HANSEN MUSEUM

The Dane G. Hansen Museum, Logan, is proud to present the "The Curious World of Patent Models", which opened July 8 and will run through August 28. This exhibit, organized by the Rothschild Patent Model Collection and put on display by Smith Kramer Fine Art Services, will show approximately 50 models with interpretive labels that will include the history of each individual patent and the inventor. Most of the models in this collection were made by professional model makers and are more than 130 years old.

America's incredible success is primarily due to the dreams and inventions of its many citizens. Few people realize however, that from the time the United States Patent Office was formed by Thomas Jefferson in 1790 and throughout the industrial revolution, inventors were required to submit a working, scale model of their invention when applying for a patent. A patent is a government-issued document that protects an invention or idea for up to 20 years. This gives the inventor the opportunity to produce and sell the invention – or license others to do so – and to make a profit. And while "patent model" may not be a familiar term today, to United States inventors between 1790 and the late 1800's, it was commonplace. In order to obtain a patent, an application had to be accompanied by a working model of the invention. These were called "patent models," and were generally no larger than 12 inches square. The regulation was ceased when the United States Patent Office no longer had room to store the models.

The winner of the "People's Favorite Vote" during our "Student Joy of Painting Exhibit" was Wanda Jandera of Logan. Wanda's painting was called "Midnight in the Mountains". Congratulations Wanda!

Run, Walk, Roll Against Bullying

Minneapolis, Minn. - Communities nationwide are urged to join forces with PACER's National Bullying Prevention Center by planning a Run, Walk, Roll Against Bullying on Oct. 1 as a kickoff to National Bullying Prevention Month.

Every day, more than 160,000 children nationwide stay home from school to avoid being bullied. Not only are the effects of bullying on a child felt immediately, but they can also be lifelong - or even tragic.

That's why PACER is encouraging schools, businesses and organizations around the country to plan a Run, Walk, Roll Against Bullying in their own communities. Using PACER's free toolkit available at <http://www.pacer.org/bullying/> PACER.org/bullying, communities can plan and host a four-mile run and 1.5-mile fun walk/roll to raise awareness, offer prevention resources, and show support for National Bullying Prevention Month in October.

"This is a very real and painful issue that kids are facing," said Julie Hertzog, director of PACER's National Bullying Prevention Center based in Minneapolis, Minn. "But they don't have to face it alone, and bullying can be prevented if we all work together to change the culture. That's why we've created the Run, Walk, Roll event planning toolkit - to make it easier for communities to support the cause."

The free toolkit shows how to plan a Run, Walk, Roll in five easy steps, and includes tips, ideas and resources such as checklists and sample forms. To download the toolkit, visit <http://www.pacer.org/bullying/RunWalkRoll/> PACER.org/bullying. Communities are also encouraged to donate the proceeds from their event to the National Bullying Prevention Center.

PACER's National Bullying Prevention Center provides creative and interactive resources that are designed to benefit all students, including students with disabilities. It offers educators, students, families and individuals the tools they need to address bullying in schools, recreational programs or community organizations.
