Anonymous 'Environmentalists' besmirch commissioner's name

From The Norton Telegram
Tuesday, Sept. 21, 2004

A recently mailed flyer has Norton County residents scratching their heads.

The flyer is signed Norton County Environmentalists but carries no individual writers names. It makes accusations about confined animal feeding operations and a Norton County commissioner.

"Two of our Norton County commissioners claim to be environmentalists and keepers of our water," the flyer proclaims. "We are questioning the validity of such comments."

It goes on to say that an unnamed commissioner has chosen not to control the pollution on a small feedlot he owns. It says the commissioner hasn't cleaned the lot for months and has allowed weeds to grow, creating "a direct source for nitrates to go down because of roots breaking the hard pan seal".

Commissioner Leroy Lang, said he is the owner of the lot in question but added that he wasn't aware that he was looking the other way.

He said he has been working with the Kansas Department of Health and Environment and the Natural Resources Conservation Service on building a new lot near the old one. He applied for a permit in 1996 and has been working on getting a new lot built since then. While that is being done, he said state officials told him to use the lot he's been using.

Mr. Lang said it is used as a wintering lot for about 120 days a year. He said nothing is ever full-fed there.

The flyer said confined animal feeding operation rules apply to "any operation over 300 animal units..."

Mr. Lang said he keeps around 120-130 head of calves at the lot when in use, which is well under the 300 units. He said cattle are put in there three or four days at a time to eat the weeds in the summer, which hold the soil together. Vegetation keeps the nitrates down, he said.

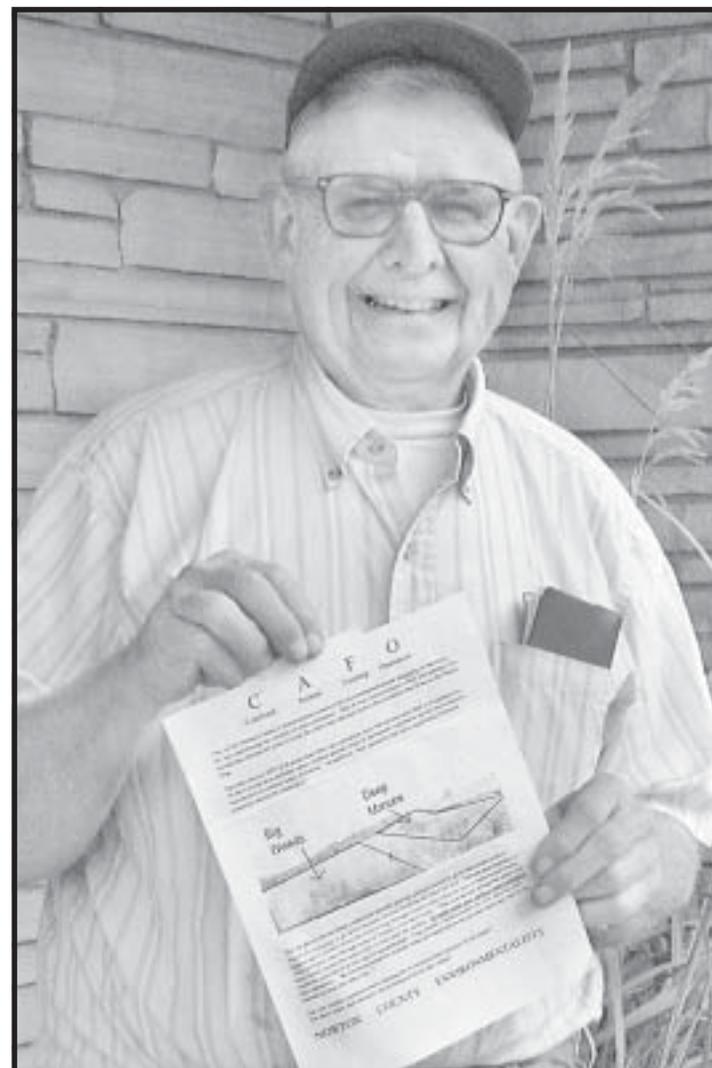

The flyer goes on to say that the lot doesn't have a lagoon and so pollutes water runoff.

"There is a natural spring that starts near here which means the water table is very near the surface," it says. "Ground water and surface water pollution could be considered a very significant potential."

Mr. Lang said the lot has no lagoon. He said the new lot, which the Natural Resources Conservation Service is helping to plan, wouldn't have a lagoon but would have a filtering system.

He said there was no natural spring that starts near the lot, but it is on a draw that leads to the creek. He said water is 73 feet below ground and knows this because they just dug a new well for the new lot.

"There are no springs around there," he said. "People need to get the facts right and all of the information before sending something like this out. And then they need to sign it so we know who's telling us these things.

Commissioner Leroy Lang holds a copy of a circular, mailed to county residents, accusing him of groundwater pollution from a feedlot.

"It's our (the commissioners) job to protect the health and welfare of the people in this county. That's why we have the County Health Department. We wouldn't jeopardize people's health to be selfish to ourselves."

Mr. Lang said the flyer was election propaganda. "If this is all they can find on you, you're pretty clean," he said.
