Audiologist starts clinic

Rachel McArthur, Doctor of Audiology, is opening a state-of-the-art audiology clinic in Burlington at 431 14th Street on Tuesday.

The office is located inside the Health Essentials building on Main Street. Her telephone number is (719) 346-5717.

“I’m looking forward to providing more to my patients. I have diagnostic otoacoustic emissions equipment and a video otoscope (instrumentation to remove ear wax) to better test, diagnose and treat my patients,” explains McArthur.

McArthur has been practicing for nearly a decade, but her passion for audiology has always been in her blood. “My dad and my brother are both deaf in one ear. I’ve been aware of the struggles people with hearing loss deal with for all of my life. I’ll do everything in my power to help my patients hear better and get their quality of life back,” McArthur explains. She is experienced in diagnosing and treating hearing conditions in both young children and adults. “A lot of times kids are afraid to do the testing. Being a mom myself, I have the patience and demeanor to work effectively with children and have had a good success rate,” she said.

She graduated from the University of Northern Colorado and completed her residency and medical externship at Denver Health General Hospital. She lives in Burlington with her husband, Brad and their two children, Clay, 5, and Emma, 1.

“Burlington is home. My husband was born and raised here and works on his family’s farm. I am a part of this community and want to help my friends and neighbors anyway I can,” McArthur adds.

“There was a need for a full service hearing clinic in our area. Often times people struggling with hearing deficiencies were forced to drive to Denver to get answers. With my new practice, I’ll be able to provide top level care right at home,” said McArthur.

Student attends camp

Luke Hamilton, son of Mike and Krista Hamilton, attended the Camp KAOS Space 101 program June 17-21at the Kansas Cosmosphere in Hutchinson. Luke Hamilton will be entering the eighth at Grant Junior High this fall.

Space 101 is a four-day, introductory astronaut training camp for students entering seventh and eighth grades emphasizing teamwork, leadership and problem solving. Developed by Cosmosphere staff, Camp KAOS science, technology, engineering, and math-based programs are nationally recognized for their ability to motivate campers to seek careers in science and aerospace-related industries.

Participants construct and launch rockets, attend interactive briefings with Cosmosphere space science educators, tour the world-renowned Hall of Space Museum and train on Cosmosphere spaceflight simulators. The week culminates with a team-based mission in the Cosmosphere’s Falcon III, most realistic space shuttle simulator outside of NASA – where they pilot a low-Earth orbit mission – and the monitoring of another team’s shuttle flight in Mission Control.

Cosmosphere spaceflight simulators challenge campers. The centrifuge is a rotating device that tests physical reactions to typical g-forces encountered during launch and reentry of spacecraft. The multi-axis trainer spins riders 360 degrees in multiple directions while simulating tumble maneuvers that could be encountered in spaceflight. The stress simulator incorporates external stimuli into a mission to replicate potential stressful situations a person might encounter during spaceflight. The Falcon IIIsimulates launch, orbit, satellite deployment, reentry and landing of a space shuttle.

The Cosmosphere offers camp programs for students as young as those entering second grade, and on through high school. Camps are available for adults, including the Intergenerational Camp Experience for adults and their children or grandchildren. Additional camp experiences are offered for groups, and schools can custom-design curriculum based on state education standards. The Cosmosphere also has programs designed specifically for Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Webelos and the American Heritage Girls.

The Cosmosphere’s Camp KAOS program features five progressive levels for students entering seventh grade. Campers begin with Space 101 and 201, which are held at the Cosmosphere and visit other nearby facilities. They move on to Space 301, which includes a trip to Johnson Space Center in Houston, Texas for a behind-the-scenes tour of NASA’s astronaut training facilities. Those who progress to Space 401 travel to Kennedy Space Center in Florida, where campers experience NASA launch facilities. The most advanced campers in Space 501 focus on emerging space technology facilities in California.

The irony of U.S. foreign policies

At the start of classes one year ago, I had to explain to my students why the United States appeared to be on the verge of going to war against the Syrian government. At the beginning of this semester, exactly one year later, I'm having to explain to my students why the United States may be on the verge of going to war against Syrian rebels. Already, U.S. planes and missiles have been attacking the so-called Islamic State (ISIS) forces in northern Iraq. Given the threat of a genocidal campaign against Yazidis and other minorities and the risks of ISIS control expanding into the Kurdish region, even some of those normally averse to unilateral U.S. military intervention abroad have considered it the lesser of two evils.

Within days, however, there were already indications of "mission creep," as what had been officially declared an exclusively defensive mission turned offensive when the United States provided air support for Kurdish and Iraqi forces. It is not surprising, therefore, that there is skepticism regarding this use of military force. Even if one can make a convincing strategic case for such a military operation, the failure of President Obama to go before Congress for authorization of this renewed military intervention in Iraq is extremely disturbing.

