LYLE NEWS

Catching up a little from last week: June Jolly went to the Fun Day at Jennings. She ate with Rea and Dee Magers and played Bingo. She went to her KT Club on Thursday.

Toots Magers visited Helen Helm at Cambridge. Kathy Van Meter and daughter Lloyd Frandsen attended an "old fashioned Saturday night" with popcorn and the works in Cambridge Saturday night.

Veda Wood had the pleasure of serving the snacks at the Seniors card game on Friday.

Dorothy Rowe and daughter visited Toots Magers and brought a quilt that had been made in 1936 by the Liberty Star Club. It had belonged to Mable Vanover and was embroidered with names of club members and others. The ladies felt that it should go to someone who had a hand in making it.

Another piece of history was brought by Gary Anthony, a story of Lois Witham who was born and reared in the Lyle community, and went as a missionary to China. A picture of her has hung in the Lyle church many years. Friends are in the process of finding more of her history and putting it in the museum.

Lynn Scrivner was a visitor at Toots' at the same time as Gary.

A good time was had at the Lyle 'first Sunday' dinner. Dewayne Jackson ate with us and we had a surprise visit from Hester Bundrock, daughter of David Wood. She was taking three newly hatched chicks to her home in Fort Collins, Colo. As she opened the box slightly to check on them, one of the little critters escaped, so a merry 'chicken chase' was on. I had started home, but only got to the church when I saw she wasn't following, so went back. I wished I had a camera, as about six people surrounded her car in Muslim-like poses, trying to shoo the baby out from under the car. I knew it wasn't 'auto-worship.'

nora, has graduated from Fort Hays State University with a Master of Science in Nursing.

Senator to visit local students

As Kansas students head back to the classroom, Senator Ralph Ostmeyer (R-Grinnell) is gearing up to join them. As part of the national "Legislators Back to School" program, Ostmeyer and fellow state senators will be working with local teachers to schedule classroom visits where students will have an opportunity to talk with their local senator, share their concerns and ask questions about the legislative process.

"It's never too early to get young people involved in our democracy," said Senator Ostmeyer. "This is an opportunity for senators and teachers to work together to bring civics to life and encourage a new generation of engaged voters."

Kansas senators are among the most active in the "Legislators Back to School," ranking 5th in the nation for their participation. Last school year, Kansas senators met with more than 8,000 Kansas school children.

The "Legislators Back to School" program is sponsored by the Trust for Representative Democracy and the National Conference of State Legislatures.
