

County is looking at new equipment for smoother ride

By CYNTHIA HAYNES

A new piece of equipment may help Norton County get rid of some of the problem "washboarding" in its roads.

A walking roller attaches to the road grader and helps knock down the ripples that are commonly called washboarding in the road. At least that's what the company that makes them says, County Road and Bridge Foreman Floyd Richard told the county commissioners at their meeting on Monday, September 23.

Mr. Richard said that there is one of the attachments in Colby and he wants to see it before purchasing but he's looking for something that will help.

"(We're) looking for something to seal the gravel back so it will last long," he said adding that water and grading alone only lasts about a week.

KQNK, E2 and the road over the dam at Prairie Dog State Park are some of the worst problem roads for washboarding, he said, and maybe the grader attachments, which come in 75-inch and 90-inch sizes, would help the problem and save on both manpower hours and equipment time.

"The dam road does get to be a mess," noted Commissioner R.A. Peterson.

The 90-inch size covers the whole grader, Mr. Richard said and the commissioners agreed that would be the best buy.

"It'll be smoother that way," Mr. Richard said.

"If it works good, we should go for it," Commissioner Charles Posson said. "The biggest peeve everybody has is the washboards on the roads."

Mr. Richard asked if the commissioners wanted to go to Colby to check out the attachment with him but they deferred to his judgement and said he should buy the piece of equipment if he thought it would be worth the money and if the department could afford it.

Road and Bridge Office Manager Becky Wilson told the commissioners that the City of Norton has agreed to split the cost of picking excess sand along KQNK road after its chip seal project.

The cost is $2,100, she said, with the city pickup $1,050 and the county the other $1,050.

A sweeper is used to prepare the road and then sweep up the excess sand and gravel, which can cause breakage if vehicles go too fast and the tires throw the gravel up into others' windshields.

"Sound fair to me," Commissioner Posson said.

Commissioner Peterson also commended Ms. Wilson on the job she is doing in her work on the airport.
