Winter weather finally comes to Norton

By VERONICA MONIER

Winter has finally come to Norton. The county had a brief visit from Jack Frost the day after Thanksgiving, but it quickly melted.

But, Mr. Frost came back for a more extended visit Friday. Over the past weekend, Norton has seen anywhere from one to three inches of snow, depending on where you are in town.

Monday evening brought freezing rain and a winter storm warning, which was expected to last until Tuesday. The National Weather Service in Goodland's warning said widespread freezing rain should be expected with significant ice accumulation likely.

Meteorologist Kelly James said the freezing rain, which began Monday, should change into a wintry mix of freezing rain and snow, which will continue into Tuesday.

On Tuesday, she said, expect snow. Overall, they are estimating three to six inches of rain and snow.

People should be careful when they have to drive, she said. With the rain and snow, visibility will be very poor and added to the icy roadways, extreme caution should be taken.

"If you don't have a reason to go out, don't," she said. "It's a good time to stay home and inside."

Andrew McMullen was the lone sledder at Elmwood Park Monday afternoon. Andrew took advantage of the snow before the freezing rain came, sledding down the hill, then climbing back up it again.

The Norton City/County Airport Board met Monday night for the first time in two months. All members of the board were present, except for Ron Briery who had an excused absence.

Chairman of the board John Miller gave an update of the airport concrete project. He said he met with Tom Bennett of B & G Consultants for a pre-construction conference in September. Mr. Miller said George Laliberte, the State Director of Aviation, had asked

Mr. Bennett to write a state grant to help fund the project. As of yet, no word has been received regarding the approval of the grant. Mr. Miller said it is hoped the state will help pay for the balance of the project.

Mr. Miller said he has signed the forms prepared by Mr. Bennett to apply to the Federal Aviation Administration for non-priority airport money. He said the application makes the airport eligible to receive about $71,000.

The Norton County Sheriff's Department is getting a new program to help monitor communication and chat lines.

Sheriff Troy Thomson told the Norton County Commission at its Nov. 26 meeting that his department has been looking at a program called computer cop. The program costs $4,250 and the sheriff wanted to know if the county could afford it.

The software is to monitor communication and chat lines with juveniles. Sheriff Thomson said that over the past couple of months, he has had several parents in his office who were worried that their children were using chat lines.

Sheriff Thomson said the computer cop program will monitor the chat line use.

The commission voted 2-1 to buy the program and charge for the software with Commissioner Leroy Lang voting no, while Commissioners John Miller and Richard Thompson voted yes.

Sheriff Thomson spoke with the commission about department operations and discussed some financial information that the commission had requested.
