WILSONVILLE

By VELMA HOLTZE

Becky Holtze was honored for her birthday with supper at the home of her daughter, Jolene and Justin Miller and family in Cambridge. Others present were husband, Jim, son, Brian and Lyndzie Holtze and daughter, Janene Holtze. later they attended the elementary music program.

Carla Holtze recently spent time at her daughter, Kendra Hoagland's home in Hastings. Kendra teaches at "The Ark" a day-care was involved in moving their center to a new building.

The Baptist-Christian Church minister, Keith Theobald, was honored at the Beaver City Manor brunch held during Volunteer Week as "Volunteer of the Year". Pastor Keith not only serves the Wilsonville Church, but he also preaches one Sunday a month at Danbury and also at Lebanon Presbyterian churches as well as being a busy farmer near Beaver City. Yet, he finds time, or perhaps makes time, to conduct the Tuesday morning chapel service at the Manor as well as going every Friday morning for their coffee time just to visit with the residents, sharing a bit of news with them or lending a listening ear while they talk. He also conducts many of the memorial services for deceased residents.

Connie Wilson, Margene Holtze and Velma Holtze represented the Baptist-Christian Women at the May Day Brunch Saturday morning at the Beaver City Christian Church. The theme was "Tell Me the Old, Old Story". Pam Lamb shared the story of this song. Following a brunch of breakfast casserole and fruit cup the guest speaker, Donna Martin Christensen, gave the message. Donna was raised in Beaver City, graduating from high school there. Following the death of her husband, Vernon Martin, in 1984, she began writing. Her column was featured in The Oberlin Herald until 1988.

to Superior, Neb., her column about living began to appear in The Superior Express. She has also written a daily devotional book called "Reflections". Velma Holtze has a copy.

The Library Board met May 3 with all present except for Marlene Witte and Connie Holliday. Plans were discussed for the bake sale and white elephant sale to be held rodeo weekend. Anyone bringing items for either are asked to have them at the park between 8-8:30 a.m. There will also be "grab bags" for sale. It was voted to add a plaque to the memorial board in memory of Arlee Bethel.
