Health Champion nominations needed

The Governor's Council on Fitness is asking for nominations in the 2013 Kansas Health Champion awards. Each year the Governor recognizes an individual and an organization for their exceptional efforts to model, encourage and promote fitness in Kansas. The deadline for nominations is June 28.

"Take the opportunity now to nominate your favorite health champion for this award and special recognition by Governor Sam Brownback. Besides recognizing exemplary contributions, the awards program identifies models of effectiveness in increasing physical activity that can be reproduced in other organizations and communities," said Virginia Elliott, Chair of the Governor's Council on Fitness and Vice President of Programs for the United Methodist Health Ministry Fund.

Eligible nominees might include an outstanding volunteer, a school, a local community, a newspaper or individual reporter, a local or state policy maker, or an employer, among others.

Nominees would be expected to have demonstrated:

Work that goes above and beyond what is expected to model, encourage and promote fitness

Far-reaching impact

Sustainable influence or activity

For more information and to access the nomination form, go to www.kansasfitness.org and click on the link "Health Champanion Award."

The Governor's Council on Fitness advises the Governor, the Secretary of Health and Environment, and others on ways to enhance the health of all Kansans through promotion of physical activity, good dietary choices and prevention of tobacco use.

An explosive success

The Norton Area Chamber of Commerce held a fund-raiser on Thursday at the Shopko parking lot. (From left to right) Mark Henderson, Larry Black, Terri Black go through the line to get their food, and Gloria Zwickle is there to help. Approximately 500 hamburgers were sold and all proceeds will go to the Fourth of July fireworks and festivities at Prairie Dog State Park.

Changes assist water conservation

Recently the USDA-Risk Management Agency (USDA-RMA) reduced their mandated number of crop samples per acre that had to be maintained for insurance appraisal under center pivot irrigation. These representative sample areas (RSAs) reductions are important for minimizing the amount of water required to be pumped on crops affected by extreme environment conditions.

"We appreciate RMA's willingness to work with the Kansas Water Office, the Kansas Department of Agriculture and farmers and ranchers on a solution to conserve water in Kansas," said Kansas Secretary of Agriculture Dale Rodman. "Water conservation is a priority for the state and this policy will encourage producers to be more efficient with their water while still allowing irrigation and access to critical risk management tools."

This adjustment to USDA-RMA's Loss Adjustment Manual (LAM) will allow for producers to more accurately determine and aggregate representative sample areas (RSAs) and conserve irrigated water, energy and operating costs when using center pivot irrigation systems.

"RMA has made great improvements to its process for providing an adequate crop sample under center-pivot irrigation," said Tracy Streeter, Director of the Kansas Water Office. "This will allow producers to minimize the amount of water necessary to irrigate failed or damaged crops for insurance purposes."

For more information regarding changes with the RSAs when acreage is contained in a center pivot irrigation system visit www.rma.usda.gov/bulletins/pm/2013/13-023.pdf.