Ironically, President Obama has been getting high-profile criticism from those wishing he had been more aggressive with projecting American military power. For example, in a well-publicized interview in The Atlantic, former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton blamed the rise of ISIS on Obama's failure to sufficiently arm and support the so-called moderate rebels of the Free Syrian Army (FSA).

Such a charge defies logic, however. The FSA consists of literally hundreds of separate militia without a central command, largely composed of relatively inexperienced fighters, who would have been no match for the well-armed, experienced, disciplined fighters of ISIS, regardless of the amount of weapons the U.S. might have provided. In fact, it was an awareness of ISIS's potential dominance of the Syrian rebel movement that served as an important reason why the Obama administration didn't go beyond the relatively limited arming and training of a few small groups affiliated with the FSA.

In any case, ISIS has found an even stronger foothold in Iraq than Syria, a direct consequence of the U.S. invasion and occupation. In a profile of ISIS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, a one-time moderate Sufi turned Salafist extremist, the New York Times observed, "At every turn, Mr. Baghdadi's rise has been shaped by the United States' involvement in Iraq – most of the political changes that fueled his fight, or led to his promotion, were born directly from some American action."

Ironically, the eventual demise of ISIS will more likely stem from the group's own fanaticism than from any action by Baghdad or the U.S. ISIS – which even the Al-Qaeda network believes is too extreme – sees not just those who aren't Sunni Muslims as "infidels," but anyone who doesn't subscribe to its extremist ideology. Since almost everyone under its rule is therefore at risk, the prospects of the Iraqi and Syrian people eventually rising up against ISIS is high. In fact, Syrian nonviolent activists have already been openly defiant of ISIS. Had the active nonviolent coalition groups in Syria received material or diplomatic support from the beginning, instead of Clinton's "moderate" rebels, they may have been able to prevent or mitigate the rise of ISIS altogether.

Massive Western military intervention will likely create a backlash that could strengthen political support for the extremists. The United States has been bombing Iraq on and off for nearly a quarter century and things have only gotten worse, for the people of Iraq, the security interests of Iraq's neighbors and, ultimately, for the United States. Just as Sunni tribal leaders were more effective than either U.S. forces or the Iraqi government in driving out Al-Qaeda from northwestern Iraq in 2007-2008, they may also be the key, along with nonviolent civil society, in ridding their region of ISIS and any other actual or potential threats.

School's not really so awful

The other day I came out of the newspaper office and found a youth of about 10 years old sitting on the curb clearly dejected about something. I sat down next to him as the cars whizzed by and asked, "What seems to be the problem? Wife kick you out of the house?" (I find this is why I end up sitting on the curb dejectedly – but surprisingly this was not the case for this young lad).

"Nah," he said. "School's starting pretty soon and I'm gonna have ta go back to class."

"And you see this as a negative?" I asked, a bit confused.

"Oh, heck yeah," he said. "I mean, they just closed the pool, and I'll have homework and there'll be teachers and girls and..."

I stopped him at this point because he did not appreciate the more valuable aspects of an education. I find that so many young people these days do not. "But you're missing the big picture," I pointed out. "Think of all that a day in school can mean." He just looked at me blankly.

"Think back, what was the best thing that happened to you in the last year?" I asked.

"Well..." he said while thinking back over all the aspects of the previous year, "I guess it was when I dropped the bag of water on the teacher during the snow storm."

"And where were you when this happened?" I asked.

"Well...at school."

"Now think back again," I requested. "Can

time

• t.v. hagenah

you think of any other high points in the previous years?"

"Well, there was the time I put gum in Wynonna Fibratch's hair and she came back the next day with half her head shaved. Yeah, that was great."

"You see," I said, "you were underestimating the value of school. There are so many positive experiences that young people forget about when looking at education. It is important to look at all aspects."

I told him that he was on the very cusp of an educational plateau. He was entering into a grade in school when spitballs would become a major artistic factor in his life. The perfection of their aerodynamics would give him hours of fun (and custodians hours of work cleaning them off blackboards, walls and ceilings).

"Yeah?" he said eagerly.

I also shared with him the fact that the grade he would be entering was where he would learn of the unified book drop theory. This is the theory that if everyone is unified when they drop their English books, they can see the little vein pop out of the teacher's forehead as she loses her temper and screams.

Summer's end

• along the sappa

If you were out doing something in the sun, as I was, is even felt a little like summer. But it was Labor Day, and the odds of having very much summer weather were – are – slim.

September, like May in the spring, is a transitional month, but it's not a summer month any more than May is. We'll head fast now to cooler weather. It's only a couple of weeks until the fall equinox, and the days will be shorter than nights.

Daylight Saving Time will keep us thinking there's plenty of light, but if you get up early enough, it's already dark in the morning here.

OK. I don't want to rush things.

