Quilters March meeting was held in Long Island

By REGINA STARK

The Heritage Quilters met Monday, March 3 at the Long Island Community Building. A special gift was presented to Cheryl Roberts for wearing the most green.

The group decided to help the Norton County Hospital by making fleece lap robes from money donated by the Jean Spires family. The hospital is also getting short on baby blankets to give new mothers. Members were urged to renew the supply.

Three classes will be held this spring. On March 29, Norma Carman will be teaching machine applique and Freda Weyand will be teaching paper piecing. On April 19, Juanelle from Quilt Cabin in Colby will be teaching border print quilts.

The program at the March meeting was "A Quilter's Rummage Sale". Many great buys were purchased by members.

The next meeting will be April 7 at the Prairie Land basement meeting room. The program will be rug weaving with Mary of Cottage Garden Bed and Breakfast, WaKeeney.

Hostesses will be Freda Weyand, Jamie Dreher, Cheryl Roberts and Connie Miller.

Artists from tri-state area will gather for show in Oberlin

The fourth annual High Plains Artfest will be held on Saturday and Sunday, April 19 and 20 at the Oberlin Gateway Center. The show will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on both days.

The Artfest continues to grow, bringing artists from northwest Kansas, southwest Nebraska and northeast Colorado with a large number of artists coming from McCook and Mid Plains Community College. Both professional and high school artists enter their pieces in nine different categories.

Jurors Barbara Waterman Peters and Larry Peters of Topeka will judge, one being a well-known painter and the other a gifted ceramists and sculptor.

A gala event is planned for artists, patrons and their guests on Friday evening starting with a meal served by The Gateway staff. Wine and sparkling beverages will be served while the McCook String Quintet provides background music. Those interested in becoming patrons are encouraged to call Connie Grafel at (785) 475-2901.

Interested artists can request a prospectus. Registrations are due March 31. Nearly $2,500 in cash awards will be presented to winners in each category.

For details, call Anna Shaw at (785) 475-2707.

Kissin' cuzzin makes chili to warm the soul

Some folks call distant family members "shirt-tail relation" and others just refer to them as kin. In my family the branching of the family tree led to a lot of "kissin' cuzzins". My husband's family, on the other hand, was so extended they didn't even claim second cousins unless they had money or oil — or so they said. When his family gets together they have to hire a hall; mine will barely fill a dining room table.

This recipe for chili comes from some of my "kissin' cuzzins" down in Oklahoma. Hank, who originated the formula, is the husband of Nancy who is a daughter to my second cousin, Idella. How's that for a convoluted connection? Nevertheless, Nancy and I communicate off'n on, via the wonders of the computer age, and her jubilant message came in Monday. Apparently Hank's chili took first place at the Woodlands Christian Church Chili Cook-Off in Ponca City! I asked permission to pass it along to my readers and here it is below. It is the most unique chili recipe I've seen in years. I do hope you try it and enjoy it on one of the last cold winter days.

Speaking of chili, here's an entry for the 2008 Cook's Corner Culinary Catastrophe Hall of Fame. Several years back LeRoy raised his usual crop of jalapeno peppers plus some innocent looking, crumply orange Serrano peppers. Serrano peppers make jalapeno peppers taste like Popsicles. We dried them, crushed them into pepper flakes and cautiously tried a flake or two in various dishes. They made their presence very apparent no matter how few were used. Obviously we had a lifetime supply of the little nuggets from Hell. David took a cup or so home in a small plastic bag which he tossed on a pantry shelf without mentioning this to his wife, Shannon. Thus was the scene set for disaster.

Cook's Corner

Shannon decided to make chili for supper one evening and, mistaking the lethal bag of fire flakes for some leftover commercial chili spice mix, poured the entire contents into the chili pot. She did not notice it smelled pretty potent but she knew David liked spicy hot food, so thought nothing of it. When he pulled into the garage and caught an appetizing whiff David hurried inside and found the source of the tantalizing aroma simmering away on a back burner. Just like Dagwood he grabbed a spoon and scooped up a sample. We're pretty sure David will never have to have his tonsils surgically removed. They've been burned clear out by Dr. Serrano.

The hungry pair attempted to make the chili edible by adding more meat, more tomatoes, tomato juice, more beans, even some brown sugar. At the end of the chili trail, however, about $50 worth of ingredients went down the disposal. New rule at their house — all items in the pantry must be labeled!

If this doesn't warm you up on a chilly spring night, I don't know what will!

KISSIN' CUZZIN CHILI

One pound hamburger, browned, crumbled and drained
 One pound hot 'n spicy breakfast sausage, browned, crumbled and drained
 Six ounces Canadian bacon cut in spoon-size chunks
 Six ounces pepperoni cut in spoon-size chunks
 One 15-ounce can of ranch-style beans with jalapenos
 One 6-ounce jar sliced mushrooms, drained
 Half of a 10-ounce jar green olives, drained and sliced
 Three 28-ounce cans crushed tomatoes
 One can of the pizza sauce in a Chef Boy Ar Dee cheese pizza kit
 Add to your personal taste — dried minced onion, chili powder, cayenne pepper, oregano, salt and pepper
 Mix all ingredients in a large crockpot, simmer on low all day. Serve with shredded mozzarella and parmesan cheese for toppings. Hank bakes up the pizza crust from the kit and cuts it into small squares to munch with the chili. He also does the "Elmo" dance as he serves the bowls. Unfortunately, I cannot recreate that for you here but I believe it is optional to the success of the recipe.

Almena plans benefit auction

Almena volunteers are working on putting together a community auction on Saturday, June 14.

Items are being located for the auction and the time and place will be announced later.

The auction will be held in conjunction with the Sunflower Pioneer Power Association celebration and the city-wide garage sale.

If you can donate a collectible item, an antique, tickets to an event, homemade items, or a piece of machinery, contact Joy Sides, Janette Callaway, Ada Arford or Amy Chandler. The items may be donated to the Almena Chamber of Commerce.