I like summer. I treasure the cicada chorus, the long evenings, the golden light at 8 o'clock that falls on the trees and casts long shadows, finally turning the elevator down by the rail-

"Really?" he asked, obviously gaining a newfound enthusiasm for the American educational system. "What else will I learn in school do you think?"

"There are whole worlds of educational possibilities," I said as I warned to my task of selling the value of attending school. "You're at the age when most girls can be frightened to death with such common everyday things as frogs, lizards and snakes, and teachers can be made to have breakdowns with things as simple as pencils in your nose and your eyelids folded back."

It was at this point he jumped up, squared his shoulders and looked at me with obvious respect. "You know," he said, "I'm glad I met you. I would have never realized just how much school has to offer."

I have to admit that I walked away from that discussion a little bit taller. I hear politicians and educators regularly bemoaning the fact that there are too many dropouts from today's schools. Obviously, they don't know how to inspire students. Maybe I should become an inspirational speaker, or something.

TV Time is meant as humor. If you are an educator or a parent, we apologize for our columnist. He doesn't always realize the havoc he can unleash by some of his comments. We sometimes wish he were a teacher so he can be at the receiving end of some of his suggestions... oh yeah, he is, at Grant Junior High School.

yard the color of the wheat inside, then amber and finally – if you're really lucky, you'll see it – bloody pink.

I can sip on the deck, sip ice water or, after moving, a cold beer, and listen to the sounds all day.

Fall is OK. It's mostly warm, the first part, at least, and you can have some beautiful days. But you know it'll end badly. Long nights and cold weather arrive long before you're ready for them.

I love hunting season. It's the best time to be out in the field, and you don't have to shoot a bird to enjoy being with nature. This year, it'd be nice just to see a few birds, though I think we have more than we did last year.

But then soon enough, it'll be winter. No more birds. No fishing. No sitting on the back deck. No daylight. I'll sit and pine for spring, which will seem like a long day off.

In a way, I wish I hadn't noticed the weather was turning, but that's the way things are. Still, when you get past 60, you know your summers are numbered. You don't want to waste any of them.

A stuffed zoo

• open season

I remember haggling over a panda bear in a hotel gift shop in Beijing. We were leaving the next day and I really wanted that cute cuddly black and white bear but I was running short of cash. I didn't even think of bargaining in a hotel gift shop but the salesgirl said that was what they did so she got the rest of my Chinese cash and I went home with a stuffed bear.

In Costa Rica, I found a green iguana. I used him as a headrest for the rest of the trip and he now holds down a stack of newspapers at home.

I brought home a camel from Tunisia, a turtle from Mexico and a mountain sheep from Turkey.

There is the donkey from the Grand Canyon, a moose from Michigan, a bear from Minnesota, a cat from California, a buffalo from Wyoming, a fish from Florida and an otter from Durango

The otter is important because I gave him away. I bought him in Durango and the next month, I took him with me on a train ride from Denver to Cheyenne, Wyo. Everyone on the train thought I had a dog in my bag.

Back in Denver, we met our daughter and granddaughter at the airport. Taylor immediately fell in love with the otter and when she and her mother left to go home to Georgia, the otter slipped right into her arms and went along.

I know. I know. That makes me an enabler. But, hey, I can always steal him back when I get to Georgia this winter or maybe just buy another couple of stuffed animals so we'll each have one.

back. This group included former Senate President Dick Bond, former state board of education member Carol Linnens and former state Rep. Charlie Roth. The group said Gov. Brownback's tax plan, education cuts and other budget issues were the primary reason for the endorsement.

Running for lieutenant governor alongside Davis is Jill Docking, who currently serves on the University of Kansas Endowment board. She has also served on the Kansas Board of Regents.

Brownback, who grew up on a pig farm near Parker, is a Kansas State University graduate. He earned a law degree in 1982 from the University of Kansas. In 1986 he became secretary of the Kansas Board of Agriculture, then in 1994 he was first elected to the U.S. House of Representatives and later to the U.S. Senate. He was elected to the governor's office in 2010.

Central to the governor's campaign for re-election is an update of the Road Map for Kansas, a concept from the 2010 campaign. The campaign has been rolling out the new Road Map in three parts over the past several weeks.

The first part is growing the Kansas economy. Brownback's new goal is adding 25,000 new jobs per year over the next four years. Among the ways listed to accomplish this are keeping business taxes low, marketing Kansas to companies returning to the U.S. from overseas and creating a statewide export strategy. The second part of the Road Map has to do with fighting the influence of the federal government, including energy regulations, the Affordable Health Care Act and the Lesser Prairie Chicken. The third part of the Road Map is education. Brownback's goal is to have 85 percent of high school graduates earn a technical certification, be accepted into higher education or join the military.

Current Lt. Gov. Jeff Colyer is remaining on the ticket as Brownback's running mate. Colyer is a physician from Hays who had a lead role in creating KanCare, the state's recent reorganization of Medicaid.
